PROBABLE THAT WATER BOARD WILL LAY PIPE TO YANTIC RIVER CROSSING

From what has filtered out from the recent conference between the common council and the water commissioners over the laying of the pipe line within the city limits for the Deep River reservoir, it is apparent that the desire of Mayor Waters to have all the pipe laying within the limits of the town of Norwich done by the water board is not to be imposed in its entirety upon that body.

It has been recognized, it is understood, that the work would cost considerably more if done by the water board than if it were let out by contract, but the mayor urged this ought to be disregarded because of local unemployment conditions. To have carried out his plan in full would have meant about 8 1-2 miles of pipe laying under the direction of the water board. This idea was subsequently modified by suggesting particular sections of the work which might be done by the water board, selecting those parts of the pipe line which presented the least difficulty and letting the rest out on contract.

This also was opposed by the water board, it is understood, and a compromise now seems to be the likely solution by which the water board will lay about 1 1-2 miles of pipe which will carry it to the point where it crosses the Yantic river. The remainder, northerly through Yantic to the town line at Fitchville would be let out by contract. The part to be laid by the water board runs through land which presents no particular difficulties in trench digging.

A shipment of 30 inch pipe has arrived at New London by a steamer from France and is to be brought to this city by lighters of the Merritt, Chapman and Scott corporation, as the channel in the Thames river is not wide or deep enough for the steamer to come to this city. This 30 inch pipe is the size that will be used from the Deep River reservoir dam in the town of Colchester to Fitchville, where the pipe is cut down to the 24 inch size.

FIRE FIGHTING EQUIPMENT FOR NORWICH STATE HOSPITAL

The Seagrave suburbanite pumper, recently secured for the Norwich state hospital, has passed the official underwriters' test which was conducted several days ago by W. H. Merchant of the New England Exchange of Boston. The apparatus exceeded the requirements by a good margin. The tests consisted of a continuous discharge at 120 pounds pressure at pump discharge, 350 gallons per minute and one-half hour at 200 pounds net pressure at pump discharge and one half hour 250 pounds net pressure at pump discharge 175 gallons.

The pumper is equipped with the Continental heavy duty type six-cylinder engine together with the Seagrave centrifugal pump capable of pumping 350 gallons per minute. There is also a forward suction so that the machine may be driven headon to the edge of a stream from which it can pump.

The hose body is 90 inches long, 46 inches wide, 32 inches high and has capacity of 3,000 feet of two and a half-inch double jacket hose. In the fire equipment is included a 20-foot extension ladder, a 12-foot roof ladder, a pike pole, pick head axe, a crowbar, two three-gallon fire extinguishers, two lanterns, a locomotive bell, two nozzle holders, an 80-gallon chemical tank, a 10-foot combination drafting and hydrant suction, six rubber buckets on the sides, an electric siren, an electric back-up light and a 10-foot collapsible ladder.

$80 MISSING IN GET-RICH-QUICK SCHEME

Acting on a "get rich quick" story told them by Sadie Brisco of No. 24 Baltic street, the local police are looking for two colored men and $80 which Sadie claims is hers. The woman met the two colored financiers Thursday afternoon and they started a conversation with her. During the conversation they confided to her that if she had any available funds they could quickly increase them materially.

On Union street the woman claims she handed $80 to the "financiers" This was about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. She was to meet them in the same place at 6.30 and they promised to return to her the sum of $250. The woman kept the appointment but the colored duo failed to show up with the $250. She waited around until 8 o'clock and then thought that perhaps it would be wise to enlist the aid of the police in recovering her $80. She told her story at police headquarters and the police immediately started on a search for the missing men and money. No clue as to the whereabouts of the financiers could be found.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 6—(AP)—Three negro employes of the Indianapolis federal building pleaded guilty to having violated the national prohibition law, when arraigned here today in connection with the disappearance of a portion of the Squibb liquor which had been under padlock.

Judge Robert Baltzell remanded the men to jail without bail to give them "a chance to think it over," declaring it to be his opinion that "some one else is implicated with you in this."

He did not announce when sentence would be passed. The men are Joseph Shores, watchman at the Federal building; Lander Dearson, janitor and William H Marshall, a fireman.

"It is my opinion some one else is implicated with you in this," Judge Baltzell said. "You are not helping yourselves or your families by shielding anyone else. I am going to give you a chance to think it over. This is one of the most scandalous things that has happened in Indiana."

CLASH IN THE HOUSE ON FARM LEGISLATION

WASHINGTON, May 6—(AP)—Resumption of debate in the house on farm relief legislation today brought a clash of opinions as advocates of the different plans discussed the problem, one of the most important and vexing faced at this session.

Operating under a rule which brings general debate to a close Saturday, the house held a session tonight to accommodate the many desiring to speak on the three pending bills, the Haugen price stabilization measure, the Tincher credit proposal, and the Curtis-Aswell national marketing plan.

The Curtis-Aswell bill was urged by Representative Aswell, of Louisiana, ranking democrat on the agriculture committee and co-author of the measure. He said its plan of handling each product separately could be compared to the way crafts were organized in the American Federation of Labor, while the scheme of the Haugen bill was "the one big union idea, backed by the I. W. W. and the communists."

The Haugen bill in the early stages of the debate today, was upheld by Representatives Adkins, republican, Illinois, and Rubey, democrat, Missouri, both members of the agriculture committee. They contended that it was the only plan that would relieve the distress of agriculture.

ONLY ONE WAY OPEN TO COMMISSION TO HOLD DEMPSEY-TUNNEY BOUT IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, May 6—(AP)—Only by declaring Jack Dempsey's heavyweight title vacated and elevating Harry Wills to championship recognition in default of the acceptance of the negro's long-standing challenge can the New York State Athletic commission open a way for Dempsey to battle Gene Tunney at the Yankee stadium in September. Otherwise Tex Rickard will be compelled to take the bout to his Jersey City arena, Boyle's Thirty Acres.

This somewhat startling pronouncement came today from George B. Brower, member of the commission, in outlining his suggestions for the solution of the present tangled heavyweight situation. Brower, it is conceded, holds the key to the situation because of the deadlock between his two associates, Chairman James A. Farley and Commissioner William Muldoon. Farley is insistent that Wills be given first call in a title battle while Muldoon has come out in support of Tunney.

So far as recognizing Wills as the leading challenger is concerned, Brower today definitely aligned himself with Farley, thus exploding previous assumption that he sided with Muldoon in favoring Rickard's program. At the same time, Brower sees no way by which the commission can force Rickard to match Dempsey with Wills instead of Tunney or discipline the promoter if he does not do so.

To hasten a solution of the problem, Brower may propose to the commission, either tomorrow or at its regular meeting next Tuesday, that Wills be declared the champion. This he explains, would be based on the failure of Dempsey to sign definitely for a bout with the negro and would follow procedure of the board in other championship divisions. Dempsey then would revert to the status of a "title contender" in the eyes of the commission. As such he would be free to fight Tunney here or elsewhere without occasioning interference by the boxing solons.

CASES OF MEASLES AT YALE ARE NOT SERIOUS

NEW HAVEN, May 6 (AP)—A check up here tonight by the Yale crew management revealed that only three men, one each in the varsity, the junior varsity and the freshmen boats, will be unable to row in the Pennsylvania-Columbia-Yale regatta at Derby on Saturday. It was learned that John Hay Whitney of New York city, number six in the junior varsity; Arthur L. Francisco of Greenport, L. I., stroke of the junior varsity; and Benjamin Brewster of Greenwich, Conn., stroke of the freshman crew, who were yesterday reported ill with German measles, were under observation only and they returned to their regular places in the boats today. M. H. Eddy of Middlebury, Vt., was also under observation.

The university health department reported that of the university population of 5,000, there were only 23 cases of German measles and that two of the men were ill at home. It was said that the disease was mild, usually causing no rise in temperature and incapacitating those ill for only two or three days.

The only crew members reported as unable to row on Saturday are Richard Durant of Hartford, number three in the varsity; William R. Clark, of Detroit, number three in the junior varsity; and Ralph D. Paine, Jr., of Durham, N. H., number five in the freshman crew.

GREEK SAMSON TO PERFORM FOR GREEK BENEFIT TONIGHT

Gust Leggis, the Greek Samson or Hercules, who has been making such a success with his marvelous feats of strength in New York and elsewhere, will give a benefit performance tonight at Olympic hall. Leggis besides being a strong man is a wrestler and boxer and has toured the country several times.

His marvelous strength enables him to perform feats that very few strong men in the world have ever equalled. One of his feature stunts is to hold a stone weighing between a half ton and 2,000 pounds on his chest and allow anyone to pound it with a sledge hammer. He also bends railroad spikes in his teeth and can take a bar of inch iron and bend it over his forearm. He comes of aristocratic Greek parentage and for a time after first coming to this country worked in the steel mills of Pennsylvania. It was here that his remarkable strength attracted attention. He would pick up heavy steel girders and without apparent effort carry them about the mill. In a recent test Leggis threw a 1400 pound rock a distance of 20 feet with his body. He says heavy but says that he did not build his strength as it was inherited from his father, who was a noted strong man.

AGGIE TRACK TEAM OFF FOR NEW HAMPSHIRE MEET

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., May 6.—The Connecticut Aggie track team of twenty-one men, accompanied by Coach S. J. Daly and Manager Donald Gaylord, will leave tomorrow morning for Durham, N. H., where they will meet the University of New Hampshire on Saturday in a dual track meet.

Connecticut's followers are not optimistic in doping the meet with the Granite Staters, as the Aggies have made a disappointing showing to date in track. Both Wesleyan and Rhode Island overwhelmed Connecticut in dual meets, and New Hampshire's strong team is expected to outscore the Nutmeggers.

The following members of the team will leave tomorrow morning for New Hampshire: Captain Quigley, Atwood, Kane, Brink, Smith, Gallant, Anderson, Rutherford, MacDonald, Hoadley, Hohn, Listo, Lundberg, Sullivan, Mell, Farwell, Gillette, Bitgood, Evans, Longo, Fienneman and Rowe.

Hoff Says He Will Not Compete

LOS ANGELES, May 6—(AP)—Charley Hoff, Norwegian pole vaulter, when informed of the decision of A. A. U. officials that he must compete in San Francisco Saturday or be barred from further competition in this country, reiterated late today that he would not appear at San Francisco. The reason, he said, was poor condition.

Later, however, he modified this statement, saying he would withhold his final decision until he has received official notification from the A. A. U.

Hoff worked out here during the day and returned tonight to his hotel at Pasadena. He is scheduled to appear here May 15, in conjunction with this section's A. A. U. championships, and his coming has been awaited with considerable interest by track fans.

A. A. U. REJECTS REQUEST OF HOFF AND SAYS HE MUST COMPETE AT FRISCO

NEW YORK, May 6—(AP)—Rejecting a request from Charley Hoff that he be permitted to cancel a scheduled appearance at San Francisco this Saturday, officials of the Amateur Athletic union today wired the Norwegian pole vaulter that he must adhere to his schedule or have cancelled his permit for further competition in this country.

Hoff, in a telegram sent from Pasadena, Calif., today notified the A. A. U. headquarters here that he was not in his best condition and required further rest before resuming competition. The A. A. U. however, informed the vaulting Viking that this was not sufficient reason for his withdrawal from the San Francisco meet.

"The Pacific association acted in good faith in arranging for your appearance," the message to Hoff read, "and your failure to compete would be an injustice to it. The foreign relations committee of the A. A. U. has voted unanimously to cancel your permit for further competition if you fail to compete at San Francisco."

Hoff, who has been quoted as saying he planned to carry out the rest of his schedule, will not be permitted to compete at Los Angeles May 15 if he fails to appear at San Francisco, according to word received by the A. A. U. from Robert S. Weaver, its Los Angeles representative.

Hoff was slated for other appearances in Chicago and Pittsburgh before competing at the National A. A. U. championships at Philadelphia in July.

CRAFT WITH STEEL FROM ANTWERP HAS REACHED NEW LONDON HARBOR

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 6—The British steamer Sekstant, arrived in port this morning from Bordeaux with a cargo of 1,954,000 pounds of piping. The craft came to an anchor in the lower harbor where the cargo is being transferred by lighters to the state pier, whence the steel will be forwarded by rail to Norwich. The steamer was boarded by the United States customs inspectors and Health Officer Benjamin Pennell a short time after she arrived here. The ship's papers were found to be correct and the health of the crew excellent. The arrival of the Sekstant with a foreign cargo is the first to occur at this port in several years.

YEOMAN EARL F. MOSHIER IS CAUGHT IN BALTIMORE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 6— Earl F. Moshier, 23, formerly yeoman at the United States coast guard academy here, is under arrest at Baltimore, he having been taken into custody yesterday afternoon charged with embezzlement from the federal government. He will be taken to New Haven within a few days where he will be tried in the United States district court. Raymond L. Bander, also a former coast guardsman, and wanted for complicity in the theft from the government, has not been apprehended.

Moshier as yeoman, handled practically all the mail matter received at the coast guard. He had knowledge that a coast guardsman, who had been recently transferred to another station was likely to receive a check for back pay and when a letter from the treasury department was received at the academy addressed to the man, Moshier, it is alleged, opened the envelope, found a check for $225 and took possession of it, instead of causing it to be forwarded to the owner. A few days later Mosher it is claimed, accompanied by Bander visited the store of Davis & Savard, State street, where Moshier purchased clothing of the value of $75 and tendered the check for payment. Moshier was given $150 and was told to return the following day when alteration to the clothing he had purchased would have been made. This Moshier did and before taking his purchase away he was requested to accompany a clerk to the academy, for the purpose of determining whether Moshier was in rightful possession of the check. Moshier agreed to the suggestion, but requested that the trip being deferred until later in the day because, he declared, that he was not attired in regulation uniform and he would be disciplined if he appeared before his superior officer in anything but proper uniform. Instead of returning to the Davis & Savard store he and Bander returned to the academy and gathering up their possessions, deserted. The following day it was discovered that Moshier had stolen the check and a search for him and Bander was made. Neither was located until yesterday when the Baltimore police, who had been requested to be on the lookout for the pair, located and arrested Moshier.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the operator's licenses of Albert Seltz, Federal street and John White, Amity street, suspended. Both drivers were found guilty recently of violation of the automobile laws.

Beatrice Harriman and Mabel Murphy, girls on parole from the Massachusetts School for Girls, Lancaster, Mass., who were taken into custody here yesterday charged with street walking, were taken back to Lancaster today when a parole officer came to this city for that purpose. The girls were recently paroled at the school and a short time afterwards came to New London where they started out to enjoy the companionship of sailors. This they were doing when arrested.

Frederick Shontell, 3 Schoolhouse lane, was arrested last night charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. He is being held a prisoner at the police station, pending being tried in the Waterford town court. Shontell was arrested by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh, Groton barracks, when driving the automobile in Waterford in such a manner as to endanger the life and limb of pedestrians or other autoists.

In the flotsam and jetsam that came from the sea to the police court today were two followers of the destinies of the tides. Owen Reilly, a coal shoveller for the Central Vermont railroad who depends on the carrgoes that come in vessels to the railroad, was found intoxicated on North Bank St., last night. He was taken into custody and provided with a bed in a cell in the station. Today he said he worked till 4.30 yesterday afternoon when he met a friend with a bottle and he took a drink. He said he only took one, but that had the "kick" in it and he floored him before he could get to his home. Judge Prince was merciful with Owen for the latter had not been before the court since mid-February, 1921. Judgment was suspended.

Ellis Walton, employed on a dredge, made his first appearance in the court for any offense today. He just took a few more than he could carry and went down and out. Officer Sheehan found him and took him "in" for safe keeping. He too was allowed his freedom on suspended judgment.

M. Salvagna sought to collect a bill that was owed to him, or that he represented was due him from Joe Ferrigno and sought the police as a collecting agency. Salvagna told a story of having lost clothing by theft, but when the facts came out, after the arrest of Joe, it was obvious that no theft had been committed—that the men had an agreement that called for the payment by Ferrigno of a stipulated sum on a suit of clothing. Prosecutor Hollandersky finally got the facts when he heard both men tell their stories; he then refused to pursue the complaint that Salvagna had made, and Ferrigno was discharged. The clothing was returned to the owner but his friendship with Joseph is at an end—cut off by the man accused. Attempts to collect claims through the police court is not a new experience, but none has yet succeeded.

The largest consignment of strawberries of the season reached the local market from the south today. They are fine looking fruit and came in pint boxes that were admired by all who saw them on the fruit stands of the city.

The death of Mrs. Julius Bates today at Lawrence hospital recalls the fact that the Bates family once owned that important section of the city known as Bates' woods, lying directly to the westward of the city's Hillside farm. John, Fred and Julius Bates were brothers and there was a sister, but only Fred survives. Their land at one time covered a wide acreage. Mrs. Bates was well past 60.

The fifteen months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur DiMaggio has had a hard fight for life thus early in his existence. The child was ill with measles and overcoming that disease he was stricken with pneumonia. He bids fair to cheat that malady, too, for his condition has improved very much in a couple of days.

The death of Miss Emily Douglass in this city today removes the last of a family that has been connected with the First Church of Christ during more than seventy years. Miss Douglass' brother, Courtland, was the sexton of the church many years and his father was employed in the same capacity before him. The family have been communicants of the church nearly four generations, so it is doubtful whether there is any member of the church that antedates them.

Warm weather has brought magnolia and dogwood trees into bloom during the past two days.

The few yachts in the Shaw's cove basin are preparing for commission. There was a time before the world war when there was a score of pleasure craft of the most pretentious sort sheltered in the cove every year and the fitting of them was an important source of revenue to many stores in this city. Now there are scarcely more than three or four vessels there.

Louis G. Holder, United States coast guard, and Miss Bernadine A. Whynott, this city, were married yesterday, afternoon, at the First Church of Christ by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth.

Walter Roberts, United States coast guard destroyer McCalla, Mrs. Harold Sargent, 2 Terrace avenue; Miss Fannie Doherty, Masonic street, and Mrs. Robert Brown, and infant son, Quaker Hill, patients at Lawrence-Memorial associated hospital, were discharged today.

Miss Emily L. Douglass, 79, died this morning at Smith Memorial home, where she had been a resident many years. Her death followed a lingering illness. Miss Douglass was born in New London and resided practically her entire life on Union street, close to the home where her death occurred today. She was a member of the First Church of Christ.

The funeral of Mrs. Martha Morgan Brewster, widow of William H. Brewster, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Randall, 10 Methodist street, the services being conducted by Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Mrs. Virginia Bates, 66, widow of Julius Bates, died at Lawrence hospital last night, having been under treatment at the institution but a short time. Mrs. Bates had been a resident at Hillside home some time and became ill a few weeks ago. When her condition did not improve, she was transferred to the hospital. She leaves no near relatives.

There is no change in the strike of carpenters and at present no settlement over the wage schedule is in sight. The journeymen hold meetings almost daily, but other than to briefly discuss the situation and to insist on holding out for their demand of $1.15 an hour, no new developments have occurred. Fifteen of the master carpenters, comprising those performing the major portion of the building in New London have signed an agreement whereby they have refused to pay the journeymen more than $1 an hour, the wage that has been paid the past year.

The body of Seatswain William Patterson, 18, United States coast guard, who was drowned in the Thames river yesterday afternoon while attempting to proceed by hand from the suspected rum-carrier, Admiral Schley to Patrol Boat 158, has not been found, but several crews of patrol boats are dragging the river day and night in an endeavor to recover the body. Throughout last night and today several boats were used in the dragging. Two craft dragged at the mouth of the harbor to a point opposite the former Groton Iron works and two more boats dragged from the Thames river bridge to the same point. If the body has not been carried to Long Island sound it will probably be recovered, but if the tide has swept the body to the sound there is no telling whether the body will ever be found.

OLD MYSTIC HUSBAND BEING HELD AT GROTON

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 6.—Elisha M. Davis, Old Mystic, was taken into custody at that place late this afternoon by the state police, Groton barracks, at the request of the Hartford police, who hold a warrant for Davis' apprehension on a charge of non-support. Davis was brought to the Groton police station, where he was locked up to await the arrival of a Hartford officer to take him back to that city for trial.

PROVIDENCE JOY-RIDERS ARRESTED IN STOLEN CAR

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 6.—Three Providence youths were arrested in Waterford this evening by Constables Frank Peabody and Charles Brigham when the youths were found in possession of a Ford automobile stolen in Providence. The boys, all under 17, were observed riding in the car by the officers and when the machine was held up it developed that it had been stolen. The lads were brought to New London and the boy driving the car was locked up and the others were turned over to Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield.

HARTFORD WOMAN SUFFERS HICCOUGHS FOR SIX WEEKS

HARTFORD, May 6.—(AP)—A woman patient at the Hartford hospital has been suffering from hiccoughs for six weeks. With the exception of relief for one week following an operation to relieve them she has hiccoughed constatly during that period.

The woman is Mrs. Genovi Darna, 38, of 509 Wethersfield avenue, mother of four children ranging between the ages of four and fourteen. She began to hiccough violently March 24 and continued hiccoughing until April 21 when she was operated upon at the Hartford hospital, to loosen adhesions of the diaphragm.

After the operation she stopped hiccoughing, but seven days later she resumed it. She hiccoughs so violently that she can be heard a considerable distance. She can obtain sleep only under the influence of an opiate.

In spite of the strain of hiccoughing her usual physical condition is said to be good and her outlook very cheerful. Within the last year she has undergone four major operations. She is the wife of Armana Darna, manager of an Asylum street restaurant.

Mrs. Anelnetta Gobatto, 45, at Jersey City, was awarded $27,500 damages by a Jury in circuit court from Harry Ruvvo, a former embroidery manufacturer, who admitted he burned the women's face with acid last October 13, after which he shot himself.

Breed Theatre.

Thrill-lovers will get the treat of their lives in "The Best Bad Man," Fox Films western starring the intrepid Tom Mix, now at the Breed theatre. In this exciting screen play, adapted from the novel by Max Brand, Mix does some of the hardest riding of his career and then, in some water sequences, he proves that he is one of the best swimmers now appearing on the silversheet.

Tony, famous stunt horse, is called upon to do some of the most daring work of his equine career. One episode in particular is hair-raising but Tony never falters. Cast with Mix are Clara Bow, Judy King, Paul Panzer, Cyril Chadwick, Frank Beal, Tom Kennedy, Buster Gardner, Tom Wilson and others.

Broadway Theatre

The greatest double feature program that has ever been exhibited in a local theatre will be seen Sunday night only at the Broadway theatre all at regular Sunday prices of 25c. We advise early attendance.

The Broadway theatre, commencing Sunday will show one of the funniest and most farcical pictures ever filmed, "What Happened to Jones," the latest Universal-Jewel production, as the first feature.

That popular favorite, Reginald Denny, portrays the title role and the star quite lives up to his reputation as a farceur of the first water. While the picture is a photoplay version of George Broadhurst's famous stage play of the same name, it might literally have been written for the Universal star. It is a real Denny story.

The second feature is one of thrills galore.

A shot in the dark. The Tombs.

A girl pickpocket. The cashier of a small town bank. Love, but afraid of her past.

The released cracksman an employee of the bank—the bank looted.

The innocent country girl ensnared by the underworld sheik.

Unmasked.

The girl in the grip of the rapids above the falls—Could anyone find his way out of such an extraordinary series of situations as Tom Moore finds himself in the latest Encore Picture. "Under the Range," with Eileen Percy, also featured.

Broadway Theatre

Five real fine acts of Keith-Albee vaudeville made an apeparance at Broadway theatre and greatly pleased the large crowds.

Anita Salis in "Artistic Paintings" showed real skill with brush and paint wherein splendid pictures resulted.

Ryan & Leonora in "After the Game," offered lively comedy chatter and songs, sending them off with much applause.

The three jolly minstrel boys, Elkins, Fay & Elkins, who have just returned from a tour of the music halls of England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and France, offer again the vaudeville patrons of Norwich their ever popular offering of mirth and melody.

Davis & Vera, are two clever comedians, who kept the audience laughing for fifteen minutes.

The Dancing Franks in A Revue of Steps with Beatrice Lewis closed the attractive program with a diversified offering of steps.

Love, thrills and comedy stage a hard race for honors in "The Arizona Sweepstakes," Universal-Jewel production now being screened at the Broadway theatre. Hoot Gibson, the popular western screen star, handles them all in splendid fashion, assisted by Helen Lynch, Philo McCullough, Kate Price, George Over, Billy Schaefer, Turner Savage, Jackie Morgan, Emmett King and Tod Morgan. "The Arizona Sweepstakes" was directed by Clifford Smith.

Palace Theatre

Luster Bros., open the bill of vaudeville at the Palace for the last half of this week. They are two clever boys and do a wizard of a contortion act, if they break their necks it will be their own fault. Margie Carson does a singing act that is just full of brilliancy. Dale and Delaine have a surprise act which would be unfair to tell about. Helene Smiles Davis and Bob Nelson are number four and end over big with a crossfire comedy act. Closing the bill are Denno Sisters and Thiebault in the greatest, latest, most wonderful tap dancing act ever presented on any vaudeville stage.

"Satan in Sables," the Warner Bros. classic of the screen which opened yesterday at the Palace theatre, with Lowell Sherman star rôle, gives him one of the best roles in that or Michael Lyev Yervedoff, a Russian prince. He plays a gentlemanly profligate, a dissolute by lovable spendthrift, cursed with boundless power and limitless wealth, whose soul is ultimately tempered and regenerated in the white heat of pure love, colossal sorrow and thwarted revenge. It is the type of characterization in which Sherman stands out above all others in the screen and on the Broadway stage, where he has been one of the reigning favorites for years.

Bradley King's story of dramatic loves and hates has been perfectly directed by James Flood, with one of the finest casts of the season in support of Mr. Sherman.

Pauline Garon, as Collette, gives a remarkable performance in the role of a Parisian gamine, who comes into the life of Prince Michael to change its entire course.

Young John Harron, as the prince's brother, is excellent in his unsophistication and tragic disillustonment.

Opening of Hilltop Casino

Dance lovers of eastern Connecticut will learn with pleasure that the grand opening of Hilltop Casino takes place this (Friday) evening and with the same popular orchestra which has made this casino a leader, handling the musical numbers. Thumm's Hilltop Casino orchestra needs no introduction to dance lovers as it has established a name for itself in its radio, theatre and performances at such big dances as that of Chi Psi fraternity ball at Middlebury college and numerous others. Thumm's Hilltop Casino orchestra has also been booked to return to Middlebury college for the senior prom.

Hilltop Casino has been renovated for the opening, the redecorating work making it most attractive. Cars leave for Taftville and Norwich after the dance and plenty of parking space is afforded for automobile parties.

Included in the opening dance numbers are such popular hits as Horses, Sweet Child, Lonesome and Sorry, Could I, I Certainly Could, Girl in Your Arms and Sailors Sweetheart.

Dancing is from 8.30 to midnight, daylight saving time.

Strand Theatre

Lon Chaney was wonderful in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," but his successor to the Victor Hugo classic shows him in a far more thrilling, and far more mysterious role. "The Phantom of the Opera," Universal's spectacular new superfeature, presents the prince of character actors as the prince of thrills—and thrills he furnishes aplenty.

They are thrills set in spectacle—huge fetes in a great opera house, with thousands of people in kaliedoscopic garb—a great opera and ballet produced on a huge stage — background for the machinations of the grim figure that is the center of the story—all photographed in original mulor.

The production is big—gorgeous—and gripping in its realistic amazement. It is Lon Chaney at his best in a production such as he has never been given before.

Mary Philbin, heroine of "Merry Go Round," has a vehicle that is just as appealing, and far more dramatic, in the role of the opera singer who has to choose between her strange lover, half man and half devil, and the life of almost a whole city. Norman Kerry, who played with her in her original triumph, is seen at her side again, in Rupert Julian's masterly production of the famous Gaston Leroux novel.

It can be seen today and Saturday at the Strand theatre, after which it leaves Norwich never to return again. Several shorts are also on the program. Music by ladies' orchestra.

Quaker Oats.

Marooned in the frozen wastes far up within the Arctic circle, Captain Raold Amundsen's Polar exploring party for a month was confronted with the necessity of conserving rations, yet supplying men with energy for hard work, to dig their airplane out of the ice. The doughty explorer tells of it:

"Each man had three oatmeal crackers in the morning. At noon he had a bowl of soup. At night he had three more oatmeal crackers."

Two-thirds of their daily rations, oatmeal. And they won out.

Away down, south, a short distance from the equator, two American oil geologists, exploring in Venezuela and knowing they must subsist largely on boiled food, made their principal supply oatmeal. Native helpers paid little attention to their scientific instruments and less to their different clothing.

But, explains Chester T. Crowell, writing in the Saturday Evening Post, one item among the strangers' numerous possessions excited their cupidity. He tells of it thus:

"That item was the oatmeal. Its flavor pleased the natives and they discussed other qualities of this exotic food that suggested its more general use in their territory. For instance, its light weight. One man could carry on his back an enormous quantity of potential breakfasts. Packed as it was in air-tight cartons, the oatmeal would keep.

"One bowl of it, they found, would fortify a man against many hours of heavy toil. They not only could afford to buy it, but would actually save money in doing so. They took the matter up with their merchants. Today it is a staple food for thousands of people in that remote part of Venezuela.

"However, they do not call it oatmeal. Their name for it is the trade name on the package. Oatmeal in bulk, or even another brand, wouldn't do at all. The American goods hold the market unchallenged because they have been demonstrated.

In the frozen polar regions where anything that will give energy is seized upon; in the tropical torrid zone where this same needed energy must come from simplest preparations—it becomes a matter of interest that Quaker Oats have become a recognized stand-by in the day's menu.

Several millions American Breakfasts tomorrow morning will include the same food, yet that will not excite interest. It is the custom of civilization, found in the remote places, that seems unusual.

While we regret exceedingly that our 64 years of business history should be marred by this catastrophe we cannot help but realize, when we think of its tremendous scope, what extraordinary buying opportunities it makes possible. The fire, with its resulting damage, played no favorites, affecting some of every kind of merchandise in the store. That which was badly harmed we have disposed of but there remains an immense assortment of miscellaneous merchandise including furniture, pianos, victrolas, musical instruments, rugs and other floor coverings, art goods, mirrors, pictures, statuary, jewelry, cameras, lamps, house furnishings, etc., which must be disposed of at tremendous price sacrifices. Some of this merchandise is not damaged to any extent but no matter how little it may be affected we cannot return it to regular stock nor offer it at regular prices. So in accordance with our strict policy of having on our floors only the newest and finest quality merchandise we must clear our floors of this damaged merchandise as quickly as possible without regard to its cost, value or selling price. Be one of the thousands who will be here to seize these opportunities—opportunities you will not see again in a lifetime.

Mothers Look for the Quaker's picture when buying oats.

That means richer flavor

WHEN children say they don't like oats, it's usually because rich Quaker flavor is missing.

Children who ordinarily don't take to oats are often quickly won to this important food, simply by giving them "Quakers."

The flavor is uniquely different; toasty, rich and creamy. Quaker Oats alone has it. Some 30 years were spent in perfecting it.

Quaker millers, too, retain much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed. Thus protein, carbohydrates and vitamines and "bulk" combine in making Quaker Oats an excellently balanced ration.

Mister Smarty Is Very Humble

'Tis seldom that you hear the humble
Complain of anything, or grumble.
—Old Mother Nature.

Have you ever noticed this? The truly humble are seldom grumblers This is because they have learned a great lesson. The truly humble are as a rule those who once were vain and haughty and pround, but have learned a great lesson.

Little Mister Smarty, the young Grouse who had thought he knew it

He was always at her heels doing exactly as she did all, had first nearly been caught by Sharp Shin the Hawk, one of his very worst enemies, and then had been caught by Farmer Brown's Boy, whom he supposed to be an enemy at the time. And in both cases he had suffered a terrible fright and he had known that it was all his own fault.

That night, when little Mister Smarty went to roost, he didn't go to sleep right away. He thought over all that had happened that day. "If," said he to himself, "I had taken the warning of Mother Grouse in the first place, and had flown up into the trees as I should, that dreadful Hawk wouldn't have frightened me so. If he hadn't frightened me so, I wouldn't have driven that little stick through my wing. If I hadn't driven that little stick through my wing, that two-legged creature wouldn't have caught me. I can plainly see it was all my own fault. Hereafter I will mind instantly."

So, from being the greatest worry that his mother had, little Mister Smarty became the most obedient of the ten children. The dreadful fright he had taught him a lesson, and he was smart enough to profit by that lesson. He was a changed young Grouse. Mister Smarty didn't fit him as a name any more. As a matter of fact he soon became the smartest of the flock. But he never showed off. Every time that he did a smart thing and knew he had done a smart thing and was tempted to show off, he would remember the time he had thought he was so smart, but wasn't. At once he would become very humble.

He got to thinking this thing over one day. "It's queer," thought he, "but my brothers and sisters seem to like me better than they used to. Yes, sir, they do so. I don't know just why they do, but they do. After all, it is a great deal nicer to have people like you—really like you—than just to admire you because you are smart. My, it is surprising how much there is to learn in this world. If ever I know as much as my mother I shall be entirely satisfied. Yet I used to think that I knew more than she did. I used to think she couldn't tell me anything. Now I know better. I know that there is something to learn every day, and the ones who do not learn are not the ones who are going to live the longest."

Now this shows that little Mister Smarty really was smart. From the time he started out in the morning to hunt for his breakfast with his brothers and sisters until he went to bed at night he was busy every minute learning something. He noticed just how his mother was continually listening. So, as he watched her, he would continually listen. In this way he soon learned what different sounds meant. He soon learned to tell when a sound was suspicious. He soon learned to pay no attention whatever to harmless sounds. He watched his mother and copied her movements. He was always at her heels, doing exactly as she did. Many times he did things that she did without having the least idea why they were done. But after a while he began to understand some of these things. So it was that after a time Mister Smarty once more deserved his name, only with a different meaning. First he had been called Mister Smarty because he thought he knew it all. Now the name fitted him because he was truly smart. Yet he never showed this smartness off. He never appeared to think he was any smarter than his brothers and sisters. This is because he was humble as well as smart.

THE FARM-MINDED MAN

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Commenting on the census disclosure that there are 479,000 less people living on farms this year than last year, The Toledo Blade remarks.

"They have given up tranquility for the hurly-burly; exchanged the cloverfields for the odor of burnt gasoline; traded the morning song of the birds for the raucous notes of the 5 o'clock whistle; bartered the purple rim of the world for a canopy of bituminous smoke." Is sat so?

I'll bet a last year's bird's nest against a 1914 flivver,—and any dealer in used cars will tell you that's an even bet,—that the editorial gent who wrote that never tried to manage a farm of his own; fed his own hogs and bull calves; dried his own clover between semi-daily thunder-showers; woke to the morning rawp of the thrush (mis-called robin,) and the cacophonous squawk of the blue jay; watched "the purple rim of the world" with panicky eyes lest the storm-scud sweeping over it should catch him and his crops unawares.

I'll even bet that he never weeded an onion bed where every attempt to pull one weed uncooted a dozen promising young onions, where his knees blistered as he crawled and his hands swelled to shapeless stuffs and the swarming gnats enveloped his sweating face, buzzing, biting, and dodging.

This attempt to make out that everything's fun in the country tends to provoke envy on the part of the city's "tired business men," and to endanger contemptuous laughter on the part of the farmer who knows. It leads the former, sometimes, to jump out of his admittedly uncomfortable frying-pan into an even hotter fire. And it begets in the real countryman a doubt of everything else he sees in print.

Personally, I'm a confirmed countryman. I was born into it on a howling December night when the snow was drifting and the winds were shaking the old house and the thermometer was flirting with the zero mark. I've summered and wintered it, as the saying goes. I've heard my fruit trees groan and finally split with a crack in a 4-below-zero temperature, and I've sweated in the hayfield under the rays of a perpendicular sun that sent the same thermometer to 103 above zero. I think I may claim to have felt in my own person pretty nearly everything of discomfort rural living can give. I've also had my reasonable share of its comforts and pleasures. And, taking things as they come, "by and large" I'm the country for me every time, summer or winter, hot or cold, wet or dry, with or without.

But when some fictionist who couldn't tell the business end of a hoe from the handle of a pitchfork writes about some city man's trip "Back to Eden," meaning thereby back to the farm, or, when some gushy person whose experiences of the country have been gained from a two weeks' vacation in some favored nook during the good old summer-time writes about rural "tranquility" and sweet clover and the "purple rim o' the world,"—there's the time that I feel like standing right up on my hind-legs and yelling "Blah!"

This assumption that any man can go "back to Eden" by returning to the farm is quite on the par with the belief that one can find a pot of gold under the end of the rainbow. Nobody has ever yet managed to get to the end of that rainbow. It recedes exactly as fast as he pursues. Likewise, if there ever was an Eden on earth, it's position and boundaries have long been utterly lost. There's no such garden, now.

There's simply no sense in disputing over the comparative merits of civic and rural living. There are arguments for both; there are arguments against both. The town-country debate is no more effective or resultful than the squabble over prohibition or daylight saying or fundamento-modernism or any other opinionated crotchet about which men and women quarrel. The more we talk the less we get anywhere.

You see, some of us were born country-minded,—farm-minded, if you prefer that phrase; and some of us were born city-minded. Just as one puppy is born a Pekinese and one is born a collie. Try as hard as you may, you'll never make a prize sheep dog out of the Pekinese, nor a contented lap-dog out of the collie. And it's a sorry waste of good breath to dispute over which is the most worth while dog. The owner thinks his is, no matter which he owns. Nor all the king's horses nor all the king's men can make him think any differently.

Our Toledo text-supplier professes not to worry over the diminution in the number of farmers. He optimistically opines that the tide will turn, some day, and, when that days comes, there'll be as big a rush for the country from the cities as there now is towards the cities from the country. He goes on:

"Recently the prediction was made that within the next 25 years a heavy drift of population away from congested metropolitan centers will take place. This prophecy is based on the added comforts electricity will bring to rural and suburban communities. This does not necessarily mean more farmers, but it means more populous country places, happier social surroundings and a greater appreciation of natural beauty."

Well, perhaps. And then again, perhaps not. Prophesying is not difficult nor risky, so long as the prophet isn't held responsible for the actualization of his prophecies. If every weather prophet, for instance, had to lose his job and take a cross-country outing in tar and feathers astride a three-cornered fence-rail every time his forecast failed, it is probable that there'd be no weather predictions, either from Washington or from Uncle Eb of Squedunk Flats for lo, these many future seasons.

So in regard to this matter of ebb and flow between country and city. "What goes up must come down," is an old saying. "There's no lane without a turning," is another. "If winter comes, shall spring be far behind?" asks the poet. Human history, so far back as we can trace it, seems to have been simply a see-saw. First one end of the plank goes up carrying its rider. Then it drops back and the fellow at the other end goes up.

Assuming that the future will be about like the past in its general trends and tendencies, it seems a more than usually safe prediction that the present movement to the city will, some time or other, reverse itself and become a flow to the country. Let it go, at that.

But, if it comes, let us hope, for the sake of the race's future, that it won't be for any such reason as that suggested in the quotation.

The plain intimation of this is that the extension of what are called "city conveniences" into the country wilds will eventually tempt to those wilds people who are dependent for happiness upon such "city conveniences." That is, the country will be over-run by people who find themselves able to transform it into a more or less successful imitation of the city.

Heaven forbid!

"For east is east, and west is west, and never the two shall meet." The man who was born to live in the country wants all the "country conveniences" he can afford. There's all the difference between "country conveniences" and "city conveniences" that there is between east and west. Sometimes, of course, they may overlap, as in the case of electric lights and telephones, both of which are more properly classed as "country" than as "city" conveniences. But in the large sense many things which are considered by city residents almost essential to life would be pesky nuisances if imported into the country.

The really farm-minded man doesn't care a hoot for Hart, Schafner and Marx clothes. But he wants boots that will not leak and overalls that won't rip under the first strain. He's a deal more interested in the grass on his meadows than in the movies. He's fonder of corned beef and cabbage than of caviar and shrimp salad. He'd rather raise and show a blue-ribbon Jersey than a whole kennelful of Fifi doggies. He doesn't want to be done up in cotton wool and kept in a case. He welcomes a reasonable amount of hardship, knowing that only by enduring hardness can he attain hardihood. He doesn't consider it the greatest object of life to avoid work. In fact, he is fairly sure to grow lonesome and "down in the mouth" if he can't work. He would actually rather be hard-handed and sofe-hearted than soft-handed and hard-hearted.

Above all things, he simply hates and abominates being mollycoddled. Which is why he finds a certain fierce joy in his daily campaigns with Step-mother Nature, who never mollycoddles him. Like Samson, he delights in getting meat out of the eater and sweetness out of the strong. Like Scott's Fitz James, he knows

"The stern joy that warriors feel
In foemen worthy of their steel."

It will be a sad day for the nation when the race of such men is displaced in their own rural fastnesses by city-minded invaders bringing with them into the country their quibus, tastes and indulgences.

For better country life we may all pray and work. But that better country life does not mean the importation of exotic city growths nor an aping imitation of city customs.

It means development along its own distinctive lines.

A country "rube" is no more out of place on Broadway than a city "dude" on Hardscrabble.

BANDIT SHOT BY BANK MANAGER WHO NEVER BEFORE HAD FIRED A REVOLVER

BOSTON, May 6.—(AP)—Lawrence S. Bearse a bank manager who had never before fired a revolver, today shot down and probably fatally wounded a robber who had held up the Upham's corner branch of the First National Bank. George Mastoris of Boston had obtained $5400 from a teller when the interior of the bank was changed to an inferno of barking pistols and flying lead, as bank employes and a policeman engaged him in a gun battle.

More than 20 shots were fired before Bearse shot Mastoris in the head as he crawled from behind a barricade, carrying his loot toward the door.

A score of employes and half a dozen customers were in the bank as Mastoris entered, flourishing a pistol and shouted, "Everybody hold up your hands. I haven't shot a man for five years. I want some money. You can't get it working."

He fired two shots and went to the cage of the receiving teller where he forced Duglas C. Campbell to push the money through the grill work. But when he sought to obtain a bag containing money another substituted an empty bag.

As he turned, Bearse opened fire from his desk at the other side of the room. He and the bandit exchanged shots. As the gun man dropped to the floor unhurt, using the marble tables on the middle of the floor as a barriace, Joseph MacLellan, another teller, fired at him six times.

The robber was crawling toward the door, hidden from Bearse as a traffic officer reached the door. The latter fired four shots through the glass doors. Mastoris returned his fire but fell with a bullet through his left foot. The traffic officer fired his pistol twice outside to summon help and reloaded his gun while the gunman lay on the floor reloading his weapon. Again he started forward and as he came in view, Bearse shot him in the head.

Just as he fired, the police wagon arrived. Mastoris was taken to City Hospital where he was in a serious condition.

PAWCATUCK SEEKING TO ELIMINATE GRADE CROSSING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 6—President Frank L. Furness presided at the special meeting of the Pawcatuck board of trade held this evening at the Elm Tree Inn, to consider action necessary to secure the extension of Moss street, Pawcatuck, under the New Haven railroad embankment, to eventually join lower Mechanic street. The action was hastened by the fact that excavation is being made near the point in the railroad bank, about 30 feet wide at the top and tapering to a six foot width for the installation of a large surface water drain 25 feet below the surface. The property about the point was formerly owned by Benjamin Burdick and is now the property of the Lorraine Manufacturing company. The point where the work is being done is about 200 feet north of Burdick Lane, a railroad grade crossing. It is hoped to arrange for the exchange of that highway with the Lorraine company property and at the same time to secure for the railroad the elimination of the grade crossing, which a Connecticut law now demands and where it would be aon expensive engineering for the railroad company. At the same time desirable building sites would be given an outlet on Mechanic street.

On motion of Alberti R. Stillman, seconded by Judge William A. Wilcox, the president named the following committe to take the matter up with the railroad authorities at New London and New Haven: A. R. Stillman, Howard M. Barber, William A. Wilcox, L. C. Purtill, L. L. Foster, President Furness, ex-officio and Stonington town selectmen, John Fribance, Arthur F. Babcock and Joseph Vargas.

President Furness will visit New London Friday to interview Supt. R. M. Smith of the railroad division, other officials and if necessary go to New Haven to arrange for the railroad officials to visit Pawcatuck at the earliest date to confer with the committee named to secure the desired underpass.

Miss Grace D. Wheeler, who has written an interesting story on the trail is to be the guide and F. Stewart Green was named chairman of the committee on arrangements.

On the matter of placing markers on old buildings referred to the society by the chamber of commerce, President Whipple was named the chairman of the committee to make the selections and have charge. It is voted for the society to look up the motion picture, Chronicles of America, for presentation.

MISSING GIRL WAS FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN CLOST

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 6.—(AP)—Catherine Hickey, 15 year old high school sophomore missing since last Saturday, was found unconscious in a closet of her home today and was rushed to a hospital. Police believed she had hidden to escape a scolding for her automobile ride with two boys.

An organized search which included the draining of a mill canal had been in progress since the child disappeared. She went for a ride Saturday evening with Raymond Croan, Clifton Marks and Rose Day. When they returned the boys told the city marshal earlier this week, Catherine said she did not want t obe taken t oher home in East Rochester for fear her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hickey, might hear the car in front of the house. The others left her at a school building nearby, and no one saw her again until today when her unconscious form was dragged from behind a trunk in the closet.

ACID STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Sufferers From Indigestion or Stomach Trouble CUT THIS OUT

"Stomach trouble, dyspepsia, indigestion, sourness, gas, heartburn, food fermentation, etc., are caused nine times in ten by chronic acid stomach," says a well known authority.

Burning hydrochloric acid develops in the stomach at an alarming rate. The acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining and often leads to gastritis accompanied by dangerous stomach ulcers. Don't dose an acid stomach with pepsin or artificial digestents that only give temporary relief from pain by driving the sour, fermenting food out of the stomach into the intestines.

Instead, neutralize or sweeten your acid stomach after meals with a little hot water and Bisurated Magnesia and not only will the pain vanish but your meals will digest naturally. There is nothing better than Bisurated Magnesia, to sweeten and settle an acid stomach. It soaks up the harmful excess acid much as a sponge or blotting paper might and your stomach acts and feels fine in just a few minutes. Bisurated Magnesia can be obtained from any reliable druggist in either powder or tablet form. It is safe, reliable, easy and pleasant to use, is not a laxative and is not at all expensive.

Piles Disappear

No Cutting or Salves Needed

External treatments seldom cure Piles.

Nor do surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send a fresh current through stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method. Ointments and cutting won't do it.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at Lee & Osgood Co., who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

Smith Winner Over Senator McKinley in G. O. P. Race

Col. Frank L. Smith was nominated for United States Senator by a majority well over 100,000 votes over William B. McKinley, who was seeking renomination on the Republican ticket for United States Senator. He will oppose George E. Brennan, Democrat, next November for the United States Senatorship from Illinois. Colonel Smith, who is chairman of the Republican State Committee, and of the Illinois Commerce Commission, based his campaign on opposition to the World Court, which Senator McKinley favored, and thus gave voters their first opportunity to express approval or disapproval of this issue, since the Senate voted adherence to the Court.

WESTERLY

FAY AND ARNT WILL BE SENTENCED AT PROVIDENCE

WESTERLY, R. I., May 6—Superior court for Washington county, Associate Justice Antonio A. Capotosto on the bench entered upon the fourth day of the consideration of the Westerly trial calendar on Thursday morning. Upon the close of the Berkeley-Blanda damage case, the jury was excused and on Thursday morning all jurymen reported for duty again. The action at law, Edward A. Greene vs. William H. Northrup, was given special assignment for Monday next at Westerly.

For consideration Thursday morning the action at law, Earl W. Barber vs. A. L. Castritius company and the cross case, The A. L. Castritius company vs. Earl W. Barber, were taken up to be tried as one. Barber was represented by Rathbun and Harris and Castritius by Attorney Rocha.

The jury was empanelled to try this case as follows:

Louis H. Hall, Hopkinton; Albert G. C. Brewer, Exeter; John H. Carpenter, Narragansett; Antonio Nardone, Westerly; Roger W. Thomas, North Kingstown; Charles M. Tallman, North Kingstown; Clarence A. Church, Charlestown; Warren A. Tucker, Hopkinton; Rensselaer S. Palmer, Hopkinton; Ray L. Oakley, Richmond; Clement Tallon, Westerly; and George F. Luth, North Kingstown. Roger W. Thomas of North Kingstown was named foreman.

Third Assistant Attorney General Louis V. Jackvony appeared in court before Judge Capotosto to ask that the cases against Thomas Fay of 44 Collum street, Philadelphia; William Arnt of 7829 Fig street, New Orleans, be transferred to Providence for Saturday next. As the seven day period for notice of appeal had passed orders were issued for their appearance on Saturday next in Providence to receive sentence.

Frank Terranova was also brought into court, and State's Attorney Jackvony told the court that on May 6, 1925, the man appeared before Judge Blodgett at the session of Kent county superior court and at the time sentence was suspended for assault with a dangerous weapon, upon the condition that he leave the state. This agreement was not kept as the man was working at Narragansett, when taken into custody on a capias. Mr. Jackvony asked that Terranova be held without bail and the assault case with suspended sentence and also the indictment be cited to Providence county to be taken up there on Saturday next. Judge Capotosto granted this motion.

A settlement out of court was reported in the case of Main vs. Miner. The plaintiff, Oscar H. Main, a deputy sheriff of Norwich, had an executor's sale in Norwich Thursday morning and could not appear. Judge Capotosto directed that all possible effort be made to settle out of court.

The case is claimed to have grown out of the purchase of five cows by Miner from the plaintiff, who is the Norwich jailer, and has a farm. It is claimed that the cows were left at Main's place for a period of time and eight one of them died.

With the jury empanelled trial proceeded in the case of Castritius-Barber suits, in which A. L. Castritius, president and general manager of the Castritius company sued to collect a balance of $100.05 due on a saxophone purchased on Feb. 15, 1924, for $152.25 by Earl William Barber of East avenue, Westerly. It was represented that $52.20 had been paid running through several months, on a partial payment contract signed by the young man aged 19 and who then returned the saxophone, having it left in the Castritius store. It was shown that the Castritius company refused to receive the instrument back and the cross suits resulted, one to collect the balance due and the other to collect the moneys already paid on account.

Spare jurors were excused to report next Monday morning at 10.45 o'clock, and all other cases were continued until that time.

The May meeting of Phebe Green Ward chapter, D. A. R. was presided over by Westerly Regent Mrs. Carrie Eddy Savage on Thursday afternoon at the home of the hostess, Mrs. Hobart Saunders, 14 Spruce street.

1,400 PULLETS AT STORRS LAID 5,712 EGGS IN WEEK

Egg production for the Storrs egg laying contest flock showed a decided upward trend during the 16th week, with the 1400 pullets shelling out a total of 5,712 eggs, or slightly over 40 per cent. This is a gain of 548 eggs over the production for last week, and a gain of 55 eggs when compared with the production for the corresponding week a year ago. The total production through the 16 weeks is 110,898 eggs, or an average of 79 eggs per bird.

Rhode Island Reds and Barred Rocks took all four honor roll positions this week, with the high record being made by an entry of Reds. These were the pullets owned by Fabry Bros. of East McKeesport, Pa., and their score was 61 eggs. Next came another pen of Reds, the entry of Robert B. Parkhurst of Boxford, Mass., and his pen laid 60 eggs. A Massachusetts pen of Rocks entered by Harlan W. Kimball from Northboro, followed close behind for third place with a lay of 57 eggs. Fourth place was taken by the Rhode Island Reds owned by L. T. Whitney, from Weare, New Hampshire, with a production of 56 eggs.

Each of the principal varieties in the contest increased their production during the week, and the Reds and Barred Rocks are at the top of the heap with a lay of 62 per cent each. Leghorns and White Wyandottes come next with a production that is slightly over 56 per cent, and the "All Other Varieties" class is last with a lay of approximately 56 per cent.

John Z. LaBelle's Reds from Ballouville, Conn., are still leading the entire contest in total production, and their record through the 16th week is 1281 eggs. These birds have slackened their rate of lay, however, and perhaps the Toivonen Farm Leghorns from Girard, Pa., at present second high pen, will be able to cut down the lead held by the Connecticut Reds. This week the Girard birds laid ten more eggs than LaBelle's, which are at present enjoying a clear lead of 127 eggs. In the White Leghorn class, the entry of R. W. Colman, from Medina, N. Y., went up into fourth position, displacing the entry of the Marquis Poultry farm from Toms River, N. J.

STOCK MARKET DULL

NEW YORK, May 6—(AP)—Trading in stocks was practically at a standstill today, but the undertone continued firm. Total sales fell below 600,000 shares, the smallest of any full session since the middle of October, 1924. Commission houses were virtually deserted, sporadic outbursts of activity in special issues representing the operations of professional traders. The market appeared to be awaiting a decisive turn in the British strike situation. Opinions as to the outcome abroad differed widely, but in the absence of any weakness in the London market, there was little disposition on the part of speculators for the decline to sell stocks here, particularly in view of the fact that the short interest, judging from the number of stocks loaning "flat" and at a premium, already was of rather substantial proportions. Neither was there any widespread desire to buy stocks until the effect of the strike on American business could be more clearly defined.

A sudden advance in cotton prices, probably inspired by reports of a damaging rainstorm in the Corpus Christi district of Texas, was one of the outstanding features of the day's markets. Other commodities showed little change. More stability also was apparent in the foreign exchange market with the decline in French and Belgian francs checked, at least temporarily.

Steel shares received good buying support on reports that mill operations were still around 90 per cent. of capacity although predictions were heard that the unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation for April, to be published next week would show a shrinkage of around 375,000 tons because of the wide spread between production and new business. Special strength of Sloss-Sheffield, which jumped over 5 points to 121, was based on the belief that the company would benefit by the curtailment of pig iron shipments from Great Britain to this country. United States Steel common closed a point higher at 122 3-4.

Various rumors were heard in connection with the activity in the public utility issues, including predictions of an early supreme court decision on the $1 gas law, and a merger of large holding companies. Net gains of 1 to 2 points were scored by about a dozen issues including Brooklyn Union Gas, Consolidated Gas, Detroit Edison, People's Gas and Philadelphia company.

Colorado Fuel, the Commercial Solvents issues, International Telephone, Radio Corporation and United States Distributing also showed impressive strength, selling 2 to nearly 4 points higher. Fresh weakness cropped out in the American Woolen issues, the common touching 23 3-8, the lowest since 1915.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent., and held steady at that figure all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. Demand sterling ruled slightly firmer around $4.86 13-16 and French francs around 3.14 cents. Belgian francs broke again below three cents in the early trading but rallied later to around 3.06. Other changes were nominal.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, May 6—(AP)—Serious crop damage reported both from Kansas and from spring wheat territory today tended to bring about higher prices in the wheat market here. Closing quotations on wheat were firm at 1-8 to 5/8c net advance. May, (new) $1.59 5-8 to 1.59 3-4 and July 1.39 7-8 to 1.40, with corn 1-8c to 3-4c off, oats showing an equal decline and provisions 15 to 65 cents up.

Kansas reports of wheat crop injury were given special attention, being in striking contrast with recent optimistic advices from that state. A leading authority sent word that from Hays, Kansas, to Great Bend, Kansas, the wheat crop has gone about the limit of endurance, that some fields are brown and dry, and that irreparable damage has been done, the results of drought, wind and dust.

Favorable weather for corn planting eased down the corn market and likewise oats.

Provisions were responsive to the upward trend of hog values.

Curb Market

NEW YORK, May 6—(AP)—Trading in today's curb market showed a further contraction in volume with prices drifting within rather narrow and irregular limits. Oils and public utilities were the most active but neither group attracted any widespread public interest. Traders seemed disposed to await a definite turn in the British strike situation before extending their commitments.

Oils displayed a firm undertone on a continuation of constructive trade news, the latest being an increase in Kerosene prices. Prairie Oil & Gas crossed 55 for a gain of 1 1-2 points but most of the other popular shares showed only small fractional changes.

Coal shares, which were bid up briskly yesterday, turned quiet. Glen Alden losing 3 points of its recent gain on realizing. American Rayon Products, which has been heavy for the last two days, encountered further selling being depressed to a new low at 30 3-4. Industrial Rayon advanced about a point.

Wide fluctuations took place in a number of the high priced industrials trading in which is usually confined to odd lots. Ford Motors of Canada jumped 21 points to 515. Singer Manufacturing, whose president recently painted a gloomy picture of its foreign business, broke nearly 15 points to 305 1-4. A new low for the year, Stanley company jumped 18 1-4 points to 86 1-2, a new record high.

United Light & Power was again active and closed fractionally higher with buying probably influenced by the publication of a report showing net income for the 12 months ended February 28 of $7,280,267 as compared with $5,578,616 in the previous year.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, May 6—(AP)—Activity in the bond market today was maintained at relatively higher rate than in stock trading, with prices tending upward. The disposition of traders and investors to mark time pending a definite move in the British labor crisis, however, deprived the day's dealings of any color or significance.

The chief strengthening influence on the market was the support extended to foreign obligations, enabling them to recover partially from the depression of the past few days. Despite the persistent weakness of exchanges Belgian and French bonds moved ahead with considerable vigor. Gains of a point or more were registered by the Belgian 6 1-2s and 7s and some of the French municipal issues.

The inertia of the stock market tended to focus attention on the bond list as a field for speculative operations, and some of the oil, public utility and miscellaneous issues attracted buying orders on this account. Skelly Oil 6 1-2s jumped a point, and was followed by the Pan-American and Sinclair convertibles, while Remington Arms 6s, Wilson 7 1-2 per certificates, Ajax rubber 8s, Cuba company 8s and Wickwire Spencer Steel 7s advanced 1 to 3 points. Interborough and other local traction issues were firm.

Railroad liens generally drifted within a narrow trading area, although "Big Four" 4s, New Haven 4s of 1956, National Railways of Mexico 4s and 4 1-2s and Southern Railway 6 1-2s scored moderate gains.

Arrangements have been completed for the public offering of $6,300,000 general public utility 30 year 6 1-2 per cent bonds at a price of 98. Proceeds will be used to retire indebtedness of constituent companies and to finance new acquisitions.

MARRIAGES DECREASE IN STATE
BUT DIVORCES SLIGHTLY INCREASE

Marriages in Connecticut decreased 4.9 per cent. from 1924 to 1925, but divorces increased 1.3 per cent., in the same period according to statistics collected by the department of commerce at Washington. The figures on marriages were furnished by the state department of health and the number of divorces by the clerk of the superior court in each county.

There were 12,769 marriages performed in Connecticut during the year 1925, as compared with 12,896 in 1924, representing a decrease of 627, or 4.9 per cent.

During the year 1925 there were 1,222 divorces granted in the state, as compared with 1,207 in 1924, representing an increase of 15, or 1.2 per cent. This increase, however, is slightly less than the estimated increase in the population.

The estimated population of the state of Connecticut on July 1, 1925, was 1,571,555, and on July 1, 1924, 1,553,391. On the basis of these estimates, the number of marriages per 1,000 of the population was 8.8 in 1925 as against 8.4 in 1924; and the number of divorces per 1,000 of the population was 0.778 in 1925, as against 0.785 in 1924.

New London county had 25 fewer marriages in 1925 than in 1924 but the divorces were 7 less in 1925 than in 1924. In Windham county marriages in 1925 were 33 less than in 1924, while the divorces were 18 less.

The following are the statistics for the state and by counties:

LIONS HEARD REPORT OF DISTRICT CONVENTION

Norwich Lions club held its weekly luncheon meeting Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel with the usual large attendance and with President William A. Anderson in the chair. David Kerr acted as song leader. Grace was said by Rev. Edward C. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist church and the singing of America followed. There were the usual group and club song numbers, Peter Ethier presiding at the piano. Tyler Stanton entertained with a vocal selection.

The five minute speaker was President Anderson who gave a very interesting account of the Lions International district convention held Wednesday in New London. The meeting was then turned over to the entertainment committee. Joseph French, chairman of the committee, presented as the entertainer, A. Chester Brown, known as LaMontague, magician and sleight of hand artist. He pleased and mystified the Lions with a number of magical tricks. HEALTHY CHICK CAMPAIGN PASSES MILLION MARK

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, May 5.—The Connecticut "Grow Healthy Chicks" campaign, which is being conducted by the Connecticut Agricultural college extension service to reduce the too-great chick mortality in the farm and commercial flocks of the state, has already passed the 1,000,000 chick mark in numbers signed to follow the program of better methods advised by the college poultry experts. Over 900 poultrymen from all sections of the state have pledged themselves to follow the sanitary program outlined by Mr. Jones, and the combined flocks of growing chicks represented on the farms of these poultrymen numbers exactly 1,036,412. The goal first set when the campaign got under way last winter was one million chicks for the entire state.

Every county in the state oversubscribed its quota except Hartford and New London counties.

BOOSTING THE TAXES ON MOTOR VEHICLES

While the total increase of motor vehicle registration for the United States in 1925 was 10.4 per cent., the increase in the total amount of special taxes (exclusive of the personal property tax) collected from motor vehicle owners by the forty-eight states and the District of Columbia was 33.2 per cent.

This is one of the significant facts brought out in connection with the issuance from the national headquarters of the American Automobile association of its motor vehicle registration and taxation map for the year 1925. Among other things the map shows:

First, the average per vehicle tax levy for the entire country was $20 in 1925 as compared with $17.35 in 1924, an increase of fifteen per cent. in a period of twelve months. The per vehicle tax has increased 153 per cent. since 1919 when it stood at $8.35.

Second, special taxes collected from car owners by the states reached a new high peak last year, with a total of $406,648,561 as compared with $305,266,742 in 1924, an increase of $101,381,819.

Third, the states' revenue from the gasoline tax almost doubled in 1925, the total being $146,028,940 as compared with $79,734,789 the previous year.

Five states had more than a million registration in 1925, these maintaining the same order as they had the previous year. They were: New York with 1,625,583; California, 1,440,561; Ohio, 1,346,000; Pennsylvania, 1,330,433, and Illinois 1,263,177. Two other states made a valiant effort to get to the million class, namely, Michigan with 989,010 and Texas with 975,053.

In state fees, drivers' licenses and gasoline taxes, the highest five were: Pennsylvania with $30,279,770; New York $25,506,245; California, $22,773,087; Michigan, $22,762,030, and Ohio, $22,157,181.

AS BRITAIN ENROLLS VOLUNTEER LABOR UNIONS RESORT TO SECOND LINE DEFENSE

There is a Tendency to Use Stronger Forces on Both Sides—Trades Union Congress is Talking of Calling Out an Additional 2,000,000 Workers—Thus Far There Has Not Been a Single Death Ascribed to the Strike—With Both Sides to the Controversy Standing Pat, the Parliamentary Labor Party is Doing Everything Possible to Promote Peace.

LONDON, May 7.—(AP)—Neither side to the strike dispute shows the slightest dispositions of yielding to the other. On the contrary there is a tendency to use stronger forces on both sides.

The government is enrolling thousands of additional volunteers to substitute the strikers, and announces it will re-inforce the police by recruiting, if possible 50,000 special constables.

On its side, the Trades Union congress is talking of bringing in its second line of defense which, it is claimed, would add another 2,000,000 to the strikers.

Things Growing Easier

So far as the general public is concerned things seem to be growing easier daily. The organization provided by the government and volunteer efforts, especially for transport is continually improving, with a consequent lessening of public inconvenience.

A notable feature of the gigantic conflict, now at the end of its fourth day, is the complete absence of serious disorders; not a single death has been laid to the strike. In almost all previous miners' strikers there was considerable trouble in the coafields, but on the occasion they are remarkably free from disorder.

Although there were vague rumors today of a possible settlement, so far as the general strike is concerned, peace has still made, no headway. Nothing appears to have yet developed from the unofficial talks between Premier Baldwin and J. H. Thomas who, as head of the railwaymen's union, is looked to as the man most likely to bring peace between the government and the trades unions.

Claims of the Strikers

"The British Worker," mouthpiece of the strikers, in tonight's issue says that the council of the trades union congress wishes it to be clearly understood that no official or unofficial overtures have been made to the government by any individual or group of individuals, either with or without the sanction of the general council. The council declares further that it is ready at any moment to enter into preliminary discussions regarding withdrawal of the lockout notices and the ending of the general stoppage and the resumption of negotiations for the honorable settlement of the mining dispute, but adds that "these preliminary discussions must be free from any condition."

As the government insists on the unconditional withdrawal of the strike notices, there seems no basis of reapproachment. Nevertheless J. Ramsay MacDonald, the former labor premier, and the parliamentary labor party are still doing everything possible to promote peace.

A. J. Cook, Secretary of the miners' international federation, who had arranged to go to Ostend for the international miners' conference, opening tomorrow, cancelled their journey tonight. They decided to remain in England over the week-end, and, with the other trade union leaders, address the strikers' meetings Sunday. This sudden change in plans is taken in some quarters as indicating the possibility of a new development.

In the meantime the country is trying to carry on in as near normal manner as possible. There have been disorders in London, especially attacks by Hooligans or volunteer transport workers. In other places outside the metropolis, notably Glasgow, Edinburg, Hull, Middlesbrough and Nottingham, there has also been trouble, but for the most part it is taking the form of attacks on omnibusses or the food transport service. All these disturbances have been easily controlled by the police, without the need of calling upon the military for aid.

Many Theatres Closed

Many theatres in London have closed, but others are bravely risking half empty houseas and heavy losses. Sir Oswald Stoll, theatrical magnate issued an appeal to the citizens to recognize the theatres in their attempts to spread cheer in a depressing situation.

"There is no strike against attending the theatres," says the appeal. "And it is untrue to say the streets are not safe. All the staffs have turned up at every performance since the strike began."

Press Still Tied Up

The press of the country is still tied up with the exception of smaller provincial papers where the men are returning to work and the papers are reappearing. In London one of two dailies are able to issue a four page paper, giving mainly strike news.

The public, however, is still indebted for most of its information to the government paper, the "British Gazette," and the Trade Union organ the "British Worker." In these two papers a strong contest is being waged over the question of the constitutional aspect of the general strike. The Trades Union congress contends that its action is not an attack on the constitution. In an official statement printed in the "British Worker," this body says:

"The general council does not challenge the constitution; it is not seeking to substitute an unconstitution. government, nor is it desireus of undetermining our parliamentary institutions. The sole aim of the council is to secure for the miners a decent standard of life. The council is engaged in an industrial dispute; there is no constitutional crises."

CUNARD LINE REPORTS STRIKE SITUATION BETTER

NEW YORK, May 7.—(AP)—General improvement in the strike situation in England was reported tonight in a cablegram received by the Cunard Line offices here from the home office at Liverpool. This cablegram followed the receipt of information today that the sailings of the Minnetonka of the Atlantic Transport Line, and the Cedric, of the White Star Line from British ports had been cancelled.

The cablegram, as given out by the Cunard offices, follows:

"General position continues to show improvement. Railways continue running skeleton train service with volunteer labor and there appears gradual improvement in main centers. Road transport working satisfactorily.

"Tube and local train service in London working fairly regularly while number of private vehicles also are available. Have interviewed several of principal hotels which advise plenty of accommodations available over and above reservations already made.

"Scythia since Wednesday discharged 1,700 tons dead weight cargo, principally foodstuffs, in readiness to sail tomorrow. Ausonia proceeding direct to Cherbourg and thence to Southampton. Lancastria direct to Havre and then to Southampton.

"Mauretania continues to discharge with volunteers and now is embarking passengers for tomorrow's sailing."

It was explained here that the Ausonia and Lancastria usually stop at Plymouth, but had been rerouted at sea.

Meanwhile ships from here continued on regular schedule, but the first cancellations were noted on the Atlantic Transport liner Minnewaska, sailing tomorrow, which lost 20 first class passengers. Nine cancellations on the Olympic, sailing tonight, were explained as routine, these often running as high as 15 on the larger vessels.

The White Star liner Celtic will sail tomorrow morning for Queenstown and Liverpool. No cancellations have been reported on this ship, nor had any passengers canceled their books this afternoon on the Anchor Line California, which sails for Glasgow tomorrow, nor on the Cunard liner Carmenia, which will depart for Liverpool tomorrow.

FEATURES OF THE STRIKE
(By the Associated Press)

The British strike has brought a holiday to workers at the American embassy and consulate officers except for those who have been gathering strike data. The consulate like other business concerns in London has been faced with the problem of transporting its staff to and from work and to a great extent has succeeded.

With practical stagnation of business, invoices have fallen off to such an extent that the consulate will operate temporarily with a skeleton staff. American tourists who feared the strike, left before it started and those who remain are evidently too busy watching developments to visit the embassy or consulate. Ambassador Houghton has been keeping regular hours at the embassy's office and is living quietly at Crewe house undisturbed by the strike.

J. A. Drexel, an American who has lived many years in Great Britain and is a partner in the bond house of William P. Bonbright & Co., took out the "Flying Scotsman," the prize Edinburgh train last night. Drexel who has made mechanics his hobby and is an expert on all sorts of engines, drove to the station in his limousine. He handed his derby and overcoat to his chauffeur, drew on a pair of overalls and mounted the great locomotive. As he pulled out of the station a crowd of volunteer workers cheered him.

The bicycle and motor cycle factories are all working overtime in an effort to keep up with the extraordinary demand that has been created by the transportation tieup caused by the general strike.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS NOT AUTHORIZED TO STRIKE

LONDON, May 7.—(AP)—Electrical workers have not been authorized to go on strike, it was said tonight by representatives of the Trade Union congress. Strikes of architectural workers which have occurred in several factories are unauthorized, and have only partly impeded service because volunteers immediately were engaged.

STATEMENT ISSUED BY BRITISH WAR OFFICE

LONDON, May 7.—(AP)—The following statement was issued by the war office tonight:

"Rumors continue to be circulated to the effect that, first, the army has reached the end of its resources, second, that the army reserve has been called up, and third, that troops have been ordered on strike duty and have refused to obey the orders.

"The war office states that with the exception of guards for a few vulnerable points in Great Britain, no troops have been called out to aid the civil power, but that as previously stated, certain units have been moved to districts to be available if their services are required.

"The spirit of the troops is excellent. The army reserve has not been called out."

COMMON LAW MARRIAGES VALID IN RHODE ISLAND

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 7.—(AP)—Common law marriages are valid in the state of Rhode Island, the state supreme court held in an opinion handed down today. The opinion said that "the statutory provisions relative to the licensing and solemnization of marriages had been held to be directory merely and not to affect the validity of the marriage."

The case in which the decision was rendered was that of Agnes Holgate, who brought action to recover under the workmen's compensation act for the death of Richard A. Holgate, her common law husband. Holgate, a former employe of the United Electric Railways company, was fatally injured in a carbarn accident.

The couple were married by a justice of the peace in North Attleboro on April 19, 1907. But as Holgate had been divorced on January 7 of the same year, and the six months period for entry of a final decree had not expired, the marriage was held to be null and void. Despite the fact that the marriage was held to be illegal the supreme court in sustaining the validity of the common law marriage allowed Mrs. Holgate's claim for compensation at the rate of $10 a week for 300 weeks.

SHOT HIMSELF AFTER DUEL WITH A STATE TROOPER

NEWTON, N. J., May 7.—(AP)—Archie G. Ackroyd, former Lafayette college football star, shot himself today after a pistol duel with State Trooper Taylor developing from discovery by his bride of three months that Ackroyd had another wife and two children in Philipsburg.

The second wife attempted to leave Ackroyd last night shortly after learning of his former marriage. She eluded him today when the two were on a downtown street and sought protection of the police.

Trooper Taylor was assigned to escort her to a farm near here where they had been living, to get her clothes. They found the door barred and Ackroyd began shooting when the trooper attempted to break in. His bullets and those of Taylor's in reply went wild. They found him dead when the door gave way.

A 300-Acre Forest Fire at East Hampton

500 Persons, Including, Factory Workers and Children, Fought the Fire.

EAST HAMPTON, May 7.—(AP)—The forest fire which broke out here late today, burning over 300 acres of woodland and threatening several farm houses was extinguished late tonight. James Nichols, of East Hampton, one of the volunteer fire fighters, received a broken ankle, while at work in the woods. All houses in the district were saved.

Starting on property owned by William McCoy, the blaze spread to land belonging to Selectman Peter Terp and William Markham. The fire centered in the Chestnut hill section tonight and several farm houses were endangered.

Five hundred persons were aiding in fighting the fire this afternoon, including factory workers, Boy Scouts, school children and employes of the state highway department. Factories were closed so that the men could enter the woods to give assistance.

The blaze swept in a southeast direction this afternoon and was reported under control at night fall. The wind changed, however, and the fire got a new start.

The fire department was called out at noon and worked all of the afternoon. When the fire broke out again tonight, Fire Warden Henry Hopkins sent another call to the firemen. First Selectman Ralph G. Sellew refused, however, to permit the firemen to go out again. The fire warden then got in touch with the state forester who came to East Hampton for a conference with Fire Chief Merton Wier. The latter said that his men had been working all of the afternoon with no pay and he was not exactly satisfied with the methods used in fighting the blaze. The state forester persuaded the fire department to call a meeting for tonight to consider the question of calling out the firemen to fight forest fires.

Twenty-five men fighting the blaze were caught for a few minutes between two fires this afternoon and while their clothing was scorched they made their escape uninjured.

DR. E. H. BRADFORD, NOTED SURGEON, DROPPED DEAD

BOSTON, May 7.—(AP)—Dr. Edward H. Bradford noted surgeon and former dean of the Harvard Medical school, dropped dead while walking alone in the Fenway here today. Two young men who saw him stagger, caught him as he fell and called an ambulance, but he was dead before arrival at the City hospital. A heart attack was the cause of death.

The body was taken to the Bradford's Beacon street home here, where it was announced later that funeral services would be held in the Appleton chapel at Harvard Monday.

Dr. Bradford was born in Boston. He graduated from Harvard in 1869 and the Medical school in 1873. Nine years later he became an instructor in orthopedic surgery at the Medical school and rose through various grades of instructor and professorships to become dean in 1912. He retired in 1918.

The conductor of the car that was struck called to his passengers to jump and a number escaped in this manner.

SEEK PRESIDENT'S VIEWS ON FARM RELIEF BILL

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP)—While the house continued debate on the Haugen, Tincher and Curtis-Aswell farm relief bills, republican leaders today sought a statement from President Coolidge as to his views.

After a visit to the white house, Representative Vestal, of Indiana, the republican whip, represented the president as hopeful for farm legislation and prepared to approve any proposal economically sound. He indicated Mr. Coolidge looked upon the Tincher plan as coming within this category, but of the opinion that any measure tending to raise price levels would be ill-advised.

The republican steering committee also discussed the situation, apparently without reaching any conclusion as to what should be done.

Meanwhile, in the senate another meeting was held by the group that is endeavoring to postpone adjournment until some form of relief legislation is enacted. Senator Gooding, republican, Idaho, was appointed to head a legislative committee to consider the subject. He was selected on motion of Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, spokesman for the corn belt delegation.

Republicans attending were Senators Binkham and McLean, of Connecticut; Frazier and Nye, of North Dakota; Norbeck, South Dakota; and Gooding and McNary. Democrats were Senators Copeland, of New York; Fletcher of Florida; Kendrick of Wyoming; Neely of West Virginia; Ransdell, of Louisiana; and Steck, of Iowa.

DAUGHERTY, MILLER, KING INDICTED FOR CONSPIRACY

Former Attorney General, Former Alien Property Custodian and Former National Republican Committeeman John T. King Are Accused of Conspiracy to Defraud the Government—Indictment is Based on Alleged Irregularities in the Transfer of $7,000,000 of American Metal Company Funds—Miller and King Are Already Under Bail in Other Federal Indictments.

NW LONDON, May 7.—(AP)—The special federal grand jury investigating the sale of the American Metals company today indicted Harry M. Daugherty, former United States attorney general, Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, and John T. King, former republican nation committeeman, for conspiracy to defraud the government.

The grand jury, of the southern district of New York, concluding investigations begun last January, charged Daugherty, Miller and King with conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the transfers of $7,000,000 of American Metals company funds from the custody of the government to the Societe Suisse Pour Valeurs de Metaux, a Swiss company alleged to have been German owned.

The indictment charged conspiracy on the part of Daugherty and Miller, acting for the government, in the matter of turning over American Metal company securities to the purchasers by preventing the government from participating in their honest and unbiased judgment. It charged conspiracy between Daugherty, Miller, King and the late Jesse W. Smith to receive from the claimants of the securities $391,000, alleged to have been paid for effecting the transfer of securities.

Arrangements for the surrender of Daugherty, Miller and King are pending. Miller and King are already under bail in other federal indictments. None of those named in the indictments were in court. Daugherty issued a statement at Columbus, Ohio, saying he had nothing to fear. He said that he was not called upon to review the decision of the department of justice upon which he said the sale had been made.

Assistant United States Attorney Simpson announced after the return of the indictments that he wished to make it clear that foreigners named in the original indictment against Miller and other alleged conspirators had cleared themselves of blame. The indictment naming them will be dismissed, he said.

Miller was indicted last year with four German and Swiss citizens and three German and Swiss corporations on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government in the release by Miller, as alien property custodian, of approximately $7,000,000 of sequestered assets of the American Metals company. King was named in the indictment, but was not indicted. King formerly lived in Bridgeport, Conn.

Miller, a colonel, was one of the founders of the American Legion and has served on its national committee since March 1919. At present he is accompanying Col. Geo. R. Crosfield, president to the Inter-Allied Veterans' Federation, on a tour of the United States of the American Legion and has served on its national committee since March, 1919. At present he is accompany Col. George R. Crosfield, president of the Interallied Veterans' association, on a tour of the United States. Before the war he was representative-at-large from Delaware.

The indictment alleged that Daugherty, Miller and King, with Jesse Smith and "divers other persons to the grand jurors unknown with whom they conspired," were to defraud the United States "by procuring the payment of $6,459,979.97, consisting of $5,529,561.41, proceeds of the sale of shares of American Metals company, Ltd., and the sum of $924,418.56, representing dividends and accruals thereon, and the transfer of bonds to the par value of $514,950."

The indictment then alleged that King acted as adviser to Richard Merton, one of the defendants in the old indictment, and who is said to have come here recently to give testimony, that Miller should transmit letters of recommendation to Daugherty, as attorney general, and direct allowance of Merton's claims. It then alleged that Miller, Daugherty, King and Jesse Smith received the $391,000 in bonds of the second and fourth Liberty loans, with par value of $514,950 in payment for their services to Richard Merton and the Swiss corporation.

The youth had called a taxi to Franklin street and then ordered that he be taken to another address. A rock thrown as he fled toward the woods missed the mark but Ross did not lose any of his money.

FOUR NEW INDICTMENTS ON CHICAGO'S GANGSTERS

CHICAGO, May 7.—(AP)—Four new indictments were returned today by the special grand jury investigating Chicago's gang wars, making a total of fourteen since yesterday. Its inquiry was begun a week ago following the shooting to death of Assistant State's Attorney W. H. McSwiggin and two companions.

Eight men were named in today's indictments for violation of the prohibition laws, all proprietors of saloons which have been the scenes of shootings attributed to the "beer-alley" war. Three of the four saloons named have been the scenes of murder since January 1; and the fourth was raked by machine gun fire last February.

While the indictments were being brought, the coroner's jury investigating the killing in Cicero of Meswigin and the two beer runners who were with him, heard dods and ends of testimony and then adjourned indefinitely pending the summoning of other witnesses.

Meanwhile, Major M. A. Mastelin was explaining his "major engineering company" which Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom of Illinois believes to be a "pardon mill," and was denying that it ever had been concerned with the wholesale issuance of pardons to convicted men.

The men indicted are held on four counts a piece, and bond or $3,000 each was fixed for them.

ITALIAN MUSICIANS WERE REPRIMANDED BY COURT

HARTFORD, May 7.—(AP)—Ten Italian musicians who violated the order of Judge Thomas J. Molloy, of the common pleas court not to parade on May 1 in any other band but Rizzo's Italian band, last Sunday, were let off with a reprimand when they appeared before the judge to answer charges of contempt today.

But for a moment in the proceedings the fate of the musicians, who had gone with St. Paul's band, hung on the question whether the constable who had read the judge's order to them just before they paraded, had all his teeth.

Nathan Schatz, counsel with Joseph R. Griffin for the ten men, contended seriously that his clients could not understand Constable Charles Fine when he read the order because he had all his teeth pulled and had not yet received the false teeth he was sporting today.

The case is entirely in the hands of Federal Prohibition Enforcement Officer Stanton L. Briggs. DeRoberto will be tried in the U. S. district court at Hartford on the fourth Tuesday of this month. FOUR HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND BURNED OVER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, May 7—Four hundred acres of land, 75 cords of cut firewood and 4,000 feet of timber were destroyed by one of the worst brush fires in years in the towns of Colchester and Lebanon Thursday, causing a loss placed at $5,000.

The blaze started during the forenoon from the Grand View hotel in Exeter. It burned over land bordering Williams' pond and then made its way onto the property of Herman Markus, destroying 50 cords of cut wood and timber used for building purposes. Twenty-five cords of wood on the land of Morris Layitte were destroyed. The fire then cut a circle to the farm of Ticknor Brown and to other properties in the town of Colchester, doing heavy damage as it went. All day long a force of some 100 volunteers battled with the fire. They were directed by Deputy Fire Wardens John M. Riley and Louis Skivinski of Colchester.

ENCOUNTERING QUICK SAND MEADOW EAST OF CHAPLIN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, May 7—Encountering quick-sand in the Herman Darling meadow, just east of Chaplin village, Contractor Arborio of New Haven is having his troubles trying to fill the meadow with gravel in the construction of the new three and three-quarters mile stretch of cement road between North Windham and Chaplin. For three days workmen have been dumping loads of gravel in the swampy meadow but as fast as it is dumped it is swallowed into the ground.

This unusual situation has caused the contractor to scratch the back of his head. The layout of the new road is partly over the treacherous meadow which is some 125 acres in area. The plans provide for the building of a fill at the lower part of the meadow for about 400 feet in the rear of the Center cemetery and some six feet high. Several hundred cubic yards of gravel already dumped into the meadow have gone down to China as far as its destination is known and the old meadow looks just as it did when the Indians ambled around it.

The native sod of the village were surprised Friday when they learned that an attempt had been made to fill the meadow to use it as part of the new road. They claim that it has always been known to be filled with patches of quick sand. One of the workmen on the road gang found this out for himself the other day. He drove his crowbar about one foot into the meadow. A few hours later he came back to get it and it had disappeared. So far as known no definite solution has yet been reached by the road builders. One prominent Chaplin resident claims he speaks for a majority of the people of the village in saying that there is general dissatisfaction over the proposed layout. The preference would be to have the new road built nearer the present highway.

TROLLEY COMPANY SEEKS TO ELIMINATE TROUBLE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, May 7—With a radio in practically every home in South Windham, a mutual complaint has been making the rounds in the village that the reception is so poor as to knock the spots right out of "radio ing." The fans have agreed that the trouble is due to the power furnished by the Connecticut company to its trolley service. It has been noticed that when the power is shut off about 11:30 o'clock at night the trouble stops. Judge Frank H. Foss has been asked to represent the radio owners and has written to the Connecticut company. Manager Samuel Anderson made a quick reply stating that for some time past an electrical engineer has been conducting a series of experiments in South Windham to try to locate the source of the radio trouble. The latter continues, "As the result of tests on April 29th, we will, as soon as possible, make some changes at our South Windham sub-station which may or may not improve matters." It is believed that there is a leakage of electricity from the sub-station which is located in the old car barn.

It is appalling the indifference of parents to their children wandering around the streets at night until a late hour. None of them over ten or 11 years old. Officer Vegiard says he has taken certain ones to the police station, been to see the parents, even handcuffed one incorrigible to an automobile and the lesson does not last over a week. Two boys in particular, he said, apparently do not go home until ten or 11 o'clock, any night. There were 15 small boys and girls hanging around the theatre entrance recently between nine and ten o'clock, opening restaurant doors, saying insulting things, chasing a drunken man, and getting into people's cars. They keep an eye out for the cop, and beat it the minute they see him.

IN DAYS OF OUR FOREFATHERS

Women Prepared Their Own Medicines

The wise pioneer women learned to gather, in woods and fields, the remedies the Indians used. From the rafters of colonial houses hung great bunches of dried roots and herbs. From these, in times of sickness, the busy mother brewed simple and powerful remedies.

From roots and herbs, Lydia E. Pinkham, a descendant of these sturdy pioneers, made her Vegetable Compound. The beneficial effects of this dependable medicine are vouched for by hundreds of women who tell of returning health and energy.

Mrs. Wm. Kraft of 2333 Vinewood Ave., Detroit, Mich., saw a Pinkham advertisement in the "News" one day and made up her mind that she would give the Compound a trial. At that time she was very weak. "After the first bottle," she writes, "I began to feel better and like a new woman after taking six bottles. I recommend it to others and always keep a bottle in the house."

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why should it not help you?

PUTNAM

STUDENTS' LEAGUE OF MANY NATIONS TO APPEAR IN PUTNAM

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 7.—Putnam will be honored when the Students League of Many Nations are dated to give their unique program, featuring a panorama-ic view of the life in Europe and other countries, contrasting the privileges and opportunities that America affords.

This great and thrilling service has been rendered nearly 500 times in 31 different states of the Union and will be at the Baptist church in this city Saturday evening, May 8, at 7:45 o'clock.

Exceptional privileges belong to this noted group. They have given their program six times in Auburn prison, also at Sing Sing prison of Ossining, N. Y. The prisoners at the state penitentiary in Bellefonte, Pa., were thrilled with the service and insisted upon the students returning the next day. Universities, colleges and high schools willingly forfeit their assembly when the league is available to put on a part of their program, and professors maintain again and again that the time thus spent is more valuable than study. They realize the educational value of actually seeing and hearing voices from across the sea.

Words of praise come from every hand. The governor of Virginia, E. Lee Trinkle, said it was the greatest service of its kind that he had ever attended and Dr. Len G. Broughton, pastor of the First Baptist church in Jacksonville, Florida, and a prominent preacher of the south, said, "I would'nt have missed the service for one thousand dollars."

Senators, governors, judges' lawyers, doctors, teachers, mechanics, artists, writers, musicians, every profession of humanity have witnessed this group. They were recently received by President Coolidge at the white house. The governor of Ohio dismissed his attendants when he welcomed the league at Columbus and his royal reception accompanied by a 15 minute speech, covering the statistics of the state, will never be forgotten. In the New England states the service was given in every capital city.

A Polish Jew, wearing the ancient Hebrew shawl and phylacteries, is the first speaker. Jewish rituals and ceremonies are vividly described and enacted. Then follows a native of London, Minnie Belle Saunders, a sweet singer of Wales; Wesley Kofahl, a fair son of Switzerland; George Chayet, a Russian born student who suffered great persecutions and has victoriously overcome the handicap of superstition and the hinderance imposed by strict customs; an Indian descendent of the Ogallalah Sioux of the Blackfoot tribe, is attired in a most gorgeous and stunning chief's costume. To hear his explanation of the significance of braid, fringes, feathers, arrows, clubs, scalps, etc., is an education in itself. George Brow, a member of the Forty-second Black Watch of the Royal Highlanders of Canada, which made such a heroic record in France, is a member of the party. His Scot brogue, plaid kilts and martial spirit endears him to the heart of every listener.

Then come representatives of Ireland, Holland, Sweden, Italy, France and Germany. Miss Esther Marmaroff, born in Turkey, and who escaped under the most thrilling circumstances from a life of future bondage, describes the conditions of the girls and women of that country. Paul Revere, the "African Diamond", wears the professional gown of his father, who was a witch doctor of Liberia. No one can afford to miss his account of four attempts in the ten years to reach America and his final and victorious journey. Lieutenant J. Ray Baker, British Ace, of the Flying corps of the Independent division, and who lost five ships in the recent war, two of them behind the German lines, will tell his own story.

Even the sunny south has a place in this cosmopolitan program for a native born North Carolinian strikes the keynote of America, which in truth the melting pot of all nations.

One year ago the Student's League of Many Nations were here and gave a very enjoyable service at the Second Congregational church and those who heard them speak very highly of the service.

RAIDING THE COUNTRYSIDE

Many of those who visit the great wide open spaces seem to think they are public property to the extent that it is not only possible to trespass thereon at will, but to appropriate what is desired. They are firm in the belief that they should be permitted to have a good time and not be interrupted in their use, destruction and taking of things which have been forbidden them under the law but which they want.

What appears to be a typical case of this character was noted by the Meriden Journal in the town of Durham where a farmer was seen "taking the number of an automobile, the occupants of which had trespassed on his land, despite the warning sign that faced them. They were breaking branches from trees, picking flowers and otherwise violating the law of the commonwealth. The motorists, protesting vigorously, appeared to think that they were well within their rights, not admitting that they had trespassed, although warned by a legal sign."

Those who live in the country and erect signs on their property forbidding trespassing are invariably impelled by the manner in which they have been treated by trespassers, who are solely concerned with their own pleasure and pay little or no attention to what they do. Too many act as if they had the right to knock down stone walls, to leave bars down for cattle to stray, to raise havoc in the planted ground, to start fires which may result in large losses and even to raid fruit trees and gardens.

It requires only a little of such to arouse the indignation of the property owners. They have good cause for resenting such acts when they post their land or set out to prosecute trespassers who defy their efforts at self protection. It is invariably the case that the acts of a few are responsible for the restrictions being placed upon the many. But the strangest thing is the attitude of the trespassers who seem to think that the property owners are helpless and have no right to defend themselves and their property against the acts of others.

PUBLIC BUILDING BILL

With both houses of congress having acted upon the appropriation bill for public buildings, it is to be expected that an agreement will be reached even though the senate amended the house measure. By this bill an expenditure of $165,00,000 is called for to erect not only government buildings at Washington but at such points throughout the country as is deemed necessary.

By the house bill the authority to say where the expenditures would be made was left chiefly with the secretary of the treasury. In the belief of the senate this vested too much authority in one person and it amended the bill whereby he would make estimates to be submitted to the budget bureau for approval, after which they would go to the appropriations committee and need the approval of congress before work could be started. That seems as if considerable red tape had been demanded and that greater delays might be expected than under the other plan but it certainly could not be said that it was a case of one man control.

As for the government buildings at Washington, the need of which has been repeatedly demonstrated, $10,000,000 would be available each year for a period of five years and should mean the erection of a number of buildings which are needed for housing the many government agencies, too many of which are now scattered about the city and occupying leased quarters.

It is some time since an appropriation bill of this character was passed. It may not be said that the government has so much money that it doesn't know what to do with it, but it is recognized as a good piece of economy to put money into such structures as will cut down the large rentals which the government is paying and which from time to time are being raised. Such an appropriation is not in the class of those which the president has threatened to veto. He has pointed out the economic desirability of using government funds in this manner at this time and his approval can be expected.

DISCOURAGING THE GUNMEN

Not every bank robbery is conducted in the same manner as that at Dorchester this week where a single person displayed sufficient bravado to accomplish his purpose, but there was displayed in connection therewith an attitude on the part of the bank official and employes which can certainly give no encouragement to any others who may be entertaining the idea of resorting to such a method of getting rich quick.

Alone, but boasting that he hadn't missed his man in five years, the robber made free use of his gun as a preliminary. He got over $5,000 without difficulty but it was in getting away with it that he encountered trouble. There were others who had anticipated such a visit and provided themselves with guns, which they knew how to use. It was a case of getting the robber or being shot himself for the manager of the bank and he was able to drop the hold-up man in his tracks and recover the loot.

The ease with which it has been possible to rob messengers, bank tellers and paymasters has apparently impressed too many favorably. They have invited a dose of cold lead but they have failed to receive it in too many instances. If it was demonstrated that those who undertook such robberies were much more liable to be shot themselves than they are to carry out their plan, there would be fewer interested in or planning such raids.

The outcome of the Dorchester case offers no inducements to others. It was a case of dealing quickly with a desperate individual and those upon whom such responsibility rested were alive to their duty.

Another demonstration of the unwillingness to yield to the man with a gun was the case at Everett where two policemen were killed before the individual was caught but that case cannot fail to have its effect upon the gun toter who needlessly lets it get him into serious trouble. That prompt and full action will be taken against both of these individuals is to be expected.

MOTHERS' DAY

We have seen special days and special weeks multiply until most every day and most every week are supposed to be occasions for setting forth the merits of some particular cause. It is even so that some days are used for the promotion of more than one cause, and the feeling has been expressed for some time that the idea is being overworked; that there are so many special days and special weeks that they fail to get the attention they formerly did or should. It is easy enough to have a special day designated for a particular cause, but that doesn't insure that it will get the attention that is sought. Quite the same as too many cooks spoil the broth, too many days dampen the interest in the idea.

But while it might be desirable to see a decrease in the number of these days and weeks it is quite evident that certain ones should not be dropped. Among such is Mothers' day, a time for paying tribute to mothers and the great and invaluable service which they rendered or are engaged in. But while it is frequently said that this or that day should be observed not only on one but every day in the year there is probably none that is deserving of such consideration more than Mothers' day. One day in the year is slight consideration for a mother's services. Every day in the year is not too much. There is no possibility that such would mean the extension of any greater recognition than mothers are entitled to or should receive.

Sunday is Mothers' day and by all means see that you do your part.

NO 1925 MUSTER

Under the national defense act of 1920 authority was given to hold what have been regarded as tests of the military strength of the nation. For two years there have been mobilizations of the forces for the purpose of disclosing the effectiveness of the various units, or the points where more attention is needed to bring them up to standard.

Defense day, or mobilization day, has always encountered opposition. It has been regarded by the pacifists as tending toward militarism. They have not appreciated the necessity of having our forces in fit condition in case of emergency. They haven't appreciated the advantage of such practice as the mobilization gives in case it became necessary for the forces to be assembled unexpectedly. The object of the muster days is to see that the machinery for getting the various branches of the army out and ready for service, especially the state organizations, is well greased that those on whom the responsibility falls understand their duty and that a call to army would be properly answered by an adequate force.

Such musters are not held in anticipation of trouble, but certainly if it is desirable to have the various military organizations for protective purposes it is important that they should be able to function in an emergency. There is probably no better insurance against peace.

That there is to be no such muster this year does not necessarily mean that the idea has been entirely abandoned. Friction through picking the wrong day has been encountered before and probably explains the reason for the war department to arrangement for a demonstration this year.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

The calamity howler is always on deck for every emergency, and delivers his ultimatum on everything that is unusual in both nature and man. His familiar field is that of nature and especially the weather. At least he seems to take greater pleasure and is more at home here than elsewhere. He finds the greatest satisfaction in predicting direful disasters that will involve human suffering to the last degree. He is a specialist in foreseeing terrible fatalities, ah, the result of weather freaks. No country in the world and no section of any country is free from the calamity howler. At present he lifts up his tenor voice in Maine. His theme is the unusually late spring. To him it is the very worst on record. The crops on which we chiefly rely for food will be a dismal failure this year, and probably next. Both man and beast will suffer as never before. Just how far he has succeeded in terrorizing the Pine Tree state is not reported.

Let it be admitted that the season is backward, still it by no means establishes a record in this direction. As to temperature the April of 1926 is a close parallel to that of 1897, and far less severe than that of 1857 which was a record breaker. Even in the latter year there was no suffering from food shortage. I wonder why the calamity howler doesn't recognize the scientifically established fact, that in any series of ten years the average weather is absolutely the same as to temperature. Does he realize that there has never been any suffering in this country because the earth has failed to produce? With such a variety of climate a shortage in some sections is made up by a surplus in others. This country will not go to eternal smash because of a shortage of potatoes in Maine.

Is meekness the dominating factor in the control of worldly affairs today or has it been in the long period of the past? As a matter of fact our observation is generally in the other direction. It is not the meek, mild man that gets the prizes of this world. It is rather the man of push, boldness and aggression; the man of sleepless, and too often unscrupulous, energy and daring enterprise. It is the man who harnesses restless, fiery horses to his chariot, and who shouts as he rides rough shod over the rights of his fellows: "Make way for my chariot! Stand aside while I rush on to wealth and position!" That is the sort of man who forms vast monopolies in coal, iron, breadstuffs, and creates great combinations in gas and electricity. It is not the meek, patiently enduring man who becomes worldly famous. But in other directions he does his duty and will get his reward.

Exactly what did the Man of Nazareth mean when he uttered the immortal words: "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth?" How do the words square with the influence the meek actually exert in the world? The two leading words of the expression must be modified if we are to preserve what the speaker intended to teach. The mutability of language and the difficulty of translating the thought of one language into another make this a necessity. If we take this sentence just as it reads, it would make a logical connection between meekness and the inheritance of the earth. In other words it would make material possession the reward of moral excellence, which is contrary to fact, to our observation, and to the whole trend of the New Testament. The Christian is nowhere justified in believing that if he obeys all the requirements of the moral law he will be crowned with riches and worldly honor.

According to the general usage of this word in Scripture, the meek man is the long suffering, patiently enduring man. It is the man who, mildly submissive and uncomplaining under a burning sense of wrong, carries out, as far as weak humanity can, the marvellous triumphs or grace as recorded in the early chapters of Matthew. It is the man who, "when reviled, "reviles not again." It is the man who tries to love his enemies, and do good to them that hate and persecute him. It is the man who thoroughly disbelieves in the old Jewish practice of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." The man who goes through life thoroughly imbued with the larger charities of the gospel will not find this world made up of "green pastures" and "still waters" by any means. The roses will be less numerous than the thorns, and the glories of paradise will be a very rare experience. Such a man is not feeble but strong and will get his merited reward.

It is very important—perhaps absolutely important—that a book should have action if it is to have readers. Nothing injures the sale of a book so much as dullness, and if a writer is uniformly dull he is uniformly invited by the reading public to take a back seat, sooner or later. Judged then as a book of action the Bible must head the list of readable books. I believe that the Bible, above all other books, is life. As such it comes under the jurisdiction of those laws that govern life in general. As a living force it must admit of a progressive revelation. As the years sweep by, more and more is discovered in these simple stories of the gospel, as more and more of life is revealed to which they apply. The mines of the gospel are rich beyond all comparison. The words of the Bible are simply directions where to stake out a claim, and digging for gold is not dull.

In its theological beliefs the modern Christian world is far less dogmatic than formerly, but there is just as much fidelity to the great fundamental facts of revolution as ever, but there is less disposition on the part of one man to cram his beliefs down another man's throat than in "the good old days of Puritanism." Our greatest divergence from the past, however, lies in a wider application of the spirit of the gospel to community needs. Of this there is no finer illustration than the social work done here in Connecticut. One needs only to glance at the program of the conference recently held in our city to see the magnitude of the work undertaken. Compare this with the theological squabbles that used to mark religious gatherings years ago, over questions that nobody knew anything about, and it makes one feel like saying: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away."

On Saturday, May 8, 1825 exactly 101 years ago today—General Lafayette visited Louisville, Ky., nearly 50 years after his first voyage. His full name was Marie Jean Paul Roch Yves Gilbert Motier, Marquis de and yet he had a good disposition, was not round shouldered and lived to be 77 years old. Never in the history of any country was any man ever given a more enthusiastic ovation, for had it not been for French assistance at a critical moment, Washington would not have received the sword of Cornwallis at Yorktown which Lafayette witnessed with tears of joy. Lafayette was a singular combination: an aristocrat to his finger tips; possessed of great landed estates, educated, cultured and belonged to the nobility. Under these fripperies there was a great democratic heart that beat in sympathy with the struggling colonies. American can never forget him.

CONNECTICUT STATE HOSPITALS AND HOW TO USE THEM

The development of the state hospital from the lunatic asylum to its present form is a matter of comparatively recent years. Nevertheless, the gradual change of attitude which has occurred inside the four walls of institutions housing the mentally sick is little short of a complete revolution. It was the old idea that the community must be protected from the insane man. Today the aim is quite as much to rescue the mental patient from the community—to offer him a retreat for convalence. The very change of terms is indicative of the shift of emphasis from the legal to the medical aspect—today insanity is mental disease, and the lunatic has become a patient. Psychiatry has appeared as a distinct branch of medicine. Unfortunately, the new conception is still confined very largely to psychiatrists and to the hospitals themselves. Far too many of the lay public and even of the general medical profession still regard the state hospital solely as a means of safeguarding the normal man from his demented neighbor. Too few doctors and nurses conceive of it in its proper light as a sanitarium, or are familiar with the procedure necessary to admit mental patients quietly and at the crucial time.

Connecticut has at the present time two hospitals for the care of mental patients: The older, Connecticut State hospital, established in 1868 and located at Middletown, and the younger, Norwich State hospital, situated on the outskirts of the town of Norwich, which accepted its first patient in 1904. The former has a capacity of 2,180 and during 1925 treated a total of 2,248 patients; Norwich hospital, with accomodation for 2,000, cared for 2,443 in the same period. Each institution is provided with a staff of 12 physicians, inclusive of the superintendent, assistant superintendent, pathologist, and the clinical director, as also with a large nursing staff and occupational therapists who play a vital part in rehabilitating many patients. In each case there is appropriation for at least one psychiatric social worker, who makes the connection between home and hospital, investigating and helping to improve the conditions to which the discharged patient returns, and keeping in touch with all possible paroled patients.

The State Hospital as a Sanitarium

These institutions are preeminently hospitals, that is, they are equipped to effect improvement or cure of mental illness to the limit of current medical knowledge. First of all, they subject the patient to regular habits of hygiene. In many cases the patient comes to the hospital following weeks or months of irregular care at home, his family have been unable to keep him in bed at night, perhaps, or to see that he was properly nourished if he refused to eat with the rest; his whole physical system is perhaps sluggish or exhausted from overactivity. The hospital gives him plain, nourishing food at regular intervals, in extreme cases of an obstinate refusal to eat tube feeding is resorted to. If the disease manifests itself by extreme restlessness and hyperactivity with inability to sleep, hydrotherapy is used. Each hospital plant is provided with up-to-date hydrotherapeutic facilities, so that manic patients may be soothed quite harmlessly by baths of suitable type and temperature, instead of frequently administered drugs.

The maximum of light and air is supplied to the wards, and all who are not in the most acute stage of mental illness have access to sun parlors at the ends of the corridors. These sun parlors are furnished as attractively as funds and constant usage will permit, and both at Norwich and at Middletown command delightful, unbroken views of the surrounding country.

Needless to say, patients are given thorough physical examinations and every effort is made to eliminate irritation from physical cause. Each hospital contains an X-ray room, general operating room, and a gynecological room. Wherever necessary, general surgery is performed according to approved technique. Hyperthyroidism and similar conditions are given direct medical attention and as far as possible, every facility of the general hospital is extended to patients under care. The infirmary and the isolator cottage are always available for special emergencies.

Each patient is daily observed by the ward physician for the small but significant changes which distinguish one type or mental disease from another. Wherever possible, an analysis of the mental content is attempted, with a close study of hallucinations and delusions. No patient is kept in confinement unless his own safety or that of others demands it, and the number of typical madmen or violent cases (as the public thinks of them)—disturbed patients (as they are known to the hospital)—is astoundingly small in proportion to the entire hospital population. The majority of patients are free to move about the wards, and with improvement comes a steady increase of freedom until parole is finally granted. The patient's cooperation and confidence are sought always, and effort is made to cultivate comfort and satisfaction rather than antagonism.

The Personal Equation

Careful study has shown that work or some sort has a strong therapeutic effect, and it is this principle of occupational therapy which the state hospital, in common with all the progressive general hospitals, has adopted with extremely beneficial effects. Not every mental patient can be persuaded to occupy himself, but as the acute phases pass and convalescence begins, the willingness to "do something" grows. At first, perhaps, it is simply pacing the corridor, pushing a felt mop over the hardwood floor. Later it may be a regular time in the hospital laundry or kitchen, not working for board but working for the sake of work, for the sense of accomplishment. Or the task may have more of creative value, loomwork, basket-making or needlework in great variety for the women; for the men, broom or rug making, carpentry in numerous forms, brass work, painting, the making of toys, etc. The results of such work in some cases are gratifying beyond expectation and in most instances there is a noticeable speeding up of the recovery. The consciousness of successful achievement is medicine in itself. The logic is evident when one reflects that, by former methods, these same relatively interested patients were allowed to sit idle and brooding, or wander about agitated and aimless through the entire day.

Good hygiene, medical care, occupational therapy—these are all elements in the reestablishment of mental patients here in Connecticut. A fourth element—play or recreation—is equally vital. The ends of recreation are served by periodic dances and moving pictures which are open to all patients who are ablebodied and not too seriously disturbed. There are also regular religious services suited to different faiths. Visiting hours are frequent and generous, so that patients may keep in touch with relatives, and every effort is made to create as congenial an atmosphere as may be, within the limitation of hospital routine. At the base of all action is the fact that mental disease is usually relievable and often curable, and in each case a return to the community is looked for.

After Care for Paroled Patients

As already noted, the two state hospitals aim, through the social service department, to bring the home conditions into tune with the hospital. If a patient's breakdown has been precipitated largely by a state of friction at home, of what use is it to restore him to normalcy and send him back to face the same problems? Advice and explanation—so far as possible, readjustment—are required within the home as well as for the patient himself. Here lies the function of the psychiatric social worker.

The hospital clinics, too, serve an excellent purpose. Patients on parole are encouraged to return at stated intervals for reexamination and suggestions from the hospital physicians, and to receive the help which will tide them over the first difficult months of resuming life in the community.

Commitment of Mental Patients in Connecticut

There are three forms of commitment which are ordinarily to be used in Connecticut.

Voluntary Commitment.—Under this type of commitment the patient goes to the hospital accompanied by friends or relatives, and there signs a paper himself, stating his desire to undergo treatment for an indefinite period, meantime abiding by all rules of the institution. He agrees to give ten days' notice in writing whenever he desires to leave. This form is to be urged in any case where the patient possesses insight into his own condition, but under no circumstances must coercion be exerted to obtain the patient's signature. If, in the judgment of the hospital, the patient's condition does not warrant discharge when notice is signed by him, the relatives may be advised by the superintendent to proceed with a probate commitment, and in event of delay, an emergency commitment may be executed pending completion of the latter.

Emergency Commitment.—This form makes provision for an emergency certificate in the case of any person who becomes suddenly and violently insane, and entitles the hospital to hold any such person for 30 days. The certificate is to be signed by any reputable physician and sworn to before a notary public. The reasons necessitating immediate care are to be set forth. The certificate must be sworn to within three days of the physician's examination and presented with the patient at the hospital within three days after signature before a notary. It is the duty of the superintendent to notify the state controller immediately upon receiving the emergency commitment, and the latter then proceeds with the regular probate commitment in the court nearest the hospital, the patient's home town assuming the costs.

Regular or Probate Commitment.—The probate commitment is most common. A complaint signed by any person, but preferably a relative, is presented to the probate court, alleging that the patient is insane. If the patient is a pauper, complaint is made by the selectman. The judge of probate then appoints two physicians to make an examination. A date is set for a hearing, not more than ten days away, at which the patient or relatives are privileged to appear. The judge is then at liberty to issue an order committing the patient for an indefinite period to a state or private institution.

Blanks for this form of commitment may be secured from the state hospitals, the probate courts, and sometimes from local physicians.

The question of maintenance of patients within the hospital lies in the province of the department of state agencies and institutions. An agreement is made with the family which takes into consideration the financial ability of the individual case. For all ordinary patients the rates vary from $3 to $5 weekly. Private patients pay more for service which is the same except for separate rooms.

"Don't's" Concerning Commitment

Do not postpone treatment or at least examination of any person who shows signs of mental disorder. If possible, put the patient in touch with a mental health clinic—there are many in Connecticut or which the state department of health will be glad to inform you—for early diagnosis counts. With many forms of mental disease prevention of a serious crisis is possible, and care given promptly will arrest the trouble at a relatively mild level.

Do not deceive a mental patient. Ruses and tricks of all sorts are to be condemned, especially when taking a patient to the hospital. Suspicion is one of the earmarks of mental disease, the basis of many delusions, and when a patient finds that he has been deliberately hoodwinked, his illness may be aggravated just as exposure aggravates pneumonia.

Do not send the patient to the hospital accompanied by a police officer. Send him as quietly as possible, and if it can be arranged, let him be escorted by some friend or relative with whom he is familiar. Always let a woman patient have a woman attendant. Unhappy impressions at the first go far to impede recovery in the hospital. Particularly, must the idea of forcible detention be made as inconspicuous as possible.—Winifred W. Arrington in Connecticut Health Bulletin.

Sunday Morning Talk

THE TREE OF LIFE

We read with delight the beautiful description of the new Jerusalem, and our thoughts rest on the avenues and the river banks shaded with the tree of life bending under its rich and inviting burden of fruit—fruit which does not ripen and fall, leaving the unladen branches until another season comes around, but always full of fruit ripe for the hand to pluck and changing with the changes of the months. Heaven has abundant provision for the eternal life of those who pass its gates of pearl. As here, the soul is nourished and by divine grace kept in full possession of the life given by the spirit of God. Nor is the heavenly provision limited to barely that which is sufficient, there is no limit to the riches of God's grace. There is not one tree to which we may go and gather of that which it may bear, but in all the city, on the banks of the river, along the golden avenues, the tree of life grows, its fruit perfectly adapted to the need of the one who gathers, and abundant within his reach beyond all possible need. Fairbairn beautifully says, "Whoever enters there looks out upon it continually; he walks beneath its boughs, he reclines in its shadow, and listens to the gently flowing waters from the throne of God and the Lamb. Its fruit is unlimited, and may be gathered by every one, thus illustrating the language of Christ, "I am come that they might have life, and have it more abundantly."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The society for ethical culture, which is to devote the coming week to a celebration of its fiftieth anniversary, was founded and still has as its actice leader Dr. Felix Adler, who long has been a prominent personage among the Jews of America. Dr. Adler is a native of Germany, but was brought to America when very young, was educated at Columbia university and at German universities, and was destined, it was thought, for the place of a rabbi in the reformed wing of American Judaism. But instead he took a chair in Cornell university and taught Hebrew and Oriental languages for two years. In 1876 he set up an independent organization to be known as the Society for Ethical Culture, of which he became the leader and regular teacher. The movement spread rapidly and today there are branches of the society in many cities throughout America and Europe.

Stories That Recall Others

How Big is Art?

How big is art? The dictionary gives a fairly comprehensive definition of the word but Young America demonstrates its ability to think for itself along lines Webster never thought of. Two young girls were looking over a display of pictures.

"This is my favorite," said one, pausing before a beautiful painting.

"Mine too," responded the other enthusiastically, "it's such a grand size."

A Pertinent Question

A blind man was proceeding along the street and after listening negotiated the street crossing without much difficult. As he reached the further curb in safety he increased his pace slightly.

A very large, red faced woman, hurrying across the curb from another direction crashed violently into him. His temperament was greatly perturbed and he angrily stammered:

"Where's your eyes, lady? Where's your eyes?"

From Small Beginnings

Stefan Karajich, the Serbian, organizer of a Language

Out of a little Serbian village, a little over a hundred years ago, a village boy walked to the ancient monastery not far from his home and there sat down with the monks to learn how to read and write. Most of his playfellows did not know how to read and write, and did not wish to know, but Stefan Karajich believed learning worth while. It was a pleasant sight to see him sitting there with the long-bearded friars, his eyes puzzling over the big print or the crude old books. Little did those monks know that the country boy, son of an ordinary villager, would become the most learned of all people in Serbia, far more learned, indeed, than any of the monks, make great dictionaries, reform the spelling and the vocabulary of Serbia, collect old literature, and write brilliant books of history. To them the teaching of the small boy was only an insignificant part of their work—and so far as they knew, it would amount to nothing.

It is a pity that teachers cannot lift up the veil of the future and see what their pupils are to be in the world.

Stefan learned to read and to write. At 17, he was sent with the army to read and write letters for an ignorant general. For a number of years he led the rough camp life, but learned to know the people of Serbia, their songs and their stories. Drifting into the Austrian city of Vienna, he happened to sing one of the old folk songs. A learned man heard him, and asked for more. He sang until he was tired, and then told stories until he was quite exhausted.

The scholar was delighted and urged the young man to put together in book form all the old songs and stories he had picked up, and to make a study of the language of the people. The rest of his life Stefan Karajich spent in finding more songs and legends, in studying the language, in writing dictionaries, and in urging people to spell words as they pronounce them, and to pronounce words as they spell them. He entirely reformed the Serbian alphabet, the Serbian language and Serbian spelling. When he was 60, he translated the New Testament into Serbian.

After a life of intense study and most useful work, the peasant scholar died at the age of 77, and was buried in the capital of Serbia with national honors. But the old monks who had taught him never knew to what heights their pupil rose.

Varicose Veins Reduced or Money Back, Says Lee & Osgood Co.

Simple Home Treatment That Is Giving Amazing Results.

The world progresses. Today ailments that took weeks to cure can now be ended in a few days. If you have varicose veins or bunches you can start today to bring them back to normal size, and if you are wise you will do so.

Just get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil at any dispensing pharmacist and apply it night and morning to the enlarged veins. It is very powerful and penetrating, and only a little is required.

After a few days' treatment the veins will begin to grow smaller and by regular use will soon reduce to normal.

Moone's Emerald Oil is also a marvelous healing agent. One application for instance stops the itching of eczema, and a few applications causes the eruptions to dry up, scale off and completely disappear. It is equally as effective in barber's itch, salt rheum, redness and inflammatory skin trouble.

People who want to reduce varicose veins, or get rid of eczema, ulcers, or piles in a few days should not hesitate to get a bottle at once. It is so powerful that a small bottle lasts a long time. Any pharmacy can supply you. Lee & Osgood Co. sells both of it.

OBITUARY

Linwood E. Salisbury

The death of Linwood Elmer Salisbury, 57, occurred Wednesday morning at his home on High street, Mousup. Mr. Salisbury had been ill with grip for several weeks but suffered relapses which brought on pneumonia.

He was born in South Killingly, June 7, 1874, youngest son of Theran R. and Ellen L. Graves Salisbury, where he attended the public schools and graduated from the Killingly high school. While in high school he assisted at the Central hotel in Danielson which his father had at that time but soon after graduating the boy came to Moosup where he worked for his brothers Everett and Charles who were then operating the grocery business which used to belong to the old firm of L. Battey and Son next to the Methodist church. Later Linwood was taken into the grocery concern as a partner at the time the new Salisbury block was built where Marchessault block now stands.

A few cars later Linwood Salisbury was associated with his brother Everett in a cash grocery business and then was employed in the banking business for the same brother, first in Moosup and then in Providence where he had charge of the private bank until a state law prohibited further operation of private banks in Rhode Island.

Returning from Providence to Moosup, Mr. Salisbury entered the employ of Frank Daggett who was then operating a growing market and grocery on Prospect street and remained in Mr. Daggett's employ for some years until he entered the office of the American Woolen Co., Moosup mills, as a bookkeeper. In his work at the mill office, as in everything he undertook, he was cheerful, efficient and dependable with the result that he was made assistant paymaster of the mills, which position he held at the time of his death. Probably few men in the village were more widely and favorably known than was "Lin" Salisbury whose friends were many.

When a young man he married Clara, a daughter of the late Joseph Potvin, a prominent contractor, and she with two sons, Roger and Clarence, also a daughter, Miss Hazel Salisbury survive to mourn the loss of beloved husband and father. He also leaves two brothers, Everett E. and Charles D. Salisbury, both of Moosup. Mr. Salisbury was a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and of the Adelphi club. His mother passed away in December 1924, and the father died in 1891.

His illness was caused by a nervous disorder. Mr. Leete was born in Fair Haven and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Leete. He was twice married, his first wife dying a number of years ago. Mr. Leete was employed as a painter and was a member of the United Congregational church.

He leaves his wife, one brother, Rev. William Leete of Colorado, two nieces, Mrs. Mary Ludlow of No. 54 Shetucket street, with whom he made his home, and Mrs. Benjamin Rose of New London and one nephew, Frank Leete of Westerly.

COUNTY QUOTA SHORT FOR CITIZENS' CAMP

New London county is falling down on its quota of boys for the citizens military training camp at Camp Devens this summer. The quota for this county is 49 but so far it is far from filled. This is a chance that should not be passed up by the boys of this county. If they fully understood the advantages offered by Uncle Sam there is no doubt but that the quota would have been filled long ago. It is in fact a 30 day vacation. Boys who are accepted for the camp are provided transportation to and from their home, good food, regulation army uniforms and medical care.

Russell A. Clapp of this city, county chairman for the C. M. T. C. in an interview Friday night stated that he would like to create a competitive atmosphere between the Norwich Free Academy and Bulkeley school, New London, as one means of securing candidates for the camp. Dr. William T. Driscoll and Dr. R. R. Agnew have volunteered their services to examine candidates without any expense to them, during office hours. Mr. Clapp has a supply of application on hand and will be pleased to furish information regarding the camp.

A statement with reference to this year's camps, issued by the war department says:

To enter the C. M. T. C. you must weigh at least 100 pounds, be 58 inches tall if 17 years old, or if 18 or over, be 60 inches or more. A doctor, too, must give you a physical examination before accepted. Only young men of high moral character may enter. Your application must be indorsed by a reputable citizen of your town. The complete course at a C. M. T. C. covers four summers, but after finishing the first year, there is no obligation to continue. In the first year class—called the basic course—the beginner is taught the first steps that apply to all branches of the service. Advanced courses are called the red, the white, and the blue courses. In these courses specialized training is given in field artillery, coast artillery, engineers, cavalry, infantry, and signal corps.

LAID OUT FLOWER GARDENS AT OLD LYME ESTATES

Alexander Fraser of Black Hall, who died Friday, April 31, was born in Beneguith, Scotland, Feb. 14, 1854. He lived for several years in New Haven, where he was a member of Edgewood lodge, K. of P. and was also a charter member of the Westville fire department. Later he organized the Griset Hose company and was its first captain. Mr Fraser came to Old Lyme in 1898 and at the time of his last illness was employed by Mrs. Dows of the Boxwood hotel. He laid out the Mrs. C. H. Moss estate, also the famous flower gardens at Boxwood.

Mr. Fraser leaves his wife, five children, two brothers, four sisters and 18 grandchildren.

Norwich relatives will be in Kingston today (Saturday) for the burial of Loella Gertie, widow of William A. Avery, who died at her home in Norwich Wed. 17th.

NEW TRAFFIC REGULATOR IS TO HAVE ITS BEST TEST HERE TODAY

Norwich has had two days and a half of trial of the new blinking traffic beacon at the junction of Main, Broadway and Shetucket streets, which has been placed here on trial by the manufacturing company to see if the authorities will not be so well satisfied with its performance as to recommend its purchase at a price said to be well over $500.

A real test of the apparatus in handling the traffic at this corner is looked for this afternoon and evening when the usual Saturday quota of visitors to the city can be expected to arrive and circulate by motor vehicles and the pedestrian throng will be endeavoring to thread its way over the crosswalk locations at the corner, which have long since ceased to be visible, as they once were, when white lines were painted from one side of the street to the other.

When the automatic signal, which works with red, green and amber lights, first swung into action on Wednesday afternoon, observation showed that it afforded a number of new experiences in Norwich traffic conditions. It afforded entertainment and amusement for a good sized gallery that watched the motor vehicle drivers attempt to navigate through the zone. It afforded embarrassment, vexation and "bawlings out" for drivers who found themselves guilty of a faux pas in trying to get from Main into Shetucket street or vice versa. It furnished the unusual spectacle of long strings of standing machines, sometimes extending through Shetucket street and back through Water street as far as the Auditorium hotel and at other times extending down into Franklin square or up into Broadway, a condition but rarely seen when the regular traffic officers kept up the regular flows of machines through the difficult area.

Arguments waxed fast and furious, and about evenly divided as the curbstone debaters questioned whether the device was the right thing to be installed at the corner.

At night the automatic device is turned off at 9 o'clock, but as this was not generally known, many drivers who had solved the operation of the signals during the daytime could be seen driving up, coming to a stop and watching for the green or the amber or the red light to show before they dared proceed. After waiting long enough to satisfy themselves that nothing was going to happen, they would get under way again with a feeling of relief.

Officially it can be said that the heads of the police department who have seen the operating of traffic guidance at this point are opposed to the automatic blinking lights that impose irregular stops of 30 or 40 seconds. It is their contention that the only way to avoid congestion in this area is to keep things moving and that the traffic situation there cannot be solved by a device that halts traffic, for that will result in congestion. While admitting the value of this device at corners where there is a steady and heavy flow of traffic, they maintain that the fluctuating tide of travel at this corner can much better be regulated and directed by a human agency than by any automatic device.

For the information of those who have not yet driven where this three colored blinker is operating it may be said that when the driver approaches and sees the red light, he should stop. The red light stays on for 30 seconds, after which the amber light shows for 6 seconds. This is the caution light. The driver should not move while the amber is showing but may prepare to get into motion when the green light shows. The green light means "go", and the going should be as fast as is consistent with safety. When the green light has shown for 30 seconds, the amber light comes on again. This is again a caution warning for the driver, who should not attempt to make the corner while he can see the amber light, which will remain on for six seconds, when the red will show, bringing traffic in that direction to a standstill again, until it is released by the re-appearance of the green light. Between the changes from red to green, or from green to red, the amber always shows for six seconds.

FIND RABBI WISE LECTURE EXCITING MUCH INTEREST

At a meeting held by the arrangement committee for the lecture by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise next Tuesday night at the Palace theatre under the auspices of the Norwich Hebrew Institute, there was an attendance of 22 members of the committee of which Samuel Taylor is chairman.

Every one reported that the coming of Dr. Wise has aroused much public interest and enthusiasm and the committee that came back from New London reported a large sale of tickets there. Committees were appointed to visit Colchester, Westerly, Putnam and Willimantic.

The arrangement committee learned with surprise but with pleasure that Mrs. Wise is to accompany her husband here.

Chairman Taylor explained that on account of the request by Dr. Wise that non-Jewish people should be invited to the lecture, the place for the lecture had been changed from the Wauregan house to the Palace theatre so that more room could be available, and a vote of thanks was passed to the Palace theatre management for tendering the use of the house free of expense. It was reported that the clergymen of the city are to give notice of the Dr. Wise lecture in their pulpits Sunday and it was decided that the lectures should be the topic on Saturday in both Norwich synagogues.

A further meeting of the arrangement committee is to be held this (Saturday) evening and a meeting will be held Sunday night at the Hebrew institute at which a reception committee to Rabbi and Mrs. Wise on Tuesday will be arranged for.

CRASHED ON CURVE ON JEWETT CITY ROAD

While he was attempting to pass an oil motor truck on the Jewett City road, about a half mile north of Taftville, Friday afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock, Charles W. Carvan, 23, No. 287 West Main street, this city, collided with a Dodge coupe, headed in the opposite direction. The Dodge coupe was driven by J. G. L. Vickery, U. S. coast guard. New London and is owned by James H. Deakyne, chief master at arms at the New London coast guard station.

Mr. Carvan, driving a Ford coupe, was headed toward this city and was following the oil truck. On one of the curves on the Jewett City road about a half mile north of the velvet mill at Taftville, he swung to the left in order to pass the truck and met the Dodge coupe coming in the opposite direction. Mr. Carvan's machine was turned over on its side and he was thrown under the machine. The machine was practically wrecked. The Dodge coupe was badly damaged.

Mr. Carvan received cuts about the chin, requiring six stitches, and his nose was bruised. He was attended by Dr. David Sussler of this city. Three people, two sailors and a woman, were riding in the Dodge coupe. The woman claimed to have received a bruised knee.

Officer Nolan of the state police barracks at Danielson conducted an investigation at the scene of the accident and summoned Mr. Carvan to appear in the Lisbon town court on a charge of violation of the motor vehicle laws.

SAVE COUNTY REPORTS FOR KING'S DAUGHTERS

Reports for the King's Daughters work in New London and Windham counties were presented at the 32nd annual conference, which was held Wednesday at the Methodist church at East Thompson with an attendance of 164. The report for the two counties was written by Mrs. Charles D. Foster of this city, New London county president but was read by the secretary of the conference, Mrs. E. H. Silscox of Jewett City.

It was given as follows:

The report of the activities of the King's Daughters circles in New London and Windham counties differs from that of previous years in that it is rather incomplete. Three circles have not sent in their lists and so it is necessary to estimate the total enrollment, using last year's figures as a basis. There is one less circle in the group—Rainbow circle of Norwich. This is a junior circle whose members seemed to develop a diversity of interests and there appeared to be no one available to hold them together.

Our Windham county circles are five in number, with a membership of 96, a net loss of 10 members since last year. Cheerful Doers gained one member, Mizpah circle of Putnam remains the same, but Burden Bearers of Putnam, Earnest Workers of East Thompson and Trusting circle of Willimantic report fewer members.

Fourteen circles make up the New London county group with an estimated membership of 664, about 15 less than last year. Six circles show an estimated loss of 33, and five show a gain of 15. Every circle but one reports larger average attendance at their meetings, so it would seem that there is no lack of interest in the work. The number of members in four circles remains the same. The largest gain in new members—six—was made by the oldest circle, Charitable circle of Norwich. The total membership in both counties is estimated at 660, a loss of about 28 members. It is probable that when the lists are all returned this figure will be reduced.

Thirteen circles report their financial conditions. They received $2,266.61 and paid out $1,916.06. Euphemain circle of Norwich leads in this respect, with an income of $427.62. The Earnest Workers received $383.29, St. Jame's circle $317, Home Chapter $265.40 and Loyal circle $167.35. Some of the circles do not attempt to earn any money, devoting all their time and efforts to service, but the majority feel that it is necessary to have some funds to carry on their work successfully. One circle reports systematic Bible study and all but two open their meetings with devotional services, while these two close theirs in that way.

Fourteen circles report that they subscribe to the Silver Cross, giving a total of 31 copies. This is a very small number, but, as some circles do not answer the question, I feel sure that the number is actually much larger than this. Earnest Workers is the banner circle, taking 13 copies on a membership of 29. In the absence of Mrs. Dean I would like to say a few words to emphasize the importance of supporting our magazine. This is the official organ of our Order and the more interest we take in the magazine the larger and better it will be. It is ably and carefully edited, the articles are interesting and helpful and it is certainly worthy in every respect of the loyal support of every circle of King's Daughters. If any of our circles do not subscribe, or if any others feel that they can increase their subscriptions they should try to do so; it would be much appreciated. If any circle has an excess of back numbers of the Silver Cross they can easily find some one in their community who would be glad to receive them.

I wish to bring the subject of additional dues to your attention, as their seems to be some misunderstanding about it. Our International dues are only ten cents a member and this is hardly enough to carry on the work in view of the higher cost of living. Rather than increase the dues each circle is requested to contribute the sum of one dollar toward international expenses. This is entirely optional with the circles, but I hope that our counties will do their share in this matter. Last year 13 circles and the Independent group paid these additional dues, one circle giving $2. I would like to see this record beaten this year.

The membership lists were returned very slowly this year and, as was the case last year, the ones that came in promptly included this additional amount. Mizpah circle of Putnam, the farthest away, was the first to send in its lists, mailing them back the same day that they were received. Then came Cemfort circle of Norwich, Circle of Happy Days, Colchester, Earnest Workers of East Thompson, and Loyal circle of Norwich, in the order given.

Perhaps some of you wonder just what this Independent List that we refer to means. Their report shows clearly what it is and if any one knows of a King's Daughter who is not a member of any circle and who would like to keep her name on the roll of the Order the name should be sent either to Mrs. Edward A. Smith of Mystic, or to myself. We do not want to lose any interested members.

With the passing of time we are bound to have losses among our older members. I would urge, therefore, that we constantly try to recruit our ranks, either by taking members into the existing circles, or by encouraging the formation of new circles, preferably of young people. Let us hope that the next conference the county president's report will show a substantial increase in membership.

The two inspiring addresses were by Mrs. George H Prior of Jewett City, international president, who presided at the morning session, and by Miss Mary R. Woodruff of New Haven, state president.

Mrs. Prior's talk was based on the subject Proclaim Liberty. She spoke of the 150th anniversary to be held soon in Philadelphia to celebrate the birthday of the United States. The Liberty Bell which never rang in a perfect independence, and because it was cracked never sounded a perfect note, was the base of her talk. She said she wished it would ring again and ring by using the letters of the word Liberty to form another word. They were Law—ring out Irreverance—Broadcasting of evil by newspaper—Era of Evasion—Restlessness—Tension and Yielding Convictions. Each one of which she enlarged upon. The bell originally had inscribed upon it Proclaim Liberty through the land to all inhabitants thereof. The Bible says if the Son therefore make you free ye shall be free indeed.

The address by Miss Woodruff was on, One Increasing Purpose, taken from Hutchinson's book by that name. We must have the right stimulus, for there is no response without a stimulus. We can have anything we want if we pay the price. We cannot stand still, we must be active, and have some purpose and keep at it. She was very much of the plan being agitated that all children must go to church one hour of the school week, and said if we did not have religion in our schools there will be a pagan element in the schools. She closed with a poem commencing "I slowly found some work to do."

The conference roll call by the secretary showed the circles represented as follows: Burden Bearers 2, Charitable 3, Cheerful Doers 4, Comfort 4, Dorcas 11, Earnest Workers, 22, Euphemian 6, Ever Ready 4, Friendship 6, Grace 6, Happy Days 1, Home Chapter 32, Loyal 5, Mizpah, Putnam 2, Mizpah, New London 9, St. James 5, Trusting 5,

How Rinso saves me money on washday

I USED to buy all sorts of things to get the wash clean and white—bar soaps, chipped soaps, washing powders.

But since I discovered Rinso, I've been using nothing else. Not only does it save my strength, but it saves me money because it's the only soap I need.

The heavy Rinso package is filled with the compact Rinso grains that dissolve so quickly, soak out the dirt and stains, and get the wash snowy white—without a bit of hard rubbing!

And I don't need to waste gas under a boiler, because Rinso soaking whitens better than boiling—and sterilizes, too!

Just ask your grocer for

R. G. MILLER TEAM OF HARTFORD WILL PLAY RIVERVIEW CLUB THIS AFTERNOON

Today's Lineups

Riverview	Millers
Normandin, ss	lf, Belesso
Whitney, 3b	1b, Westine
Hamil, 1b	2b, Riley
Mills, F	c, Haubend
Liberty, 2b	ss, Devito
Moore, cf	cf, Cunningham
Chapman, rf	rf, Torrant
Belair, c	2b, Salad
West, p	p, Buckland
Gibbon, p	p, Fisher

Manager Paul Zemke of the Riverview club will send his team against the fastest combination that has been seen this season this afternoon when the Riverview club clashes with the R. G. Miller team of Hartford at the State hospital. The R. G. Miller team is a team that is made up of former Capitol city players and men from the All-Insurance team. Many of them have played here before and it will be remembered that the Capitol city team was one of the few teams to defeat the Riverview club last season.

It will be noticed from the lineup of the Riverview team that Manager Zemke has made two changes in the personnel of the team. Eddie Burns has left the Riverview club to play with a New London team and his place is taken by Courtland Whitney, former Middlebury college infielder. Whitney has been playing good ball this year and should fill in well at the keystone sack along with Normandin at short. Whit is fast and covers plenty of ground and has a perfect arm. He will bat in second position which is his natural place on a batting order.

In rightfield a lad by the name of Chapman from New London will be given a tryout. Chapman has been playing exceptionally good ball in New London during the early part of the season and attracted the attention of Manager Zemke who decided to give the lad a chance. Rightfield on the Riverview club has been a weak place and a good outfielder is needed.

The R. G. Miller team containg some familiar names in Buckland, Fisher, DeVito, Hauband and Salad. Buckland will be the choice of the Miller manager to start the game and Lefty is one pitcher that is able to hold the Riverview hitters and has pitched well against the local team on every occasion. Fisher is the reserve hurler and he is no mean little hurler either.

The game is scheduled for 2:45 o'clock and there will be busses to and from the game.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOL LEAGUE OPENS NEXT TUESDAY

The Parochial school league will swing into action next Tuesday afternoon with games at Duwell field and the J. B. Martin diamonds which have been secured for the league season. Four teams will comprise the league and are as follows: St. Patrick's school, St. Mary's school, Sacred Heart school of Taftville and the St. Joseph's school. Two games a week will be played one at Duwell field and one at the J. B. Martin diamond.

There is plenty of rivalry between the teams and each has been practicing hard during the past few weeks in preparation for the opening games. It is expected that the winner of the Parochial league will issue a challenge to the winner of the grammer school league for the school championship of the city. A schedule for the league will be published later.

WARRIORS EXPECT HARD BATTLE AT YANTIC SUNDAY

Everything is in readiness at the Yantic Mills diamond for the game Sunday afternoon between the Warriors and the Yantic A. A. baseball teams. The diamond has been put in A1 shape, the infield being rolled and skinned so that a fast game can be anticipated.

A change has been made in the Warriors lineup, namely Fred Marchand will cover third base in place of Leo Hamil who will be unable to perform Sunday. Marchand is one of the mainstays of the '25 team and his presence should add strength both defensively and offensively.

The batteries will be as follows: Couture and Capt. Jab Burns for the Warriors with Steve Fesick and B. Steinman for Yantic A. A.

The game is scheduled for 3:00 p. m. D. S. T.

CUBS BLANK GIANTS KAUFMANN GIVING 4 HITS

CHICAGO, May 7.—(AP)—Chicago bunched hits off Jack Scott and Jimmy Ring today, driving the former off the mound in the sixth inning, and shutout the New York Giants, 6 to 0. Tony Kaufmann held the visitors to four scattered hits and did not issue a pass. Wilson injured his leg in batting practice, but remained in the game until the ninth inning.

Kaufmann did not allow a Giant to reach second base. Three of the six New Yorkers who reached first base were left stranded on the initial sack. Score:

ACADEMY TEAM CLASHES WITH FAST TORRINGTON HIGH THIS AFTERNOON

Today's Lineups

Academy	Torrington
Cieslkoski, 2b	1b, Halligan
Sadinsky, lf	2b, Tucker
Jarvis, p	3b, Marchione
Tyrrell, ss	lf, Zapdo
Burke, 1b	ss, Meszkowski
Goldblatt, c	c, Benvenutti
Yerrington, 3b	cf, O'Connell
Greene, cf	rf, Donohue
Brewer, rf	p, Kelley

Norwich Free Academy baseball team after eight straight victories will stack up this afternoon against one of the most formidable foes in high school baseball when Torrington high will be the opponents. Torrington is reputed to be an even better team than Crosby high of Waterbury and the Academy will have a busy afternoon if Torrington is to be sent back with he short end of the score.

Coach Brigham, realising that in Torrington his charges will face one of the leading high school teams in Connecticut, put the Academy team through three days of intensive work and on Friday evening reported the team in the best of shape. The game Tuesday with Chapman, although an easy victory for the Academy, showed that the local boys are not the finished team that they should be. Several runs were thrown away in the Chapman game by Academy players neglecting to slide into bases, and there were other little things that must not be allowed to occur in today's battle if the Academy would win.

Lloyd Jarvis who shut out Crosby on Saturday last will again take the mound today and is expected to hold the invaders well in hand. Jarvis, however, will be faced by a team that is made up of hard hitters and it will be a more difficult task than last Saturday. Mace Goldblatt will be on the receiving end and Mace is showing up exceptionally well in this position, and he is putting a great deal of life into the team.

Ray Yerrington who has been hitting in fourth position has been dropped down the list as he has not been connecting as he should during the season. Yerrington is normally a hard and sure hitter but as yet has failed to show anything with the stick. His fielding is sure and he is a tower of strength at the third sack.

Right field has been giving Coach Brigham plenty of worry and he yet has to find a good defensive layer and at the same time one that can hit. Brewer will probably start the game although Ducky Jackson has been showing up well in this berth.

The remainder of the lineup will be the same as defeated Chapman on Tuesday.

The game is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

OPENING GAME AT JEWETT CITY SUNDAY

Sunday afternoon at Ashland park the Ashland A. A. will attempt to bump the Danielson club for a second victory. Last week Ashland defeated Danielson 14-4, but the Danielson contingent is determined to reverse the score of the first encounter.

Both teams will use practically the same lineup though it is rumored about town that Danielson has secured the services of a crack battery from Providence. Last week Ashland was on a batting spurt, gathering 19 hits and their fielding was excellent.

It will be the first opportunity for local and Norwich fans to witness the work of the boys that are to play the leading clubs in the state. This team is absolutely the best team to represent Jewett City in recent years and you will remember that last year Jewett City had quite a wagon. "Spike" Liberty has shown that he is pitching far better than last summer and last summer he was credited with victories over some strong clubs. Sundays and one twilight game a week. Manager "Bill" Liberty plans to meet at home the strongest team available and local fans are assured of a whiz bang season. Let's get the old spirit and crowd the ball park Sunday and cheer for a team that is worthy.

As an added attraction, Courtney Whitney, Middlebury college star, has been signed and will cover second base throughout the season.

Lineup for Sunday: Ashland, "Bill" Liberty, c; "Spike" Liberty, p; Kaduda, 1b; Magrey, ss; Whitney, 3b; "Chip" Dugas, 2b; Gilbert, lf; Raill, cf; Zavistoski, rf; Stanley Taper and Robertson, utility.

Danielson: Gasiorek, c; Burocku of Attleboro, p; Frechette of Moosup, 1b; "Joe" Kendricks of Moosup, ss; Allard of Bryant-Straton, 2b; Aubiu, 3b; La Gasse, lf; Thomas of Providence, cf; Develly of Providence, rf; Ashley and Lafave, utility.

The home club will be seen for the first time in their new uniforms.

The grounds have been put in first class condition and everything is set and waiting for Umpire Tommy Corcoran to yell "play ball!"

WESTERLY MARKSMEN HANG UP SOME GOOD SCORES

The third of a series of rifle range shoots was held on the State Armory range on Dixon street, Westerly on Wednesday evening between teams of the Westerly Rifle club. It was originally scheduled to shoot with the rifle team of Battery E, 243rd R. I. C. A. C. (H. D.) stationed at the armory, but the latter team failed to appear and a shoot was held between two teams of the Westerly Rifle club.

For the Westerly Rifle club, President Thomas A. Ornberg would like to arrange match shoots with other rifle teams in Connecticut and Rhode Island. It is possible that the shoot with the Battery E team will takep lace on the range in the basement of the Westerly armory on next Wednesday evening.

HEWITT ELECTED CAPTAIN OF AGGIE FROSH BASEBALL

STORRS,

The Happy Wanderers

To wander here, to wander there,
Without a thought, without a care,
'Tis then, indeed, that life is fair.
—Old Mother West Wind.

Mrs. Grouse and her family, which now included Mr. Grouse, were homeless. Now, that isn't as bad as it sounds. As a matter of fact, they were more so now than before, if that were possible. You see, they were wandering about.

It was great fun. Each day there was something new to see. Probably you wouldn't have seen much new, but the Grouse did. A new tree in the Green Forest was to those young Grouse just what a new building in your neighborhood would be.

Mr. and Mrs. Grouse talked things over occasionally. "We must teach these youngsters to know every part of the Green Forest they are likely to ever need to visit" said Mr. Grouse "and I am just the one to do it." Mr. Grouse swelled himself up and looked very important when he said this, shook out his feathers, fanned his tail and strutted.

"Yes, my dear," said Mrs. Grouse meekly, but with a twinkle in her eyes. "I don't know of any one who knows this country better. She didn't mention the fact that there were some parts of it that she had showed Mr. Grouse.

So Mr. Grouse importantly led his family to all his favorite places. He showed them where the beechnuts would be plentiful in the fall. He showed them where they would find wild grapes at frost time. He showed them the best way of getting out of brambly tangles when hunters should come in the fall. He showed them where they could find water in the driest weather. He took them to the thickest hemlock trees. He showed them where there were skunk cabbage seeds to be found. He led them to where the blackberries grow. He showed them the thorn apple trees. He knew exactly where in a certain old road was the very best place to take a dust bath.

Mr. Grouse importantly led his family to all his favorite places

So it was that they wandered on and had a beautiful time and all the time were learning those things which would be of the greatest use to them in the future. Sometimes, hidden beside the road, they peeped out and saw those two-legged creatures called men and Mr. Grouse explained how these were the greatest enemies of all—the most dangerous enemies.

"There will come a time when the weather is cool," said Mr. Grouse, "that these two-legged creatures will come for us. It would not be so bad if they tried to get us as others do, but they carry things which spit forth fire and smoke, which hurt while they are yet a considerable distance. So it is well to learn every thicket, every brush-heap, every hill and valley and gulley, every path and road and bramble-tangle, against the day when they may be needed. For that day will surely come. It is the Grouse who knows best how to put between himself and trees between him and one of these two-legged creatures who is most likely to escape."

Mrs. Grouse nodded her head. "True, very true," said she. "And children, there is no one who knows how to do these things better than does your father. If you do as he tells you and follow his example, you will live long. You will live to become gray, and the Grouse who these days lives to become gray is a wise bird. What these two-legged creatures want to kill us for I don't know."

And so the summer passed and the young Grouse, as big as their parents, still kept together awaiting the coming of the dreadful hunting time.

POETRY

Green Boughs

Birds were singing everywhere
In the sunny spaces,
Each bird, though the finest were Speaking through the flashing air
Full of glee and grace.

Up and down and round about,
Soaring, gliding, swinging,
Darting in and scudding out,
Gaily through all the pretty rout
Came their frantic singing.

And upon the sunny view
Happy trees were holding Pretty baby leaves anew,
Freshly bathed in the dew,
For the sun's beholding.
—James Stephens, in "Songs from the Clay."

The Rise of Man

Thou for whose birth the whole creation yearned
Through countless ages of the morning world,
Who, first in fiery vapors dimly hurled
Next to the flameless crystal slowly turned,
Then to the plant which grew to something more—
Humblest of creatures that draw breath of life—
Wherefrom through latitudes of patient pain
Came conscious man to reason and adore!
Shall we be shamed beauties such things have been,
Or hate one jot of our ancestral pride?
Nay, in thyself art thou not defied
That from such depths thou couldst such summits win?
While the long way behind is prophecy
Of those perfections which are yet to be.
—John White Chadwick.

Birds no longer use their own wings in at least one type of migration—they travel by airplane, Dr. John C. Phillips, of Boston, in a lecture, told his hearers how Hungarian partridges, destined for introduction in American game preserves, are carried from Czechoslovakia to London in special cages on planes, and then transferred to fast ocean liners for the trans-Atlantic voyage. The Hungarian partridge has made itself thoroughly at home in the west, Dr. Phillips said, but so far has not been successfully introduced into the eastern part of this country.

MOOSE

The only children's bank conducted exclusively for children is operated at Mooseheart, Ill. This children's bank at this time has deposits totalling $13,000, and these deposits are guaranteed by the assets of the Loyal Order of Moose, which total $35,000,000.

Everyone of the 1,300 children at Mooseheart is a depositor in the bank. This unique bank is operated like any national bank, yet it has no president, directors or officers. All phases of banking are carried on, including all kinds of deposits and the making of loans. The bank is a part of the school curriculum, so that the children will have gained a thorough knowledge of how to deal with banks, for their benefit after they have completed their school career.

Loans of money are made to the older children, who wish to buy articles which are called luxuries. All necessities of life are provided for the Mooseheart children. Yet bicycles, roller skates and the like are listed as luxuries and children wishing for them may get them with their own money. If their bank account would not warrant making the expenditure they are permitted to make a loan, providing the superintendent grants permission. No interest is charged for the use of the money, although a phantom charge for interest is made to let them know that it costs money to use money or others. The children's bank is the means of teaching the children thrift and they are taught how to spend money judiciously.

Money is accumulated by the children in various ways. There has never been corporal punishment at Mooseheart. The merit and demerit system is used. The smaller children are given a gold star for each day they violate no rule in either their cottage or the kindergarten and low rooms in the school. For each gold star a penny is deposited in the bank to their credit. If they lose a star, they lose the credit of 14 cents for the week. Of each 14 cents deposited in the bank they are permitted to spend four cents the week. Older boys and girls, who are employed at tasks outside of their regular assignments are paid a fixed hourly salary and earn money that way. All accounts in the children's bank are divided equally between the checking and savings accounts. After a child has accumulated $10, a savings account in his name is opened with a bank in an outside city, so that the account can draw interest.

MACCABEES

On May 23 the cornerstone of the Maccabees new $2,500,000 international headquarters, said to be the finest home office building owned by a fraternal benefit society in the world, will be laid in Detroit. Numerous delegations from tents in nearby states are expected to attend the ceremonies, which will end with a mammoth parade.

The Maccabees building will be 14 stories high and faced with Indiana limestone. Besides the offices, the building will contain lodge rooms and an auditorium seating 750 people. Stores will occupy the first floor, and in the basement will be one of the strongest bank vaults in the country where the society's $27,000,000 reserve funds will be kept. There will be ozone treated circulating ice water on every floor and a ventilating system using ozone treated air on the lower floors. The ceiling of the lobby will be of glass mosaic of a kind found in only two other buildings in the United States.

Ground was broken for the building on December 29 and it will be ready for occupancy January 1, 1927. It is being erected as a monument to American fraternity, and in 1928 the Maccabees will celebrate their fiftieth anniversary there.

I. O. O. L., M. U.

The regular meeting of Loyal Victory lodge, No. 4, was held in Steiner's hall, Thursday, May 6th. Noble Grand Mary Greenhalgh in the chair. AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

The regular meeting of the Women's auxiliary of Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, was held Monday night at the post room on Shetucket street. The meeting was in charge of Miss Evon Broadhurst, secretary, and after the usual reports had been made, plans were talked over concerning the making of poppies to be used in decorating the graves of ex-service men in the several local cemeteries.

A number of members plan to attend the state meeting at Hartford on May 20th, at which time Legion posts and auxiliaries will be represented.

Mrs. Ruth Grayson, in charge of the poppies to be sold on Memorial day reported much progress and it is anticipated that the sale will be unusually large this year, thus bringing money into the auxiliary treasury to be used in the welfare work among disabled veterans in Norwich hospitals.

The auxiliary is also planning for an invitation whist and social for the next meeting this month.

ANCIENT ORDER HIBERNIANS

It is expected that the degree work will be done by a visiting degree team, making the meeting one of particular interest that will draw out a large attendance. There will be about 18 candidates to go through the degrees.

Connecticut College

The Junior Prom activities at college began with a one-act play given in the gymnasium on Friday evening. The title was "Columbine and Harlequin." Those in the cast were Miss Edith Clark as Pierrot, Margaret Battles as Columbine and Eleanor Wood as Harlequin. After the short play there was given again the successful "Quality Street" for the seniors, juniors and their guests. Dancing was enjoyed until one-thirty to music furnished by Worth Hills orchestra. The dance was held in Colonial hall where the ballroom was attractively decorated with spring flowers, roses and snap dragons. Dr. Mary E. Benedict and Dr. and Mrs. Jense were receiving.

Miss Constance Clapp of Lincoln avenue attended the dance with Robert Langdon of Farmington, Connecticut. Miss Lucy Gilman of Bozrahville attended with Julius Fraun of New York city. Willis Austin, Jr., of Norwich was the escort of Miss Marjory Lloyd of Chicago, Ill.

On Saturday morning there is to be a baseball game between the junior girls and their men. Those chosen to be on the team are Ruth Battey of Haverford, Pa.; Sue Chittenden of East River; Margaret Elliott of Upper Montclair, N. J., Isabel Grinnell of Mystic; Florence Hopper of Ridgewood; Mary Jerman of Chicago, Ill.; Marian Lambson of Marlboro, Mass.; Constance Noble of New York city; Lois Penney of Richmond Hills, N. Y.; Sara Pithouse of Philadelphia, Pa., and Minnie Watchinsky of New London. The game is always a rather one-sided one in spite of the fact that the men are supposedly sufficiently handicapped by girls' apparel and the enforced rule of batting with the left hand only and running backwards to first base. However, this is considered as one of the most exciting and rousing events of the year.

From three to six on Saturday there is to be tea dancing in Colonial. Miss Gertrude Reasky is to give a novelty dance in the ballroom. The patrons and patronesses are Dr. and Mrs. Jensen and Dr. Setchanove.

Saturday night there is to be dancing in Colonial hall from 7:30 until 11:30. The third dance is the grand march which is to be led by Miss Lois Penney of Richmond Hills and Charles Storer of Chicago. Those in the receiving line are to be President and Mrs. Benjamin T. Marshall, Doctor Satchanove and Dean Nye. The seventh and eighth dances are supper dances. Refreshments are to be served by freshmen in b. maids costumes. The Misses Priscilla Rothwell, Catherine Ranney, Mary Congdon, Francis Frear, Helen Kernen, Lillian Rixey, Anne Sewell, Gertrude Reaske, Muriel Whitehead, Phyllis Barchard, Mary Slater and Mary Woodley were chosen as waitresses. Miss Katherine Ranney and Miss Mary Slater are to do a bellhop and maid dance. Miss Elizabeth Fowler of West Roxbury, Mass., is head of the decorations committee. Assisting her are the Misses Lyda Chatfield of Waterbury, Conn., and Katherine Sembrada of Brooklyn, N. Y. The chairman of the entertainment committee is Miss Mary Storer. Assisting her are Miss Lois Bridge, Miss Edith Clark, Katherine Foster, Katherine Sembrada and Lyda Chatfield.

Seven Thrones Beckon To Princess Ileana

Princess Ileana, youngest daughter of Queen Marie, the stepmother of the Balkans and ranking number one among the Royal matchmakers, has reached the age to marry. Seven Crown Princes, those of England, Norway, Sweden, Bulgaria, Italy, Belgium and Spain, have yet to select their future Queens, and it is to those that Queen Marie is looking for a mate for her daughter. One sister of Ileana is Queen of Jugo-Slavia, while another is Crown Princess of Greece, so there is a precedent established that must be followed. The photo, the latest to be made of the Princess, shows Ileana with her pet puppy.

NOW GOING ON

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week the officials of the local fire department, then a volunteer department, were considering plans for the annual spring parade. No definite action had been taken up to that week as the firemen decided to wait a few days to ascertain what plans the city intended to make for a general celebration of the 4th of July, the intention being to combine the spring fire parade and the 4th of July celebration. The week, as a whole, was a quiet one in Norwich. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of May, 1873, are as follows:

Monday, May 1, 1873—At this season, the question which interests a boy is not so much whether his life will be crowned with glory and honor, as whether his new summer vest is going to be made out of his father's old trousers.

A meeting of the chief assistant and firemen of the fire department was held Saturday night to discuss the spring parade. It was decided to wait two weeks to see what arrangements would be made by the city for a general celebration of the 4th of July and whether the department would be ordered out at that time. The general feeling was in favor of making the semi-annual parade without reference to the municipal action.

It will be necessary to put braces under the flooring of the Laurel Hill bridge. The roadway will probably be opened to travel on Wednesday.

Tuesday, May 2, 1873—The Rev. W. B. Heath who for a year past has officiated as pastor of the A. M. E. Zion church in this city receives a donation from the members of that church this evening and tomorrow goes to attend the Boston conference. It is doubtful whether he be reappointed to this charge again.

The manly friends of our fellow townsman Mr. S. L. Ewarts, will take pleasure in learning that he has returned from the Pacific coast greatly improved in health.

Mr. Charles Young's horse ran away on Main street yesterday morning and the wagon smashed the windows in Stearns and Safford's stores. Mr. Young was thrown through the window into the former store but escaped with no more serious injury than a few slight cuts.

Wednesday, May 3, 1873—Twenty-two tramps were taken from the station house at seven o'clock yesterday morning under charge of a policeman and marched in squads to Lincoln square where they were put to work digging a trench for a new sewer. They made no objections and worked well. The idea of putting the men to work originated with the street committee of the common council and is an excellent one. Street Commissioner Cole said he never saw laborers work better than these yesterday. The city may be relieved of considerable expense by following the system this introduced.

At the adjourned meeting in Preston, Monday evening, in regard to rebuilding the Greeneville bridge, Selectman Nathan D. Bates made a verbal report of the conferences held with the selectmen of Norwich on the subject, and stated that a contract had been entered into with William B. Burdick to raise the Salem bridge from the river for the sum of $600. The report was accepted.

Twenty-two laborers from New York, for Boston, came up on the City of Lawrence yesterday. Most of them were Italians.

Thursday, May 4, 1873—The Rev. A. F. Spalding, having closed his labors with the First Baptist church of this city, was invited to a supper last evening, which was given in the vestry of the church. Mr. Spalding has now been in this city for five years and by his ability to duty and kindliness of disposition, has won hosts of friends. After supper, the Rev. John Davies of the Central Baptist church, in a few appropriate words, presented the retiring pastor with a very handsome upholstered chair. Mr. Spalding was completely taken by surprise but he proved himself equal to the occasion and very appropriately acknowledged the gift.

Half the able-bodied male population of Norwich were out of town yesterday treating and the other half went to Hartford. The streets in consequence looked like the grounds of Yale college at recess.

The 26th and 21st Regiments C. V. meet in annual reunion at Mystic Bridge the 16th inst.

Friday, May 5, 1873—The Norwich City Band lost heavily by the fire in their bandroom and among the instruments destroyed was a horn valued at $150 and other valuable pieces. A subscription has been opened for their benefit and contributions may be made at Tubb's store on Franklin square.

Dr. T. S. Hunt, late of this city, is among the appointments on the board of judges for the centennial exhibition. Dr. Hunt has declined the invitation extended him to take the professorship of geology and mineralogy in the University of Cincinnati.

The little steamer Endeavor will make a trip to New London Sunday morning giving the first opportunity for a sail down the river.

A fine Corliss engine has been put in the factory of the Thames River Worsted company on Franklin street.

Saturday, May 6, 1873—The New London Northern road is to be relaid between Norwich and New London with steel rails, 400 tons of which have already arrived. They were being distributed yesterday and the work will be begun at once. The passenger trains on the road are to be equipped with the Westinghouse air-brake as soon as possible. The air pumps are now being put on several engines.

Mary —— of this city, who has been described as an old female tramp, has been arrested in Worcester as a vagrant.

Representatives from the Central M. E. church will resume services at the almshouse tomorrow at half past one o'clock. This church conducts services there on the first and third Sundays of each month.

CANTERBURY GREEN

The annual speaking contest of the town schools took place Thursday evening at the church on the Green, which had been effectively decorated. Each school in town was represented by a speaker. The judges were people from out of town. There was singing by the schools. The contest was won by Helen Bakaranskas of the Gay Head district. Ina Eastlund, of North Society school, won in spelling.

Rev. Mr. Cooper, who preached last Sunday was entertained by Mrs. Henry Larkham. He was accompanied by his wife and baby. MERCHANTS IN CHINA TO FIGHT LAWLESSNESS

Faced by an alarming increase in lawlessness, Chinese merchants living in Chapei, outside of Shanghai's international settlement, have decided to form their own protection corps. Plans have been discussed for the raising of sufficient funds.

One protective force already exists, but Chapei merchants at the other side of the city claim that this corps does not sufficiently protect their interests. Recently the Chinese police chief, Col. Yen Chung-yang, was obliged to increase his force, but owing to the uncertainties of the general political situation the increase was not adequate.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

Will You Love Me, When I'm Old

I will ask of you my darling
A question soft and low
That gives me many a heartache
As the moments come and go.

Your love I know is truthful
But the truest love grows cold
It is this that I would ask you.
Will you love me when I'm old?

Down the stream of life together,
We are drifting side by side
Hoping some bright day to anchor
Safe beyond the surging tide.

For today our sky is cloudless
But the nightmare clouds unfold
And the storm may gather 'round us.
Will you love me when I'm old?

When my hair shall theme the snow drift
And my eyes shall dimmer grow,
I would lean upon some loved one,
Through the valley as I go.

I would claim of you a promise
Worth to me a world of gold
It is only this my darling
Will you love me when I'm old?

Chorus

Life's morn will soon be waning
And it's evening bells be till'd,
And my heart will know no sadness,
If you'll love me when I'm old.

Sent in by IDALEANE, E. E. F. F. and BALSAM FIR.

Do They Miss Me at Home

Do they miss me at home, do they miss me,
It would be an assurance most clear,
To know that this moment some loved one,
Were saying I wish he were here.
To know that the group at the fireside,
Were thinking of me as I roam
Oh yes 'Twould be joy beyond measure
To know that they miss me at home.
To know that they miss me at home.

When twilight approaches the season,
That ever is sacred to song
Will some one repeat my name over,
And sigh that I tarry so long.
And is there a chord in the chorus
That's missed when my voice is away
And a chord in each heart that awaketh,
Regret at my wearisome stay.
Regret at my wearisome stay.

Do they set me a chair at the table
When evenings home pleasures are nigh,
When the candles are lit in the parlor,
And stare in the calm asure sky.
And when be good nights are repeated
And all lay them down to their sleep,
Do they think of the absent and lonely
A whispered good night while they weep
A whispered good night while they weep.

Do they miss me at home , do they miss me.
At morning at noon or at night,
And linger one gloomy shade'round them,
Which only my presence can light,
Are joys less invitingly welcome,
And pleasures less halcyon before,
Because one is missed from the circle,
Because I am with them no more
Because I am with them no more
Sent in by IDALEANE.

Do They Think of Me at Home?

Do they think of me at home,
Do they ever think of me?
I who shared their every grief,
I who mingled in their glee.
Have their hearts grown old and strange,
To the one now doomed to roam?
I would give the world to know—
Do they think of me at home?

Do they think of me at eve?
Of the songs I used to sing?
Is harp I strung untouched?
Does a stranger wake the string?

Will no kind, forgiving word
Come across the raging foam?
Shall I never come to sigh
Do they think of me at home?

Do they think of how I loved,
In my happy, early days?
Do they think of him who came,
But could never win their praise?

I am happy by his side.
And from mine he'll never roam,
But my heart will sadly ask—
Do they think of me at home?

"Wanted, An Inn"

Is the road that crosses each today
Stony, up hill and steep?
Ah yes, my friend! all of the way
And life's sands are oftimes deep.

Are the nights that come as dark as these
And must we wonder on without rest?
Ah no, my friend! bright stars one sees
And our trials are only a test.

Is there an Inn, at the end of the road,
Where one may become a guest?
Certainly friend a wondrous abode
With a host who is one of the best.

Will I find that His house is full to the door
And are there chances he'll turn me away,
Never! His welcome will be! There's room for one more
Cast off your burden and stay.

If its food that I lack will be place me to dine.
At a table of plenty that is good?
Indeed dear friend enough you will find
It is free! and the best 'tis God's food.

Old Mothers

I love old mothers — old mothers with white hair,
And kindly eyes, and lips grown softly sweet,
With numbered blessings over sleeping babes.
There is a something in their quiet grace
That speaks the calm of Sabbath afternoons:
A knowledge in their deep, unfolding eyes
That far outreaches all philosophy.
Time, with caressing touch, about them weaves
The silver-threaded fairy shawl of age,
While all the echoes of forgotten songs
Seemed proud to lend a sweetness to their speech.

Old mothers! As they pass with slow-timed steps,
Their trembling hands clasp gently to youth's strength.
Sweet mothers! As they pass, one sees again

The Sowers

The men who sowed in toil and tears
The seed of Freedom are not fled;
Their spirits mock the wasting years,
They are alive, not dead.

Time lays no cold, corroding hand
On them; their deeds are potent still,
As when, they made their sublime stand
Against a tyrant's will.

As when through April fields they came
In homespun, at their country's call,
And silencing each sordid claim,
To freedom gave their all.

As when they faced, with souls resigned,
A world-wide empire's proud array,
And blazed forever for mankind
A broader, surer way.

They are not dead; where'er one turns
Their presence broods o'er mead and mound;
No bush unreluctantly burns,
Yet, this is holy ground.

Aye, holy! Through each glen and glade,
We well may walk with feet unshod
Since from this common soil was made
A shrine to Freedom's God.

The men who toiled in blood and tears
The splendid harvest of the years
Which we today possess?

What prophet then beheld, unrolled,
The wonder that was yet to be;
What dreamer, horseover bold,
Such majesty could see?

This widespread nation, far outflung
From oceans verge to ocean's verge;
These eager-hearted millions sprung
From many a racial merge.

These lands, these prairies, rich with grain,
These mines and milled these spires and domes,
These cities of the hill and plain.
These myriad hearths and homes:

This flag that holds in every line
The homage of our love and awe.
Each star and stripe a sacred sign
Of Freedom, framed in law—

The men who faced the British guns,
For no such mighty vision fought.
But God's high purpose far outruns
The goal of human thought!

And howso'er their conflict seemed.
He blessed the sturdy hearts they bore,
And magnified the dream they dreamed
A thousandfold and more!

The men who sowed in toil and tears
Their Freedom's seed—what do they say
Across the intervening years
To us and ours today?

I think I hear this message plain.
This lesson set for word and deed,
"Go forth, O countrymen! again.
And sow the precious seed.

"For Freedom grows from age to age.
Each age must have a larger yield,
Then take this toilsome heritage
And work in Freedom's field!

"Today no royal master's wrath
May fill the land with foreign foes,
But there are lions in the path
May well be worse than those.

"Your quarrel may not be with kings
Or princes of a power outgrown,
But think not all your danger springs
From kingly crown and throne.

"No, there are tyrannies that mask
In goodly garb a hateful form
Behold, there lies your present task,
There frowns your future storm!

"Against the money-minded rogue
Abusing privilege and power,
Against the senseless demagogue
With social poison sour.

"Against the spirit that would turn
Your mind to balk a brother's right,
Come, patriot of today, and learn
To fight another fight!

"Think not the work has all been done
By those who scorned a king's decree,
Nor that there are battles to be won
By all who would be free!

"Still must the few forget their fears
When manhood's bugle-call is blown,
For verily, through all the years
Must Freedom's seed be sown!"

VISIT TO CLUB NO. 2

Dear Social Corner Members: On Wednesday Cosmos and myself spent the day with Club No. 2. This was our second visit and such good times as we had on both visits. We were glad to find some of our old sisters there so Club No. 6 was well represented. That showed how we appreciated the sisters coming to see us.

Crimson Rambler: Where were you such a nice day? Too busy, I imagine.

Was hoping we would see Olga. Lonesome Pine and Prudence but have heard they were with Club No. 5. I do wish clubs No. 3 and 5 did not both meet on one day.

Mittie and Strawberry served a fine dinner. Joan gave us some good music and there were several readings with Sarah T in the lead.

I was glad to see in last week's Corner page so many letters from the new sisters even if some names were misspelled.

Nancy Peck: I think you have the wrong number, haven't you?

By Jingo: Just present yourself at our next meeting.

Country Sister: I met Necia and she told me what a time you have had. Hope you soon get well.

Catnip: Glad I saw you.

THE MANY USES OF SALT

Dear Social Corner Editor and Cornerites: How many times I have thought. I would get time to write for the Saturday page, in fact have started several letters when interruptions came and I was not able to finish, the next I will say to stop it I can finish and send in my letter. I can also keep housecleaning although the weather does not keep very springlike.

Still I suppose many of the housekeepers are about through with their cleaning and will be resting while the rest of us are finishing up.

But never mind, hope to finish before the days get too hot.

I will give a few hints on the varied uses salt can be put to besides cooking purposes. As we all know it is one of the necessaries in the culinary department and about the most reasonable article we buy. But just notice how many uses it can be put to.

Salt thrown on a coal fire, when it is low, will revive it.

Salt in white wash, makes it stick.

Salt put on an ink spot when freshly spilled, will help in removing the stain.

Salt thrown on soot which has fallen on a carpet, will prevent stain.

Salt and soda are excellent for bee stings or spider bites.

Salt puts out a fire in the chimney.

Salt and vinegar will remove stains from discolored teacups.

Salt as a gargle, will cure a sore throat.

Salt in a solution will cure a head cold when inhaled.

Salt water is good to clean willowware and straw matting.

Salt in the oven, under the baking tins, will prevent scorching on the bottom.

Salt sprinkled on ice covered walks and steps will melt the ice and make safe walking.

Salt in coffee (just a pinch) makes a splendid flavor.

Hope these hints will help solve some one's problems.

I remember once talking with a lady about the uses of salt and she told me she added a tiny bit of salt to everything she cooked.

Sincerely hope all the sick have recovered and send deepest sympathy to all in trouble.

Will not take any more valuable space but will wish good luck to all. Glad to see the number of writers increasing.

Best wishes.

ECLIPSE.

A DAY OF SURPRISES

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Having been a reader of the Social Corner it was started and reading the invitation for all interested in forming since it was started, reading the invitation of Tatting I decided to go even if I was a Shore Line club to meet at the home a member of several organizations and had said I could not join any more. After ringing the door bell was surprised to have Pansy open it and give me a gracious welcome and then when inside her mother Cute was surprise number 2 and before I recovered from that E. L. M. rushed in to see who the new comer was and I said, "De tell me who else is here that I know" and she said, "Idaleane, Rebecca, Cosmos and Dorothy Bradford." It was surprise No. 3 to meet two of my former neighbors. After those at the first table had finished dinner I sat down with the three who had furnished it. E. L. M., Tatting and Interested Reader and a few others and had surprise No. 4 to have such a bountiful dinner and those at the first table couldn't eat all the good things the supply was inexhaustible and equal to what I have had at Stonington Manor Inn and Mohican hotel, except the style. Soon as dinner was over E. L. M. wasted no time in explaining about forming a club No. 6 and soon with pencil and paper was busy taking down names, addresses and pen names with birthday. Some of us didn't have much time to select one and being anxious not to take one that belonged to some one else I just took an unusual one but what I really try to be. We were favored with music and singing by Pansy and a poem by Interested Reader we all enjoyed and would like to see printed. Others shared in the formation of Shore Line Club No. 6 and when we separated each one promised to become a member and send in a letter for the Social Corner and to meet with Rebecca on April 30. In five days I was very sick and shut in five weeks. I was invited by a friend to attend the meeting April 30 but did not dare venture out even in a closed car but hope to be at the next one and bring along some one else. During my sickness received birthday and Easter cards proving the true friendship and love that exists in the Social Corner. While the Sunday school class I am in sent me a beautiful Easter lily and an organization a beautiful plant that is still in bloom and neighbors vied with each other in sending cards, fruits, and flowers I appreciated the interest shown by my new found friends. One of them proved to be a dear friend of my deceased sister. The club is surely a success and as Lucille Drew says "a husky youngster" and will grow rapidly. We all know her pen is not rusty and her unusual talent for writing. It certainly will be a pleasure to meet all of those mentioned and Wheeler, Weua, O. D. and her mother at another meeting. Sorry my promised letter to the Social Corner has been so long delayed but it was unavoidable.

GREETINGS FROM BROWN EYES

Dear Social Corner Members: I must write and tell you about the meeting I attended on April 20th in North Stonington. Club No. 6 has sure some jolly members. I had a very good time and hope to meet with them again. We had plenty to eat, most everything and it tasted so good. As you know anything tastes best away from home. I think that we couldn't have had a better place to meet. As there is plenty of room. Too bad it was so cold upstairs as I would like to have heard some music, as I am crazy over it. Was surprised to see so many that I knew but got acquainted soon with a few more.

E. L. M.: Was glad to see you. So you know who I am now. You knew my mother.

Olga: I feel ten years younger since you told me what you did. I hope to see you again at another meeting.

Rebecca: So sorry that Mrs. B. is so ill that you couldn't attend the meeting.

Necia: I hear that you are not going to sue me. So have a big load off of my mind.

Country Sister: Hope you will get better soon as you don't want to be in bed these nice days.

Crimson Rambler: I have heard Country Sister speak of you quite a good deal. So glad I had a chance to see you.

Black Eyed Susie: Too bad we couldn't have had some music as I hear you can play.

Will close with best wishes to all the sick and shut-ins.

OLD TIN PANS

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: It is quite a while since I wrote to the Corner but lately on the Social Corner page I read where some of the sisters wrote about old tin pans. I think I can go one better than the sister that had one 35 years old. I have one that is all of 45 years old. It has been in use all that time and is still being used. It was made by a tinsmith by the name of Prior who had a shop in the Greeneville section. When it was made he said, "It would last a life time," and it has. Quite different from the pans made now. Old pans is a nice subject to write about. Yours for the Corner.

RED ROSE (Club No. 2.)

GREETINGS FROM CRIMSON RAMBLER

Dear Members of the Corner: Greetings to one and all. What a nice full page we had the past week! That is what tells the story. Hope the sisters will do their best to keep our page full.

Interested Reader: I was very much pleased to meet you once again as it was many moons ago since our last meeting and I have made yards and yards of tatting since then. Thanks to you for information about that book of instructions.

E. L. M.: Shall be glad to have that oportunity, as I know your time was much taken up that day.

Tatting: I too, was very glad to know who you are.

Melissa: Delighted to know the Corner has one good angel in it. Am going to read the Bible myself and see if I can find your recipe for Scripture cake. Keep up your good work; may be some day I'll see your name in the paper where you are the winner for reading the Bible. How about it?

E. E. F. F.: No, the local vaudeville actor has not sent in the poetry entitled Blood Stains on the Snow yet. I have been told he has recited that many times in the local theaters and I wish if this article is seen by him or his he would write it for the benefit of the Social Cornerites. I have been told it is rather a pretty piece of poetry. I am wondering if I know you.

Black Eyed Susie: Some disappointment, I should say. Never mind there are other days coming.

Mayflayre and Annette: I was pleased to see you both at Grange hall and just caught a birds eye view of Mr. Annette as you drove off the grounds.

Rural Delivery: Your piece of poetry in last Saturday's paper was very good. Lots of folks feel that way. I am thinking, while mother rues on a vacation.

Brown Eyes: Pleased to learn your identity. You look just like your daddy.

CRIMSON RAMBLER.

MOTHER THE GUIDING STAR

Dear Corner Sisters: Mother is unique. No one can take her place anywhere in the scheme of life.

Mother bears the pains of childbirth. Mother carries the responsibility upon her heart all the time.

The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world. Surely nothing truer was ever printed for the whole universe revolves around that one supreme being Mother.

When the child tosses on a bed of pain it is only mother who can really calm the restless nerves. Home loses its mystic atmosphere when mother is gone. The whole family depend on her and look to her to solve the problems of life.

No love is like mothers. No care is so constant, no sacrifice is as cheerful and willing no devotion is like hers for constancy.

Even when we are grown and have homes and families of our own we are still as little children to her.

No thought can be too kind no love too deep, no sacrifice too great for our mother, the dear mother who sacrified even life itself to bring us into the world.

She has bound our hearts to her for eternity by all her unseen sacrifice and unpaid kindness. The constant stream of her thought and love has flourished the years of our life. When the world criticises and condemns us she still loves us, and still sees in us the little babies that she held in her arms and rocked.

As strong men and women we go to mother for help and advice in all our troubles and business.

To the true child, mother never fades. Age only makes us love and respect her more, and mother is more dear and beautiful than ever.

Mother takes all the risks and hardships herself. So let us all adore and thank her while we may, while her ears are still open to hear and her heart throbs with pride and thankfulness in the warmth of her children's affection.

Kind words and deeds mean more to mother than anything else, so let us all try to show our own mother that she is the best mother. For that is just what we all think isn't it? That our own mother is the best and that is as it should be.

And in remembering our own mother let us for her sake remember other mothers and let them know that we love them because they are mothers.

How wonderful it is to think that the whole world is today paying just tribute to that exalted being—Mother.

Mother, mother I love you so I could write forever and then would not have told half how I love you.

Mother of mine, in the afterglow
Of mothering years, I love you so.
God give me always to make you know
How great is my love, before you go
Away to rest from your mothering!
I would remove lips every sting.
And give you joy in the afterglow
For, mother o' mine, I love you so.

BLACK EYED SUSIE.

RULES FOR THE YOUNG

Dear Social Corner Editor: Here are some rules for the young:

Shut every door after you and without slamming it.

Never shout, run or jump in the house.

Never call to persons up stairs or in the next room; if you wish to speak to them, go quietly where they are.

Always speak kindly and politely to servants, if you would have them do the same to you.

When you are told to do or not to do a thing by either parent never ask why you should or should not do it.

Tell of your own faults and misdoings; not of those of your brothers and sisters.

Carefully clean the mud or snow off your boots before entering the house.

Be prompt at every meal hour.

Never sit down at the table or in the parlor with dirty hands or tumbled hair.

Never interrupt any conversation, but wait patiently your turn to speak.

Never reserve your good manners for company, but be equally polite at home and abroad.

Let your first, last and best friend be your mother.

As a member of the club No. 5 I wish to thank the members for the lovely plant brought to me by Mollie Larkin, while I was sick with the grip.

If not too late may I have a Social Corner pin?

MARY DEVIAH.

TWO HINTS FROM ARIES

Dear Editor and Members: The poetry and letters are wonderful and are greatly appreciated by me. Wish to thank all who remembered me on my natal day. Am sending a useful hint I read the other day, which may interest any who are living in old houses and have trouble with soot stains on walls or ceilings striking through fresh whitewash or new wall paper. The remedy is to give the spots a good coating of shellac, let dry, and proceed with your new wall paper, or whitewash.

Another hint for a home made May basket. Collect green moss or any small vines, etc., from the woods. Use a coffee can (or can or any size or shape.) Have some willow branches (three twisted or braided together) and fastened to the tin inside, for a handle. Now cover outside of tin with moss, binding same with green twine. Insert lichen, or a piece of fungus, now and again, for artistic effect. Wind handle with any small vine, allowing vine to continue around the moss covered tin. Now fill with pussy willows or other flowers and fill the tin with water. The willow handle will have buds burst as the willow stems should be well into the water.

Welcome to new members. Best wishes to the older ones, from

SUNDAY IS MOTHER'S DAY

Dear Cornerites: Sunday is a wonderful day to all those who have a mother, but why not have a "mothers' day every day. A father, talking to his careless daughter, said, "I went to speak about your mother. It may be you have noticed a careworn look upon her face. Of course it has not been brought about by any act of yours; still it is your duty to chase it away. I want you to get up tomorrow morning and get breakfast. When your mother comes in and expresses her surprise, go right up to her and kiss her on the mouth. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face. Besides girls you owe her a kiss or two. A long time ago, when you were little girls she kissed you. You were not as attractive then as you are now.

Yes, it is true. Through years of childish sunshine and shadows she was always ready to cure by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little, dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured, with those first skirmishes with the rough old world.

Let every daughter or son who can get up and get breakfast for mother Sunday mornings and some of our Social Corner sisters will send in breakfast recipes for you.

Breakfast For Mother's Day

Bananas with Shredded Wheat
Scrambled Eggs with Chopped Green Pepper
Toasted Biscuit Cocoa or Coffee

Bananas with shredded wheat is simple to get.

Scrambled Eggs: Place butter in pan about one tablespoon, take three eggs beat up separately, 1 cup of milk, heat on stove then break up two slices of bread in that. When soft beat up with egg beater, stir in the eggs beat all up together with 1-2 teaspoon of salt and a little pepper and place in pan when the butter has melted. Stir this around when cooking. It is easy to make and very tasty. Chop pepper and stir in if you like.

Toast bread or biscuit to eat with it.

Coffee: Put 1 teaspoon of coffee to a cup, pour on boiling water let stand a few minutes to steep (do not boil) —settle with 1-4 cup or cold water. Pour into cup with cream.

GUESS WHO.

CLUB NO. 5'S MEETING

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: The weather man gave us his very kindly smile May 5 so 56 of our friends met at Buckingham Memorial for a social gathering and had a jolly good time. Elva with her helpers, Calamity Jane, Truth, Truis, Savilla and others served a fine dinner, with a birthday table for those having a birthday in January, February, March and April. There was a birthday cake with candles and all the trimmings served by Elva who was given a rising vote of thanks with three rousing cheers for her kindness.

The entertainment was the District School. The regular teacher (Prudence) being away sowerbake susbstituted. The pupils all seemed very bright and the spelling was great. Machine troubled them but little Truth spelled it correctly and went to the head of the class. Lonesome Pine in trying to get to her place stumbled, and dropped her lunch pail which was picked up by Elva causing confusion in the class. Janet was troubled with attacks of sneezing and neglected to excuse herself and was reproved by the teacher. Later she won the applause of the delighted audience by singing, Bring Back My Bonnie to Me.

Dahlia had hysterics and could not be quieted. Mid Clover and Truth did honor to their class. Calamity Jane chewed gum and did not pay attention. Lea was to big for her clothes and did not dare to make any unnecessary moves. Truis served water to the thirsty ones but unlike Lea her clothes were also large for her. She seemed lost in them. They did nicely but think the discipline had room for improvement.

Chauffeur, Kasha, Bridge, Iris, Cecil Bruner, Silver Leaf and Prudence were not with us as they had bigger game on "as it were."

Molly Larkin is to be hostess at our next meeting.

Was glad "The lone man" was able to be with us again.

Long live the Social Corner meetings for we do have good times visiting with each other.

WURDY BELLE, Club No. 5.

SUBSTITUTES FOR POTATOES

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It is possible to throw to one side the potato, especially the poor one. Note these ways:

A Rice Postscript: Boil one-half cup of rice until tender, in boiling salted water or bake in the oven, 1-2 cup of rice to 2 cups of water. When done pour over it one pint of thin white sauce, to which one-half cup of peanut butter has been added. It is a very tasty combination.

Seasoned Macaroni With Cheese: Add 1-3 cup rice after arranging your macaroni and cheese in the dish for baking place over the top slices or raw bacon.

Corn Beans and Rice: I always used to peel and quarter potatoes to put in my corn beans. Now when beans are cooked and when I add my corn I add two tablespoons of cooked rice to 1 cup of beans and one can of corn.

Salmon and Rice: Cook 1-2 cup of rice. To this add 1 can salmon mashed fine, stir all together, salt to taste, mold in a pan and when cold slice in 1-2 inch pieces. Roll in corn meal and fry in hot fat. This tastes like fresh fish and will keep for days.

Rice Loaf: 1 cup of rice baked in 3 cups of salted water 1 hour. Then add 1 pound of beef for a stew after putting through grinder. Put a layer of rice, then a layer of meat, a layer of bread crumbs, bake for 30 minutes and serve with cream sauce.

Bean Soup: Boil 1 cup of rice in four cups of water until tender; strain the (cooked) water from the rice then add beans or peas 1 cup of either to the rice water with 2 tablespoons of butter, little paprika and salt.

Mashed Rice and Potatoes: I wanted to economize in the use of potatoes. I had 2 potatoes and it wasn't quite enough for the luncheon as I had a party who came in. I used two potatoes (large) to 1-2 cup of boiled or baked rice and I mashed my potato and seasoned them, mashed the rice up with it and beat until the combination was creamy. The result was a dish that was very tasty.

I make two quarts of potatoes last seven days for three. You do not need potatoes with fish loaf or with the other recipes.

ETHELYN.

WARMER IN MAINE

Sunday.—Dear Cornerites: Today at 73 above. It sure looks like summer all right. Boat is in water waiting for me. Who'll go fishing with me?

The grass has grown green overnight.

What has become of E. M. R. C. P. Your birthday will soon be here.

Best of wishes for you all from BALSAM FIR.

LOOKING FORWARD TO NEXT MEETING

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have just received the Corner page and have enjoyed reading the many letters from the sisters. Wish we certainly did have a fine time on April 20th. I would have been glad to have met many who were there, but was a little too busy. Am looking forward to the next meeting, when I hope to have a good big book and get all the names.

Lucille Drew: I am glad you were so happily disappointed in the meeting. I am sure you will make an effort to go again.

Idaleane: No, I was not so crushed, but O, those rubber heels.

Crimson Rambler: I was glad to meet you and hope you may come often.

Wheeler and We Us: I am glad there is another bond in the friendship that has been ours since early childhood.

Thelma: I hope you soon recovered from your headache. You certainly had my sympathy.

With others I missed Rebecca, but from years of most intimate friendship, know that much as she would have enjoyed being present she was the happier in being able to lend a helping hand, even to the "cup of cold water."

I am very sorry we were disappointed in the musical part of the program, as there was a great treat in store for us.

Here's hoping we may all meet with many more on May 18th.

DOROTHY BRADFORD.

FINE PRESERVING HINTS

Dear Cornerites: This will be a good recipe to place in your scrap book for September, in using wax sealing glass jars great care must be taken. If the work is properly done the fruit can be kept for years. Have a kettle along side of the stove beside the preserving kettle, and also a small dipper of hot water. Plunge a jar into the hot water, having the water strike both inside and outside the jar at the same time. If you set it down instead of plunging it, it will break. Put the cover in the dipper. When the jar is hot, fill it up and pour the water from it into the kettle. Stand the jar in the hot water and fill it with hot fruit from the preserving kettle. Fill to the brim with the hot syrup. Take the cover from dipper of hot water and screw it on tightly. In using the jars a second time have the right band and cover for each one. A large mouthed funnel, such as grocers have is almost indispensible in the work of preserving.

I use the center tube to my angel cake pan for a funnel and the bottom of the inverted pan saves the many spoonfuls during the season. I always sift my sugar.

Strawberries Preserved. To each pound of berries I allow one half pound of sugar. Place the berries in a kettle, and jam them a little, with a spoon, so that there will be juice enough to cook without using water. Stir them to prevent scorching. Cook just 16 minutes (no more) then add sugar (sifted three times.) Have it warm on back of the stove; then cook it just one minute more. Put them in jars as directed. You can use more sugar if you wish but I have preserved this way for years and they seem to keep beautifully.

Raspberries: To each pound of berries allow 3-4 of a pound of sugar, and cook just the same as I do raw strawberries.

Cherries may be preserved either with or without stone. To each pound of cherries allow one third of a pound of sugar. Put the sugar in the kettle with half a pint of water to three pounds of sugar. Stir it until it is dissolved. When boiling, add cherries, and cook three minutes; then put in the jars.

Currants should be prepared the same as raspberries.

Pineapple: Pare the fruit, and be sure you take out all the eyes and discolored parts. Cut in slices, and cut the slices in small bits, taking out the core. Weigh the fruit, and in a pan with half as many pounds of sugar as of fruit let it stand over night. In the morning put it over the fire and let it boil rapidly for a minute only, as cooking long discolors it. Put in jars as directed.

Grated Pineapple: Pare the fruit clean; then grate with a coarse grater, rejecting the core. Weigh it, and put to each pound of fruit a pound of sugar. I always let it stand over night. In the morning let it boil one minute, and it is done. Put in cans as directed.

Blackberries are prepared in the same manner as strawberries. If they are very ripe, not quite so much sugar is needed.

Whortleberries: To each quart of berries allow one-third of a pound of sugar (sifted) and a half a pint of water to three pounds of sugar. Put the water and sugar over the fire, and when boiling hot, add berries. Cook just three minutes (no more). Place in jars as directed.

Crab Apples: To each pound of fruit allow half a pound of sugar, and a pint of water to three pounds of sugar. When the syrup is boiling hot, drop in the apples. They will cook very quickly. When done, fill a jar with the fruit, and fill it up with syrup.

Peaches: Have ready a kettle of boiling water. Fill a wire basket with peaches and plunge them into boiling water. In two minutes remove them, and the skins will peel right off. Immediately drop the fruit into cold water, (to keep the color.) For three pounds of fruit use one pound of sugar add one pint of water for three pounds of sugar. When the syrup is boiling hot, take the fruit from the water, and drop into it. Put but a few in at a time. Take them from the syrup with a silver fork, fill the jar, and fill up with strained syrup. I think peaches are nice to have a few stones in with them. It gives a rich flavor.

Pears: Pare the fruit and cut in small pieces or cut in halves. Throw into cold water, or they will be discolored. Use one pound of sugar for three of fruit and one quart of water for three pounds or sugar. When the syrup is boiling, take the pears from the water, and drop into the syrup. Cook until they can be pierced easily with a silver fork. Fill the jars with fruit and fill up to the brim with the syrup. (I use a small strainer in the tunnel, that the syrup may look clear.) Bartlett pears are delicious, as also are Sickel; but many varieties are good.

KITTY LOU.

GATEAU ST. HONORE

Dear Sisters of the Corner: Did you ever make gateau St. Honore? Here is the recipe:

Gateau St. Honore: Make a paste as for eclairs. Butter three pie plates, roll puff or chopped paste very thin and cover the plates with it. Cut off the paste about an inch from the edge all around the plates. Spread a layer of the cooked paste over the puffed paste. Put a tube, measuring about half an inch in diameter in a pastry bag, turn the remainder of the paste into the bag and press it through the tube onto the edge of the plates where the puff paste has been cut off. Care must be taken to have the border of equal thickness all around the plates.

With a fork, prick holes in the paste in the center of the plate, bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. The paste remaining in the bag should be made into balls about half the size of an American walnut. I usually have about three dozen tart sized. Drop them in a pan that has been buttered lightly and bake 15 or 20 minutes. While they are baking put 1-2 cup of water and 1-2 cup of sugar in a small sauce pan and boil 20 minutes. When the little balls are done take them on the point of a large needle or skewer, dip them in the syrup and place them on the border or paste (the syrup will hold them) about 2 inches apart. Caution! Do not stir the syrup as that will make it grain and spoil it. Pour part of the syrup in a small cup then place in hot water. That remaining in the sauce pan should be kept hot but it should not boil until needed. Dip four dozen French candied cherries in the syrup and wick them between the balls. Reserve about 15 cherried with which to garnish the center of the cake.

Whip 1 1-2 pints of cream to a froth, soak half a package of gelatin in half cup for two hours. Pour on this half cup boiling milk. Place the pan of whipped cream in another of ice water and sprinkle over it two thirds of a cup of sugar and nearly a teaspoon of vanilla flavor. Strain the gelatin on this, stir gently from the bottom until it begins to thicken. When it will just pour, fill the three plates with it and set them in the ice chest 20 minutes. Garnish the top with the remaining cherries and serve. This is an excellent dish for wedding and party suppers. It is not as difficult to prepare as would seem on first reading.

PLEASED AT GROWING MEMBERSHIP

Dear Social Corner Sisters: This is my first letter to the Corner. I certainly enjoyed myself at the meeting of the Shore Line club of which I am a member. I was pleased to see and also meet so many sisters from other clubs. I am also pleased to see that at each meeting of the Shore Line club it is increasing in membership. Would dearly love to hear from some of the Social Corner friends.

SOME NEW RECIPES

Social Corner Editor and Friends: Those who are looking for new recipes will be interested in the following:

Sausages Baked With Creamed Potatoes: Chop fine 4 cold boiled potatoes; season slightly with salt and arrange in an au gratin dish. Pour in milk or cream to come nearly to the top of the potatoes. Prick the casings of 1 pound of sausages and lower them in a frying basket into a kettle of hot fat; count 60, then remove and arrange over the potatoes. For a small frying kettle cook the sausage in two lots, half a pound at a time. Pour over the sausage a cup or rather thick white sauce, one made with chicken or veal broth preferred. Use 2 1-2 tablespoons of flour and 2 tablespoons of butter to a cupful of liquid. Cover the sauce with 3-4 cup of cracker crumbs mixed with 4 tablespoons of melted butter. Let bake about 15 minutes.

Ham and Corn Fritters: 1 cup minced cooked ham, 1 can corn, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-3 teaspoon paprika, 2 eggs.

Chop corn, drain and add dry ingredients, mixed and sifted; then add ham and yolks of eggs beaten until thick, and whites of eggs beaten stiff. Cook in frying pan in fresh hot lard. Drain on paper.

Corn Meal and Ham Loaf: 1 quart boiling water, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup cold water, 1 cup cornmeal, 3-4 cup diced cooked ham.

Stir cold water into cornmeal to avoid its lumping when stirred into boiling water. Add to boiling salted water. Stir 5 minutes, placing kettle directly over hot water, cover and cook 1 hour. Add ham, pour into small greased bread pan, chill, slice thin and fry.

OH HENRY CUP CAKES

Dear Cornerites: What nice weather we are having, suppose most of the sisters are busy housecleaning if not all through. Wish I could say "all done."

I want to thank my helpers who helped at the last meeting.

Aunt Mary Jane: Missed you. Hope you are not sick.

Was pleased to see so many Shore Line sisters. Come again.

Did any of the sisters ever make Oh Henry! cup cakes? Here is the recipe, try them:

Oh Henry Cup Cakes: 1 cup molasses, 1-2 cup sugar, 3 cups flour, 1 cup boiling water, 1 egg, 1-2 cup shortening, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon soda, 1-4 teaspoon salt.

Cream shortening and sugar, add well beaten egg, molasses then flour and salt, soda, and spices thoroughly sifted together. Pour the boiling water over the ginger and add last; beat well and bake in well greased cup cake pans in a moderate oven 20 minutes. Shortly before removing from oven put two thin slices of Oh Henry! on each cake and return to the oven for a moment to melt as a frosting.

RESULT OF CORNER APPEAL

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Nothing could show better the size of the Social Corner than my appeal for a birthday shower, in one mail came a card from Westerly, R. I. and another from Dry Mills, Me. Quite a step between the two but both were loving souls with but a single thought to greet a sister who no doubt they have never seen.

By Jingo sat under a Balsam Fir, Evelyn Burr and her Kitty Lou thought the weather was fine and Aries, but Kathelyn said shut off the radio it sounds like static, so I will for Free Air.

Please accept my sincere thanks to all the members for pretty cards and coupons. I hope to write each one personally some time.

By the way Aries are you a really and truly resident of Moosup proper of like myself a suburbanite. Of course Moosup has suburbs, good looking policeman, electric lights, and n'erthing.

JUDGE K.

NANCY PECK'S SPONGE CAKE

Editor Social Corner: In fancy I see the sisters taking advantage of this glorious morning, (Monday) and clean white clothes flapping in the sunshine. The fact that winter has passed makes one renew their strength and love the outdoors.

Have I been rightly informed that the S. L. C. meets the second Tuesday in May. I am hoping to be present and join Club No. 6. If I am not mistaken I think I recognize some of the sisters' pen names.

I will send my sponge cake recipe, also two poems, Tell Her So, by Bayonet and Our Fishing by Edgar A. Guest to be printed when there is opportunity.

Sponge Cake: 3 large eggs, beat 3 minutes; 1 1-2 cup sugar, beat 5 minutes; 1 cup flour, beat two minutes; 1-3 cup water, beat 1 minute; 1 cup flour and 1-2 teaspoon baking powder and flavor lemon. Beat 1 minute. Bake 45 minutes. Try it and think of Hope to see you all at our next meeting. Best wishes to all.

Civil docket—Hazard J. Lord vs. Tefft Motor Mart and Clifton D. Hall vs. Angelo Pucci. Continued one week. Westerly Furniture company vs. Catherine Holley. Ready.

Trial calendar: Judge Williams called the Westerly Furniture-Holley case, an action on book account. Miss Katherine L. Keane, bookkeeper to the furniture company, testified that her accounts showed a balance of $95 due since October, 1925. Judge Williams rendered his decision for the plaintiff to recover balance due, $95, interest $2.35 and costs.

The work of cutting the ends of the street car rails of the electric railway at the east of the Pawcatuck river bridge with an acetylne torch, by workmen in the employ of the Westerly highway department, was done Friday morning. The work was done to enable the curved rails to be removed that the surface of Broad street might be smoothed off for the application of a "hot mix" surface. Installation of new gas mains down Main street has continued and also the erection of new poles for electric light, power and fire alarm wires will enable the old and worn one to be taken out. The car tracks line on both sides of the street has been moved back and with the removal of all the paving blocks and grading the foundation the "hot mix" surface will be carried down Main street for a smoother and wider highway. New poles have been set on Broad street and new wires strung on them. The highway department having finished work on Dixon street, attention is now being given to Narragansett and Newton avenue.

It was learned by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, that Benjamin Sugarman of Boston is the owner of the Hudson touring car, which crashed off High street early last Sunday afternoon and was completely wrecked. What remained of the car was at the Rhode Island garage where it was identified by Fred R. Campbell, insurance company representative. The driver of the car at the time of the accident crawled out of the wreckage and quickly ran away from the scene. The two young men, occupants of the rear seat, were turned over by the Westerly police department to representatives of the police department of Cambridge, and returned with them to that city.

Antonio Fiore, arraigned in a session of Washington county superior court at West Kingston, and who had his license suspended for 9 days for a violation of Westerly Hackney-carriage ordinance, has had his license returned in a shorter period of time than originally set.

William Sheldon of Wequetequock left Friday morning for a visit in Providence.

Mrs. Addie Russell of White Plains, N. Y., was a visitor Thursday in Westerly and Watch Hill.

John J. Dunn of Westerly, secretary of the Rhode Island State Board of Agriculture, left town Friday noon to join his wife and family, who have visited the New York city during the past week. They will return to their Westerly home the first of the week.

L. Bowman Coon of Newark, N. J., is the guest of his mother, Mrs. Adelle B. Coon, in Westerly.

Miss Ann Elizabeth Carr and Miss Charlotte Dower were callers in Providence on Thursday.

Mrs. Julia Stoddard of Creighton, Neb., has been the guest of her nephew, Oliver Stoddard, in Westerly during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Phelps of New York city arrived in Westerly on Friday afternoon and proceeded to Watch Hill to visit their seashore property.

Frank L. Furness of Pawcatuck was a visitor Friday in New London.

Thomas McKenzie, following an illness of a week or more, was able to be out on Friday.

At the regular meeting of Misquamicut Tribe, No. 19, Red Men, held on Friday night in Stillman hall on High street, the Adoption degree was worked on a class of candidates.

The public schools of Westerly will resume sessions on Monday next after a week's vacation.

Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown today (Saturday) will be in Providence, where he is to attend a session of Providence county superior court.

ACID STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Sufferers From Indigestion or Stomach Trouble CUT THIS OUT

"Stomach trouble, dyspepsia, indigestion, sourness, gas, heartburn, food fermentation, etc., are caused nine times in ten by chronic acid stomach," says a well known authority.

Burning hydrochloric acid develops in the stomach at an alarming rate. The acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining and often leads to gastritis accompanied by dangerous stomach ulcers. Don't dose an acid stomach with pepsin or artificial digestants that only give temporary relief from pain by driving the sour, fermenting food out of the stomach into the intestines.

Instead, neutralize or sweeten your acid stomach after meals with a little hot water and Bisurated Magnesia and not only will the pain vanish but your meals will digest naturally. There is nothing better than Bisurated Magnesia, to sweeten and settle an acid stomach. It soaks up the harmful excess acid much as a sponge or blotting paper might, and your stomach acts and feels fine in just a few minutes. Bisurated Magnesia can be obtained from any reliable druggist in either powder or tablet form. It is safe, reliable, easy and pleasant to use, is not a laxative and is not at all expensive.

FIGURES $7,200 COST OF BRINGING UP A CHILD

The dollars and cents outlay of raising a child from birth to his or her 18th year is, in round numbers, $7,200, according to a survey made by the statistical bureau of the Metropolitan life insurance company.

This is divided as follows: Cost of being born $250; food $3,500; clothing and shelter, $3,400; education, minor items met by the individual family purse, $50; major items of education, cost of schooling provided by the community and not separately appearing in the family budget, $1,100; medical and dental and kindred services to maintain health, $234; recreation $130; insurance $54; and sundries, $570. This totals up, exclusive of the $1,100 for schooling, to $7,238. There has been no distinction on the grounds of sex made in these totals because the difference in the amounts for girls and boys is relatively small.

These conclusions were arrived at in the study made by the Metropolitan statisticians of an average family consisting of father, mother and three children, in the $2,500 per year income class, and have been printed as a series in the company's statistical bulletin.

About $30 per annum per family is spent by members of the $2,500 a year income class to maintain health, and this divided pro rata among the children, gives them each $264 for the 18 years. Recreation, which includes movies and theatres, excursions, vacation and travel, absorbs $43 of the yearly income or a total of $130 for the first 18 years of life.

The community spends $1,100 for the education of the average child, while incidentals from the family purse for this purpose amount to only $50.

"Statistics of the state of New York show that it costs $107 a year in the public school system to put a child through the elementary school grades" says the Statistical Bulletin. "In the secondary schools, the cost is $200 a year. With eight years in the elementary schools, and four in the secondary schools, the cost would amount to $1,656. If a year's attendance at kindergarten is added, at a cost of approximately $100, we may put the total cost of a complete grammar and high school education in the public schools at $1,750."

The Bulletin points out that separate cost figures for elementary and high schools in the United States as a whole are not available, but from figures for all grades it is clear that the general average is below that of New York. It also indicates that the school period of the average youngster approximates nine years, one of which can be assumed to be in the high schools.

THIRD PETITION FOR A CHANGE IN CITY GOVERNMENT, NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 7—Another attempt is being made to obtain the necessary number of signatures to a petition whereby a special city election may be called, to permit the voters of New London to determine whether the present city manager form of government or the old-time municipal form of government shall control city affairs. Already about 600 names have been obtained to the petition and next week, it is stated, additional circulators will be busy in an attempt to obtain the required number of signers at the earliest possible date. The petition at present is being circulated among the residents in the northwest section of the city, but next week, it is predicted, the petition will make the rounds among the merchants and residents in the central part. A meeting of the circulators as well as those interested in the endeavor to obtain the special election, will take place Sunday afternoon when a check-up of the present signatures will be made for the purpose of determining whether the signatures are those of legal voters and to arrange for additional circulators.

This petition is the third attempt to secure a special election. The first petition was circulated by Former Alderman Elmer E. Kenerson and after about a thousand signatures had been secured, no further effort was made to obtain signatures. About eight months ago, Joseph Loiacano and Matthew Keenan started circulating the second petition and with close to 1500 signatures obtained, the circulators suddenly abandoned their task. Now a third attempt is under way and according to those at the head of the scheme there will be no let up in the work of obtaining the necessary names, in order to obtain the special election it will be necessary to obtain fully 2100 signers. If this is accomplished the petition will be handed to City Clerk Julian D. Moran and if the petition contains the number of signers necessary by law to make it valid there will be nothing for the city council to do but fix a date for the election.

James F. O'Leary of Montauk avenue, is contemplating a trip to Maine where he will remain for several weeks fishing and engaging in other outdoor pastimes.

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 7—The body of Chester J. Holmes, who died at Lawrence hospital March 3, last was removed from the receiving vault in Cedar Grove cemetery this morning and was forwarded to Lebanon, where services were conducted this afternoon at Exeter cemetery. Mr. Holmes made his home on a house boat in the Thames river, near the plant of the Thames Marine railway.

An ordinance of this city provides that the garbage collecting trucks and carts shall be covered with canvas or other protection, that the streets shall not be littered in the collection. Merchants are protesting that this ordinance is ignored and that after the trucks pass along in the morning the highway is strewn with papers and other rubbish despite of the fact that the trucks and carts are followed up by scavengers.

It has been a long time prior to yesterday when a cargo of steel arrived here from Bordeaux since an invoice of foreign product has reached this port. There is a tariff duty on such cargo that increases the revenue of this government at which also makes the imported product cost enough so that it doesn't come into competition with the American product. During the Civil war days and for years thereafter, the salary of the collector depended largely upon the imports from abroad, but now the salary of the collector of port is fixed and is not altered by the receipt of foreign-made goods, or by dutiable goods of any kind.

Richard M. Brockett who was removed to Lawrence hospital several days ago, suffering from an internal disorder, is reported this afternoon at the institution to be considerably weaker.

S. B. West, 57 Linden street, left his automobile parked in front of his house last night and this morning he discovered that a thief has stolen a spare tire. West reported his loss to the police.

Martha Elizabeth Strout, year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Strout, died this morning at the residence of the child's parents, 249 Broad street, after an illness of several weeks.

The funeral of William Pondemanski, former employe of the Babcock Printing Press Manufacturing company, whose death occurred several days ago after a lingering illness, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at the Polish national church and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the operator's license of Nathan Santer, 114 North Bank street, suspended. The commissioner ordered the license of Alex Johanson, United States coast guard, recently suspended, to be returned to the owner.

The Connecticut company is getting its equipment for handling the summer traffic in condition. This forenoon several of the open type of cars that have been in storage at Norwich were brought to the New London carhouse. The cars have been re-painted and repairs made so that they will be in the best of condition when they are started running regularly, as soon as the weather becomes more reasonable.

Frederick Shontell, 8 Schoolhouse lane was before Justice of the Peace Oscar Church at Montville last night charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. He pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs, which he paid. Shontell was arrested Wednesday night by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh of Groton barracks.

Three Providence youths, who were arrested in Waterford late yesterday with a Ford car that they had stolen from Providence earlier in the day were taken back to Providence for trial this afternoon, when a Providence police officer came to New London for that purpose. The youths were interrupted in their flight through Waterford by Constables Frank Peabody and Charles Brigham.

Frank Rorie, of Groton; William Johnson, 349 Ocean avenue; Adolph Weed, Stonington, and Mrs. Joseph Shapiro and Antone Shapiro, Groton patients at Lawrence Memorial associated hospital, were dismissed today.

FOUR CONTRACTORS YIELD TO STRIKING CARPENTERS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, May 7—Four contractors have yielded to the demand of the striking carpenters and have granted the strikers the 15 cents per hour increase in wages, it became known this afternoon. The firms to grant the wage increase are H. R. Douglas Co., Foundation company, Harold Spicer, Groton and the Clark Construction company. The other master carpenters declare that they will not grant the increase and will keep their plants closed until such time as the strikers decide to return to work.

John McGinley of Hartford, is spending the week end with his mother, Mrs. Evelyn McGinley.

Capt. Thomas A. Scott, employed in New York, arrived here late this afternoon to remain several days at his home on Montauk avenue.

Church street is to be one of the brilliantly lighted streets of the city within a short time. Plans have been formulated and when carried out that thoroughfare will be illuminated as brightly as State street. The installation of the new lights will not take place until after the Connecticut Power company has concluded making changes within another week or two.

The city dumping grounds, off Riverview avenue, is causing the firemen much work. Every few days the vast accumulation of refuse, mostly paper and wood, becomes ignited and results in a still alarm being sent into fire headquarters. No damage has resulted from the numerous fires, but this morning when the fire threatened to ignite two houses, still alarm was given and the Ogkford Hose company responded. The blaze was a brisk one and necessitated the playing of two streams of water on the burning refuse before it was extinguished. The burning of the rubbish causes an extremely nauseating odor.

The search for the body of Boatswain William Patterson, 18, United States coast guard, local section base, state pier, has been abandoned and unless the body comes to the surface, either on the Thames river or Long Island sound it will probably never be found. The abandonment of the search for the body, which has been carried on by the crews of several patrol boats since the fatality Tuesday afternoon, was given up, when the constant dragging of the river bottom night and day by four or six crews of the patrol boats failed.

Still another lien was filed against the 325 State Street corporation this afternoon when the city clerk was served with the process, which was at the instigation of LeRoy N. Darrow and amounts to $92. The lien is the ninth that has been levied and the approximate aggregate amount is $10,000. The 325 State Street Corporation is erecting the new theatre, which will house motion pictures when completed and is being erected on the former Augustus Williams property.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus W. Brown of Broad street, are entertaining their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. David Ubelacker of Hackensack, N. J. The couple married in this city several months ago.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Brien, 67 Franklin St. of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ethel Ward and William L. Graham, Jr., son of Patrolman and Mrs. William L. Graham, 357 Williams St. They were married last January and they are now residing at Portsmouth, N. H.

John W. Forrester of Ocean Beach, has been admitted to Lawrence hospital, where he will probably undergo an operation. Mr. Forrester had been confined to his home several weeks because of a severe attack of tonsilitis.

The new automobile for use of Chief Charles Rose and Deputy Chief Thomas Shipman was delivered at fire headquarters late this afternoon. The machine is of the touring car type and is painted a flaming red.

Employes of the street department have completed the marking of the pavement on State street, near the corner of Bank street, which, it is believed, will facilitate traffic conditions somewhat, also tend to safeguard passengers boarding and alighting from trolley cars at the State street terminal.

Automobile and trolley traffic was held up several minutes on Main street, late this afternoon, when a machine bearing out of town registration parked near the corner of Masonic street, but not close to the curb. When a trolley car arrived at the corner it was impossible for it to pass. Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy went to the parked machine and there found a large dog seated in the driver's seat. The dog appeared menacing at the start, and after using a little diplomacy the officer succeeded in getting into the car and releasing the brake so that the machine could be operated to the curb and allow the resumption of traffic.

Fidelity chapter, order of Eastern Star, entertained members of the order this evening with work and then with refreshments. The guests came from the chapters hereabouts and expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the work done.

May 1925 was colder than the weather we are now having, and there was a heavy frost on the night before Memorial day last year. There has been but little planting this month, so that crops will be late.

The claim is made that though New London is a seaport no live fish other than cod can be had in the market, or at least at the boats where fish is to be obtained. The fish bought here is frozen and comes from the New York and Boston market.

Broadway Theatre

Trapped—in a women's Turkish Bath!

Fate played a cruel joke on Tom Jones, bible manufacturer, — the eve of his wedding to pretty Lucille Bigbee, in the picturization of George Broadhurst's famous play, What Happened to Jones, the new Universal Jewel, coming to the Broadway theater Sunday as part of a double feature bill.

Reginald Denny, king of farceurs, reaches the peak of his career in this picture, his latest starring vehicle, directed by William A. Seiter.

What Happened to Jones, is a fast moving comedy, crowded with situations from which Denny, as Tom Jones, gets himself into unbelievable complications in his frantic efforts to escape the haven of half-dressed women. Starting with a harmless poker game and rising to one farcial climax after another, the poor hero is obliged to use all his wits before he rights himself at the final fade-out.

Seldom has a picture so many elements that make for entertainment as does Under the Rouge, a sterling story of redemption which is the second attraction Sunday.

The story is an appealing portrayal of the rise from the muck of two lovable characters. Those parts are played by Tom Moore and Eileen Percy, two notable stars. In support is a large and excellent cast. Under the Rouge was directed by Lewis H. Moomaw, who gave the world The Chechacos, the famous story of Alaska.

There are picturesque backgrounds of city life and a vivid portrayal of Main Street.

Among the thrills is the rescue of a girl who attempts to go over a falls in a sacrificial canoe.

The production had a run on Broadway and was accorded high praise by the newspaper critics, who hailed it as one of the master redemption stories of the past few years.

A comedy and news are the added short subjects. Early attendance is advised to avoid the crowds.

Palace Theater

Last time today. Five big acts of Paramount vaudeville.

The return of Lowell Sherman to the screen has developed into a real triumph. This star has developed steadily in cinema power since the days when Griffith brought him from the stage to play the villain in Way Down East. And now, back on the screen, he scores one of the memorable triumphs of the season in Satan in Sables, the Warner Brother Classic of the screen at the Palace theater.

Here he plays a Russian prince who lives for gaiety and who finds himself in a whirlpool of thrilling adventure, when the saintly young brother whom he loves gets entangled with one of his discarded mistresses. It is exciting entertainment.

Two big time features are on the bill for Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday—His Jazz Bride with Marie Prevost and Matt Moore.

Ruth Cross's novel of the transformation of a grubby young caterpillar into a beautiful butterfly through love has been picturized by Warner Bros. and The Golden Cocoon will begin a four day engagement on Sunday at the Palace theater. Helene Chadwick and Huntly Gordon are featured in this production, and the supporting cast includes Richard Tucker, Frank Campeau, Margaret Seddon, Carrie Clarke Ward, Charles McHugh and Violet Kane. The scenario, written by Hope Loring and Louise Lighton, is said to have retained all the original drama of the novel; and Director Millard Webb to have turned out a forceful production. Byron Haskins photographed the picture.

Next Week at United Congregational Church.

The Brotherhood meets at the Community house at 6.30 a. m. Monday evening for supper, election of officers and moving pictures.

The Sodalitas meet in the junior department rooms at 7.30 on Monday evening. There will be a discussion of plans for the annual supper.

The Haviland class will meet at three o'clock on Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. C. Newcomb Kiney, at 8 Huntington place.

The community training school, to which the public is invited, meets in the church school rooms at 7.40 o'clock on Thursday evening.

The final meeting of the season of the missions department of the Guild will be held at the Community house on Friday afternoon at three o'clock. The subject of the programme will be "Work at Johannesburg, South Africa," and has been chosen particularly because of interest in Rev. Arthur C. Adams, who is at work there. Letters from him will be read and scenes of the country and people shown on the screen.

The postponed meeting of the Philathea class will be held on Friday evening in the Hafle club rooms, Chapman building.

All girls of the Campfire Junior Guild, church school and parish are urged to meet at Franklin square at six o'clock, Friday evening, to take the 6.15 car for Taftville, where the interchurch girls' contest is to be held. Each one is asked to come provided with a box of luncheon, drink to be furnished by the Taftville hostesses.

High-speed elevators are capable of attaining a speed of 600 feet a minute.

Breed Theatre

Charles Ray departs from his usual country boy roles to play the son of a Pittsburgh millionaire in his latest picture, "The Auction Block," which is coming to the Breed theatre on Sunday. Eleanor Boardman is featured with Ray in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, which was directed by Hobart Henley.

"The Auction Block" is an elaborate and intensely dramatic picturization of the famous Rex Beach novel of the same name, and boasts an excellent cast that includes in addition to Ray and Miss Boardman, the following players: Ernest Gillen, James Corrigan, Edythe Yorke, Sally O'Neil, Charles Clary and David Torrence. Frederic and Fanny Hatton have written the continuity.

Capitol Theatre, Willimantic

"For Heaven's Sake" wire home to mother, Mother's day, Sunday May 9, then see Harold Lloyd in his first Paramount comedy, "For Heaven's Sake!" at the Capitol theatre, Willimantic. This comedy is just great. Think of the thousands of unfortunates in the world today who amble through the underworld, living a life of emptyhandedness.

Save yourself! By the slower but certain method of putting part of your earnings into a savings bank you will be better provided for in old age than those unfortunates whom Harold Lloyd tries to help in "For Heaven's Sake!" during the four days starting Sunday at the Capitol theatre, Willimantic.

Next Week at First Baptist Church.

Monday, 7.30 p. m., meeting of the Boy Scouts in the lower room. Tuesday, 2 p. m., the Women's Mission circle meets with Mrs. D. A. Hurlbut, 45 Williams street. Topic, "The Dignity of Service." Friday, 6.15 p. m., car leaves the square for the annual stunt night for girls. This good time is held this year in the Taftville Congregational church.

Fine Bible Pictures at Y. M. C. A.

Beginning on the coming Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, daylight time a first class feature moving picture feature will be shown in fascinations on four Sunday afternoons. The title of the feature is "The Chosen Prince," which is a dramatization of David and Jonathan from the anointing of David until he is crowned king. It is unusual to find a subject of such a wide range of characters and scenery. The pastoral scenes and the situations under which the Psalms were developed are both beautiful and inspiring. In addition to the above there will be a short reel on the study of insects which will certainly prove interesting. Hugh Kinder will furnish the music for the series, and brief talks will be given in connection with the picture. Both men and women are invited and boys and girls 14 and over.

Next Week at Central Baptist Church.

CROWDS ATTEND PLAUT-CADDEN'S FIRE SALE

That a fire sale has lost none of its appeal as an opportunity for the public to buy bargains was evidenced in the great crowds who were at the Plaut-Cadden store on Main street yesterday to take advantage of the opportunities which this company is so abundantly offering in its great fire sale. From the opening hour of 10:30 and continuing throughout the day the big store was thronged with eager buyers, who took advantage to the utmost of the multitude of bargains offered in every department. Owing to the smoke and soot damage, which is scarcely noticeable in a great many instances, the company's entire stock of furniture, house furnishings, rugs, gloves, pianos, victrolas, musical merchandise, jewelry, etc., is offered in this great sale at the most extraordinary price sacrifices. No home furnishing need should be neglected when an opportunity like this is offered and it is expected that before the sale comes to a close thousands of homes throughout Eastern Connecticut will be made more attractive at a saving of many thousands of dollars.

BIRD STUDENTS NOTE MANY EARLY ARRIVALS

In spite of continued cold weather, the birds seem to be arriving in Norwich at their usual time.

Of the early migrants, the tree swallows were here April 5th. Seen at the same time were 18 or 20 male red-winged blackbirds. The females are not due until this month or the last of April. During the first weeks of April a flock of purple finches on Broadway was in full song and was a beautiful sight.

April 15th the pine warbler was in the pines by the State hospital. The yellow palm warbler, another of the early migrants, has been about for some days—a beauty he is with his chestnut crown and yellow under parts streaked with chestnut, easily identified by these markings and his "wagging" tail.

Other migrating warblers thus far noted are the Nashville and Blackburnian. Other birds that are here to stay for the summer are the wood thrush, oven bird, chewink, cat bird, rose-breasted grosbeak, black-throated green warbler and blue-winged warbler and black and white warbler. A rare treat one morning was to find first the northern water thrush and to have him turn about on a stone and show distinctly the yellow line over the eye, and sulphur yellow under parts with black markings. Then to still further identify himself gave his song.

A little farther along, a different song greeted the bird student, who found the singer to be the southern or northern water thrush and like his relative he kept his tail wagging. He too stood in fine light to show the distinct markings of the under parts, except on the throat and the white line over the eye. An unusual occurrence it was, to see and hear these two thrushes so well on the same morning. The Louisiana species stays here, but the other goes farther north for nesting. Another migrant noted was the solitary or blue-headed vireo, a pair of them, and such a pretty pair, with slate-blue head, white eye ring, olive green back, white wing bars, white under parts, sides washed with yellow.

Each day now will doubtless bring back many more of our bird friends.

BARD'S SHUT-OFF FOR GAS WILL BE FIRE PROTECTION

In the list of patents issued recently by the United States patent office to citizens of Connecticut, mention is made of patent rights being granted to Charles Tyler Bard of Norwich for fluid shut-off mechanism. By the recent invention of an automatic fluid shut-off mechanism for use on gas and liquids by Mr. Bard, manager of the Bard Union Co., Inc., property owners are now offered an automatic shut-off for installation on the gas service line within the cellar wall before entering gas meters, in any building or dwelling. The automatic closing of this shut-off is caused by the increased temperature from fire which separates a fusible link, allowing the shut-off to seal instantly. The fusible element used, will separate from the heat of a match held close to it, which assures quick action. Provision is also made for the closing of this shut-off by means of a pull cord which may run to any desired location on the outside of a building or dwelling, and by easily breaking a seal cover the cord may be pulled which operates the closing of the shut-off, which in some cases might be thought advisable rather than waiting for increased temperature in the cellar. In the construction of this new device, such features as simplicity, durability, and moderate cost, have been carefully worked out, so that after a fire, the closing means in this Bard automatic shut-off can be quickly reset for another fire with simply the renewal of a fusible link. Escaping gas has long been a most serious obstacle in fighting fires, and many deaths have occurred from the delay in shutting off its flow. The necessity of quickly locating the regular gas shut-off, generally placed somewhere in the ground near the property line and which is often times covered over with ice and snow, when fire occurs, is now done away with, and regardless of the melting off of the meter connections, property owners can now have added fire protection by the adoption of this simple device which puts the fire department in a position to work absolutely free from the fear of escaping gas.

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY

NEW YORK, May 7—(AP)—A sudden outburst of selling turned the course of prices reactionary toward the close of today's stock market, after an earlier period of dullness and irregularity. Final quotations disclosed a fairly long list of net declines of 1 to 4 points. Trading was in slightly larger volume than yesterday, the day's sales aggregating 832,700 shares.

A bear drive against some of the low-priced motors, based on the belief of a sharp reduction in second quarter earnings, started the selling movement which also involved the usual week-end profit taking. Jordan broke over 3 points to a new low for the year at 30 3-4 and Paige Detroit fell back over 3 points to a new low at 15 on rumors of a possible decrease in the dividend. Mack Trucks was hammered down over 4 points to 111 1-4 and General Motors, Hudson, White, Chrysler, Pierce Arrow and Moon yielded 1 to 3 1-2 points. Chrysler reported earnings of $1.35 a share in the first quarter, or only slightly more than in the same period last year.

British strike news was closely watched but apparently had little influence on the price movements in securities and commodities both wheat and cotton lost ground, but the selling was attributed largely to reports of more favorable weather for the growing crops. Foreign exchanges continued to show stability with persistent rumors of early stabilization plans for the French and Belgian currencies.

Oils started out upward at the opening but the buying movement soon petered out. Early gains of a point or two in Atlantic Refining, General Asphalt, General Petroleum, Pan-American B, and Colorado Fuel were wiped out. Weakness of the rubber shares was accompanied by rumors that a rather drastic marking down of inventories would have to be made by some companies because of the recent drop in the crude product. United States Rubber broke nearly 4 points to a new low for the year at 56 1-2 and Goodrich closed nearly two points lower at 51 1-8, also a new low.

Among the many other issues to fall back two points or more were Allied Chemical, American Woolen preferred, Dupont, General Electric, Pullman, Sloss-Sheffield Steel, United States Cast Iron Pipe and Woolworth.

Ward Baking A soared 6 1-2 points on the declaration of an initial quarterly dividend of $3. The commercial seventy issues were bid up about five points but lost more than half their gain.

Call money held steady at 4 per cent all day. Funds were reported to be more plentiful, however, and loans on the "outside market" were said to be obtainable as low as 3 1-2 per cent. Time money eased slightly, being on a flat 4 per cent. basis. Prime commercial paper was unchanged.

Foreign exchanges held relatively steady. Demand sterling ruled firm around $4.85 and French francs around 3.15 cents. Other chiefs were largely nominal.

JUDGE SIMPSON PRESIDING IN SUPERIOR COURT; FIRST TIME HERE

The opening short calendar day for the May additional session of the superior court was held here Friday morning, bringing to the city Judge Ernest C. Simpson for the first time he has presided at a superior court session here.

Judge Simpson remarked upon that fact as he took his seat on the bench and said he hoped an "agreeable association" would develop as he became better acquainted with the lawyers to most of whom he is a stranger although there were some he knew.

Business of the motion list was disposed of as follows:

Attorney Thomas E. Troland, receiver for Frank G. Ball & Co. was granted compensation in the amount of $50 in the case of James C. O'Connor and others against the Ball Co.

The final account of the receiver which showed the amount on hand to be $852.37 was approved. Last June the assets were $896.09 and the expenditures made since by the receiver were approved. Attorney Philip E. Hankey appeared for the receiver.

An order was issued directing the receiver to pay the assets to Treasurer E. Victor Prince for distribution. The amount was said to be all in cash, in addition to which there were a number of shares of various stocks considered to be worthless. The capitalization was $87,770.

The downfall of the concern is said to be due largely to the amount of worthless stocks which were listed on the company's books as assets, but which were appraised at $24 when the company went into receivership.

The stocks as held by the corporation and now claimed to be practically worthless follow: 18,000 shares Tuckeny oil; 2000 shares Big Barren Tuck oil and development; 200 shares Allied oil; 100 shares consolidated silver; 100 shares Alaska Gold Mine, 24-100 of a share of American Agriculture Chemical; 25 shares of Ohio Body; 10-20 of a share of Columbia Graphophone; 10 shares of U. S. Steamship Co.; 200 shares Gaston Williams and Wigmore; 100 shares Arizona stock.

The plaintiffs in the case were James C. O'Connor, Thomas Fitch, William Lucy, all of New London and W. Ellery Allyn, of Waterford. A motion discharging the receiver was continued until next week.

Judgment For $4,576.25

Judgment in the amount of $4,576.25 was awarded to the plaintiff in the foreclosure action of Frank Lucas, of New York against the Aztec Yarn and Manufacturing Co., also of New York. The judgment was for the recovery of the amount, which involved seven notes with interest due. May 24 was given as the limitation of time. The land involved is situated along Poquetanuck brook in the towns of Ledyard, Preston and North Stonington.

Lucas held seven notes each for $500, given by the defendant company, which is now practically extinct. In 1921 to him. Interest to the amount of $1,076.25, has accrued since the notes were issued, no interest having been paid. May 24 was given as the time for the defendant company to redeem their property.

The Aztec Yarn Spinning & Manufacturing Co. has been non-existant for the past several years and enough officers of the company could not be assembled in order that a quit claim deed reverting the property back to the heirs of Samuel Lucas could be secured, so this method of procedure was taken. William Vance was president of the defunct company. William Mitchell, whose property is adjacent to that mentioned in this action, in the town of Preston, was a witness in the case as was Mr. Main of Poquetanuck.

Acceptance of return of receiver's sale and order confirming the sale were granted in the case of the J. D. Crosby Co., and others against the Braided Thread Corp. The sale of the thread corporation was made by the receiver, Attorney Benjamin H. Hewitt, April 30.

Bond for costs of $75, payable within 10 days, was ordered in the case of Rajewalsa against Szostak.

The following cases were continued: Lusko against Senawsky, alias, and wife; hearing on plea in abatement.

Hadlai A. Hull, state attorney, late of this city, against Chesterfield Baptist society, and others; allowances to committee for services and expenses, supplemental judgment and order of distribution.

Connor against Kusia, and wife: judgment of foreclosure.

The case of Thoma against Feister, disclosure of defense or judgment.

MISS ELOISE SMITH IN WELLESLEY TRAVEL GROUP

Miss Eloise Smith of Oldelma, Washington street, who is a senior at Wellesley college, is to be one of a group of Wellesley girls who will this summer become acquainted with students in other lands as they travel through Central Europe, guided and entertained by student groups of the localities they will visit.

This tour is one of several arranged by the International Confederation of Students, with a general cultural aim and the specific purpose of promoting better understanding between the students of different nations. The federation, founded in 1919, includes the student bodies of 28 countries.

The tour chosen by Wellesley, under the leadership of Professor Flora I. MacKinnon, of the department of psychology and philosophy, will sail from New York June 29 on the S. S. Bremen, and cover Central Europe, arriving in New York Sept. 15. The itinerary includes mainly Germany, Caccho-slovakia and Austria, with a week each in Paris and Geneva. The latter week will be made memorable by attendance at the Geneva School of International Studies, where courses in international problems will be given for the tourists and student discussion groups held. The great cities of Central Europe—Berlin, Prague, Munich and Vienna—and the university towns of the Rhine valley will be visited, as well as the rural districts in each country. Where ever possible, use is to be made of academic dormitories, and in some places the hospitality of private houses has been extended. Numerous social activities have been arranged and, aside from the definite itinerary, there will be days free for individual excursions.

BUST OF BUCKINGHAM TO GLASTONBURY CHURCH

At a meeting of the Hartford East association at Buckingham church in Glastonbury this week, Professor Benjamin W. Bacon, of Yale Divinity school, presented to the Buckingham church a bust of the Civil war governor, William A. Buckingham, of Norwich. It is a gift of Mrs. Bacon, her two sisters and a brother, all grandchildren of Governor Buckingham. In that connection Professor Bacon gave an address on "The Country Church as the Mother of Men." The Buckingham post office was established in 1867 and took its name in honor of the war governor.

Professor Bacon said that a town in central Iowa at that time named itself Buckingham and the governor gave the town a church and a schoolhouse but that the name has been dropped. In accepting the gift for the church, the Rev. W. W. Evans, pastor, read an appropriate poem composed many years ago by Stephen Norton, a prominent resident in Cotton Hollow when that was a mill community in South Glastonbury. Professor Bacon praised country life for its cultivation of self-reliance, neighborliness and family life and its opportunity for deepening of the religious life in solitude.

CHRIST CHURCH SERVICE FOR MOTHERS' DAY

Wesley Aurelia. The church school children are inviting their Fathers and Mothers to attend the morning service with them, having a hearty family worship.

Famous Cup Bought

At an auction of antiques in New York Thursday, the famous Miles Standish cup sold for $1,000 on order to a private collector whose name was not divulged. This cup was ordered sold by Thomas Page, of Stamford, Conn., a direct descendant of Standish. It is a plain cup or mug given by John Robinson to Standish before he sailed for the New World. The cup is four and one-eighth inches high, four inches in diameter and weighs eight ounces.

TEN PER CENT FOREIGN CARS ON CONNECTICUT HIGHWAYS

It is estimated by the state motor vehicle department that approximately one-tenth of all the motor vehicles on Connecticut highways are cars registered by other states. This is largely due to the fact that Connecticut furnishes the direct arteries for motor vehicle travel between New York city and Boston. All but an inconsiderable number (perhaps 5 per cent of the whole) of the so called "foreign" cars on the highways of this state are New York and Massachusetts vehicles. A large proportion of them are heavy trucks engaged in interstate freight and passenger transportation, a type whose rapid increase is complicating the traffic problem throughout the country.

Because of its position between the two great metropolitan centers and its many "feeder" roads running into Boston and New York, the proportion of foreign cars to domestic vehicles in Connecticut is probably considerably larger than that for any other state of the Union. At least 7 per cent of the cars involved in accidents in Connecticut last year were machines registered in other states and 38 per cent were cars from towns other than those in which the accidents occurred. The figures for out-of-state cars were not kept in a separate classification during the first quarter of 1925, but were included in the list of "out-of-town" cars in accidents, so it is likely that the percentage of out-of-state cars in accidents would be a little larger and that for "out-of-town" cars a little smaller, if the same classification were to have been undertaken during the first three months of the year.

Data as to the registration of 8 per cent of the cars involved in Connecticut accidents for 1925 is lacking. "Local" cars constituted 52 per cent of the machines in accidents. In other words, that proportion of all the cars in accidents in this state met with mishaps in the towns from which they were registered.

The theme of the morning will be "The Parable of Growth." At the church school hour the main school will participate in a special Mothers' day program, and at B. Y. P. U. the special speaker will be Mrs. Benjamin H. Palmer.

VOLUNTEERS EXCEED THE DEMAND FOR WORKERS THROUGHOUT GREAT BRITAIN

Those Applicants Who Are Anxious For Employment Will Be Put to Work as Developments Require—There Has Been No Change in the General Strike Situation—At Birmingham the Police Raided Communist Headquarters, Seized Newspapers and Arrested Five Men and a Woman.

LONDON, May 9—(AP)—A spokesman for the government today denied that any news of the general strike was being withheld and promised that the government would be the first to announce any serious strike situation that might develop.

The statement was made because of widespread rumors being circulated throughout Great Britain that government officials are withholding much news and disseminating only that favorable to the government.

It was stated that Saturday night and Sunday morning passed without serious disturbances anywhere. Armored cars, cavalry and other troops are convoying food throughout the country wherever they are needed and more convoys are available at a moment's notice.

The spokesman announced that at Birmingham yesterday the police raided communist headquarters, seized newspapers and arrested five men and a woman. At Plymouth, disturbances necessitated the calling out of the police reserves and mounted police. Five arrests were made. At Middleborough looting of small shops occurred last night. There were also similar isolated incidents in the London area. In the Battersea district, two policemen were injured quelling a disturbance. A man was arrested for making a seditious speech.

At Deptford ten persons were arrested for inciting the crowds to attack the police. At Islington, all the workers in the borough electric plant quit without notice; they have been discharged. All factories at Walthamstow are inactive owing to the cutting off of the electrical power supply. The New Castle electric power station is running full strength, with the help of volunteers.

All the slaughterhouse men struck at Birkenhead after killing the cattle on hand. The flour mill workers were also called out.

Only minor disturbances have been reported from South Wales.

At Poole, Cambridge undergraduates have arrived in a yacht to inaugurate passenger and mail service to the continent. In Lancashire all the union transport workers will go on strike tomorrow.

Manchester has 10,000 volunteer workers; Liverpool, where the tram services are normal 10,400 volunteers. Hull, 3,400, Leeds 2,750, Sheffield 6,200, York 2,580.

The number of volunteers, according to the spokesman, generally exceeds the actual requirements of the moment. Those chafing at inaction are asked to be patient, as great reserves will be needed in such a crisis as the nation is going through.

MAY CALL OUT SECOND AND THIRD LINES OF DEFENSE

LONDON, May 9—(AP)—The British government utilized the greater part of Sunday in developing its preparations to combat the general strike, which now has been in progress for nearly a week, and which seems no nearer settlement than the day it began.

Troop movements went along with a vim, soldiers, all steel-helmeted, passed through the city's main thoroughfares at intervals on their way to outlying districts and various vital points where the government deemed their services might be needed. The early morning sabbath calm was broken as 153 motor trucks heavily loaded with food and convoyed by 16 armored cars and flanked by cavalry rumbled from Victoria docks to Hyde park.

For so great an upheaval, the strike has brought little disturbance or disorder; even at the mass meetings held today. There was scant evidence that so mighty a battle was being fought. J. H. Thomas, once minister of the crown in the Macdonald cabinet, and recognized leader of the labor men in the present strike, addressing strikers at Hammersmith, spoke earnestly and dispassionately, reiterating that no challenge to the constitution was involved and declaring that "whatever the end, so far as the nation is concerned, it must be worse than before the strike."

On the other hand, the earl of Balfour, ever high in the councils of government, in a signed statement in the British Gazette, the official government organ, described the general strike as "an attempted revolution," the success of which would "bring ruin, swift, complete and irresistible" upon the country.

One of the questions still undecided by the union leaders is whether to call out what is known as the second line of defense, and, if necessary, the final reserve, the third line of defense. Many of the second line workers continue to walk out on their own initiative, but without instructions from the trades union congress. This line includes seamen, electricians, gas and water workers, as well as unionists employed in various essential or municipal services.

The third line of defense comprises scavengers and general laborers in all the allied trades represented in the trades union congress. If the congress should order out both these lines more than two million workers will cease their tasks, bringing the total number of strikers involved in the movement to aproximately five million.

GENERAL RAILWAY STRIKE IN IRELAND A POSSIBILITY

BELFAST, Ireland May 9—(AP)—A general railway strike in Ireland is now a possibility according to labor leaders.

The strike would not be connected directly with the general strike now in progress, but would hinge on a circular issued by the Associated Irish Railways calling for a graduated wage reduction beginning in June. If the reduction is enforced, labor leaders say, the railways workers are sure to go out.

COOLIDGE AND DAWES IN MOTHERS' DAY OBSERVANCE

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—President Coolidge and Vice President Dawes took part today in the nation-wide observance of Mothers' day.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge heard Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of Chicago deliver a Mothers' day sermon at the First Congregational church, and the vice president presided over exercises at Arlington national cemetery, commemorating the day.

"The test of any civilization or any person is the attitude taken toward the child in the midst," Bishop Hughes said. "Our country's life must be determined by the relation it takes to the young." He added that "Mothers lay their claim upon the heart of the world because mothers are devoted to the children that God is always placing in the midst of our lives."

Secretary of Labor Davis was the principal speaker at Arlington, where, standing beside the tomb of the unknown soldier he said, the heroism manifested by that soldier on the field of battle "was the masculine counterpart of that heroism his mother displayed in bringing him to birth."

"Let us then on this day remember them together," he added, "the unknown soldier and the unknown mother, hero and heroine of our national life."

The services which were sponsored by the American war mothers and the congressional clubs were concluded with scattering of white carnations over the graves of the World war dead by airplanes from Bolling field.

POLICE AND ROYALISTS IN CONFLICT IN PARIS

PARIS, May 9.—(AP)—Joan of Arc day national fete was marred in Paris by a conflict between the police and royalist forces in which 118 policemen were injured. Two of the police were removed to the hospital and four others were unable to return to duty. About 40 of the Camelots Du Roi, a royalist organization, for the most part young students, were injured.

The clash grew out of the refusal of Minister of the Interior Durand to permit formal processions for the purpose of placing wreaths on the two monuments to the maid of Orleans, one in the Place Saint Augustin and the other in the Place Des Pyramides, abutting the Rue Rivoli. More than 200 arrests were made but 31 were released after examination of their credentials.

Despite mobolization of a vast force of police and republican guards, the royalist succeeded in planting floral tributes at the bases of both statutes, forcing their way through the police cordon and battling with canes against night sticks.

DEMAND INVESTIGATION OF THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP) — A thorough going investigation of the Anti-Saloon league is demanded in a final brief by the wets filed with the senate prohibition committee, which now is considering the various proposals for modifying and tightening up the Volstead act.

The drys in their brief, prepared by Wayne B Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, demanded that the committee give dry enforcement officials the power they need to make prohibition effective and asserted that the nation was not in the mood to "permit criminals and lawbrakers to revise its constitution and repeal its laws."

The wets in their brief asked the committee to re-open the hearings and summon Mr. Wheeler for cross examination as to the amount of contributions to the Anti-Saloon league by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation; John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and other captains of industry.

NO TRACE OF FARMHAND WHO ASSAULTED EMPLOYER

REDDING, Conn., May 9—(AP)—Up to late tonight no trace had been found of Jack Crawford, the itinerant farmhand who brutally beat his elderly employer, E. Burr Stanford, of Redding, and then set fire to the barn and house on the farm last night although a posse of seven officers from the Ridgefield barracks and armed citizens had scoured the Silver Hollow district for 24 hours.

The posse under the direction of Sergeant John C. Kelly was still confident tonight that the fugitive would be found, since it is known that the territory in which the man escaped is unknown to him. Notice has been sent to Brewster, N. Y., said to be Crawford's home and the police there are looking up his record. A description has been broadcast.

First Motor Ship Has Arrived at New York

Combination of Sailing Vessel and Motor Ship—Made 6,200 Miles in 38 Days.

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—A strange craft, neither sailing vessel nor motor ship but a combination of both, came into New York harbor today and evoked as much curiosity from the latter-day Manhattanites as did Henry Hudson's half moon from the Indians, 300 years ago. It was the world's first rotor ship, the Badenna Baden of Hamburg.

Flying the flag of the new German republic, she came up the harbor on wind-power alone at a 9-knot clip while tugs and shipping tooted and ferry-boatef passengers started. The 600-ton ship, with its two huge rotor towers revolving an average of 95 revolutions a minute, was carrying a cargo of building stone. It completed an experimental trip of 6,200 miles in 38 days.

Anton Flettner, inventor of the rotor, met the ship at Quarantine. After receiving the reports of Capter Peter Call sen he announced that he considder the voyage had demonstrated the success of the rotor principle. A considerable saving in Diesel oil is practical evidence, he said.

The rotors, which serve in place of sails and have no connection with the propeller, were in operation about 70 per cent of the voyage, frequently unassisted by the six-cylinder, 250 horsepower, main Diesel engine.

"The daily mileage was greater on this trip than ever reached before and greater than was thought possible," Mr. Flettner said.

"On one of the best days the ship made 212 miles although the average daily run was about 168 miles for the trip. Once in rough weather, when the main engine was shut down for repairs, the Baden-Baden made five knots on the rotors alone for several hours."

The voyage has shown, he said, that it will be possible to operate the rotor hereafter with a much smaller auxiliary engine than was at first thought possible. The auxiliary engine of the Baden-Baden is a 45 horsepower, compound. Diesel engine which operates three dynamos one for each of the two rotors and one for the general lighting system. The rotor dynamos operate small motors which turn the rotors. Because of their peculiar aero-dynamic properties, the rotors produce ten times the propulsive force of an equal amount of sail area.

According to Chief Engineer Hilmar de La Motte, the Baden-Baden's auxiliary engine could be replaced with one of only 25 or 24 horsepower.

The ship will remain in New York about three weeks for public inspection. After that it will be taken to Chicago through the Erie canal to the Great Lakes. He said also he was considering invitations to visit other American ports.

Forest Fires Raged In Three States

In Various Sections of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

BOSTON, May 9.—(AP)—Forest fires in various sections of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire, which last night threatened to invade unlimited areas with destruction of much property, were today reported in most instances to be either out or under control. No estimate as to probable damage had been given.

Fire in the Diamond Hill district of Cumberland, R. I., was reported today to have broken out afresh. The new outbreak, however, was not considered dangerous, as the wind had changed, forcing the fire back over the burned area.

The fire in the region around Hudson, N. H., is reported practically out. This conflagration last night was considered one of serious proportions, and was brought under control only through the efforts of several hundred men and limited fire apparatus from nearby localities. It burned over approximately 14 square miles of farm property.

It was in the Cumberland district that several fires came together yesterday and burned over an estimated area of about 2,000 acres. Fire departments from Woonsocket, Pawtucket, Central Falls and nearby villages sent help.

A fire in Wrentham, near the state line, and another in West Wrentham were reported today to be practically out.

WALTER S. WARD HAS BEEN MISSING SINCE MAY 5

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—Walter S. Ward, son of George S. Ward, former head of the Ward Baking company, has been missing since May. His brother, Ralph D. Ward, reported to the police today.

Ralph Ward said his brother had not been heard from since he left New York May 5 for Baltimore on a business trip. Walter Ward acquitted in 1923 of a first degree murder charge for the killing of a sailor, Clarence M. Peters, on a plea of self-defense.

Walter Ward's automobile was found abandoned in Trenton, N. J., last Thursday night by Trenton police. The windshield was broken and a large rock was found in the front seat. Ralph Ward declared last night, however, that the car had been stolen and that reports of his brother's disappearance were "bunk." At Walter Ward's apartment a maid said he had stepped out "a few hours before."

Ralph Ward admitted to the police today, however, that the family feared foul play. His brother's wife, he said, was too ill to see anyone.

When the Trenton police found Ward's car, the floor and rear seat were strewn with clothing and papers. A search of all the Trenton hospitals and hotels was made but the young man could not be found. At the request of the Trenton police, Thomas A. Downey, secretary and treasurer of the Electric Corporation of New York, of which the missing man was president, went to Trenton to aid in the search.

At the offices of the company here last night, a man who would not give his name, said he had seen Ward there the day before.

FEAR RELIEF BILL IN THE HOUSE THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—The house tomorrow again will turn its attention to farm relief legislation with leaders hopeful of concluding general debate at a night session.

This would prepare the way for consideration on Tuesday of amendments to the first of the three pending measures—the Haugen bill with its plan for price stabilization. The other two, the Tincher credit plan and the Curtis-Aswell national commodity marketing plan, will then be taken up in order.

Leaders are hopeful of a vote on all three by Friday at the latest. Although they admit that progress will be slow if members carry out announced intneions to seek amendment of the measures. One of the proposed changes would eliminate the $375,000,000 appropriation from the Haugen bill.

At adjournment late Saturday the members freely admitted there were sharp divergencies of opinions of the three bills, permitting little indication of how the house will line up when record votes are reached.

NO PULITZER TROPHY AIR RACE THIS YEAR

NEW YORK, May 9—(AP)—The annual Pulitzer trophy race, usually the closing event of the national air races, will not be held this year, the New York World announced tonight, after learning that the army and navy, for several years the only contenders, would have no entries for the 1926 air contest.

Lack of international competition was given as the ringipal reason for the army and navy staying out of the race. It was also stated that funds were not available for building new planes and neither the army nor the navy cared to fly those used last year, according to the World in view of the death at Dayton in 1924 of two pilots who entered the race in ships two years old.

The National Air races are to be held this fall at Philadelphia during the Sesqui-Centennial celebration there. Last year the races were held at Mitchel field, Long Island, and Lieut. Bettis of the army won the Pulitzer trophy from Lieut. Williams of the navy.

Hopped Off From King's Bay, Spitzbergen, at 12.50 Sunday Morning and Returned Safely at 4.20 Sunday Afternoon—Commander Byrd and His Crew of the American Built Monoplane "Miss Josephine Ford" Were Welcomed by the Whole Population of King's Bay.

NEW YORK, May 9—(AP)—Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd, United States navy aviator, flew over the north pole today, the New York Times and the St. Louis Post Dispatch announced. Commander Byrd, first to accomplish this feat, made the flight in 15 hours and 30 minutes, leaving his base at King's Bay, Spitzbergen, at 12:50 o'clock this morning (Greenwich time) and returning safely at 4:20 o'clock this afternoon.

The entire population of King's Bay turned out to welcome the Americans return. Captain Amundsen, Lincoln Ellsworht and the crew of their airship Norge on which they plan a similar flight, greeted Commander Byrd upon his descent.

NEW YORK, May 9—(AP)—The American built monoplane "Miss Josephine Ford," in which Lieut. Commander Richard E. Byrd, according to an announcement of the New York Times and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, flew over the north pole today, was taken to Spitzbergen aboard the steamer Chantier after several false starts and near-accidents in New York harbor.

The three-engine Fokker plane, named after the daughter of Edsel Ford, was endangered by a falling beam while the Chantier was being loaded at the Brooklyn Navy yard. Readjustments of cargo were made, and the ship left the yard April 5, but had to anchor again off Staten Island to allow the crew to make fast other pieces of cargo which threatened the airplane.

The motors of the "Miss Josephine Ford," and of the expedition's second airplane, a Curtiss Oriole, were taken from the hold and fastened on deck, and the Chantier crossed the bar on the night of April 6.

The expedition arrived at King's Bay, Spitzbergen on April 19. The following day, braving the ice hazards, the crew landed the airplanes, and began their re-assembling. On May 4 tests were made of skids attached to the "Miss Josephine Ford," but one of them snapped. A successful trial flight was made the next day, and Commander Byrd announced on May 6 he was ready for his dash to the pole.

Secretary Davis said he "like all Americans" rejoiced at "this new triumph of American aviation. Commander Byrd's feat is not only epoch-making from a technical standpoint, it is a wonderful act of courage. A country with such servants will never fail in a crisis."

"PARDON MILL" FOR RELEASE OF CHICAGO GANGSTERS

CHICAGO, May 9—(AP)—Investigation of last week's prison break at Statesville and of crime conditions in Chicago, in connection with the recent slaying of an assistant state's attorney here, today further inclined toward a two-angled effort to ferret out the "pardon mill" which Attorney General Carlstrom last week charged in operating for the release of Chicago gangsters from the state penitentiary.

Letters referring to paroles found in the effects of Deputy Warden Klein who was killed by the seven escaping convicts, occupied the attention of authorities at Statesville and Joliet.

At Chicago Major M. A. Messlein head of the Major Engineering corporation, and welfare worker among paroled convicts, was further interviewed, together with numerous stockholders in the concern.

It developed that Deputy Warden Klein had owned stock in the engineering corporation which Messlein said was given the prison official as "promotional stock" for work in selecting a factory site and other activity. A similar gift, he said, was made to Will Colvin, head of the Illinois pardons and paroles board.

LEANDER WILLIS, AGED 73, ENTICED GIRLS FROM 9 TO 14

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, May 9—Leander Willis, 73, of this city, a stone mason by occupation, was placed under arrest Saturday evening on a charge of indecent assault with intent to carnally know a female child. He was found with a 13 year old girl in the post office. The actions of Willis and the child were being watched by Acting Captain of Police Frank McLean from the police station window directly opposite the lobby of the post office on High street. When convinced that the elderly man's intentions were for no good purpose, Officer Arthur Hurley was sent to the postoffice. The girl was taken to police headquarters where she confessed that Willis' action had been improper on several previous occasions. She gave the names of several other little girls who had been dragged into the degraded man's net. They averaged in ages from 14 to 9, and are pupils of the Model Grammar school. Following an examination of the girls by Dr. M. D. Riordan Sunday, Acting Chief of Police Grady modified an original charge of rape to the one given above. Willis secured his temporary freedom on a bond of $2,000 furnished by H. Netf. The case is expected to be taken up behind closed doors Monday with a possible continuance for further investigation.

Alphonse Soucy, 52, was arrested for being drunk and for breach of the peace, and Joseph Blanchard, 36, for breach of the peace. Soucy and Blanchard had been fighting and judging from the appearance of the older man any referee would have given the decision to Blanchard. Both men were from Lowell, Mass., and came here to work at the American Thread company. Soucy is at present employed as caretaker of the links at the Country club. He claimed that upon the urgent invitation of Mrs. Blanchard, mother of Joseph, he came here from Lowell and boarded with the Blanchard family. Last week an argument began and he started to move out. At that time Mrs. Blanchard inflicted severe scratches on his face when he asked where his hammer was. His room rent having been paid in advance, Soucy said that he returned for some reason or other Saturday night. He was pushed down the stairs and then severely beat up by young Blanchard. Sunday forenoon he was still bleeding from cuts about the face and he displayed two thoroughly blackened eyes. The men will be in police court Monday morning.

A unique banking system instituted at Windham high school for the use of school organizations held the interest of many who attended the demonstration at the school Friday night. The bank is controlled by the commercial department seniors. All deposits and payments are made at the bank, which serves the school as city banks serve business men. At the close of the school year the deposits of $22, the first year of the bank, were $124 69 and the savings $485.90. These figures have increased gradually every year. There are three distinctive purposes for the bank—it provides a place for making systematic receipts and payments of school money. It provides adequate records for the finances of the school and furnishes first-hand training for the commercial seniors. The banking system has served to bring about healthier financial conditions of classes and clubs at the school. Some $8,000 were handled in the bank last year. The bank sells stock within the school. It has its officers and the directors have supervision over the making of entries, the preparation of statements and the declaration of dividends.

DANIELSON

OFFICER WATCHES OUT FOR PARKING AT STATION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 9—A railroad police officer was on duty Saturday at the passenger station of the N. Y. N. H. and H. R. R. company, seeing to it that no unauthorized parking was done on the company's property. The railroad company is having more or less difficulty in stopping parking about the station. People insist on leaving their machines there. No Parking signs notwithstanding, so the company is engaged in a real effort to keep them away. To date the company has been very lenient and has not asked for any arrests for violation of the no parking rule, but these may come later if the company cannot control the situation otherwise.

TAXI MEN BOOST FARES TROLLEY RATES RECALLED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 9—The Connecticut company is being importuned for coach service between Danielson and Putnam and Wildwood park, Saturday evenings. Taxi drivers are getting 50 cents per passenger for making the run between either Danielson or Putnam and the park, which has a dance resort. The trolley, which formerly ran between Putnam and Danielson and right by the park used to get 15 2-3 cents for taking passengers to the park from either Putnam or Danielson.

There is promise of the development of a real summer colony at Alexander's lake. A considerable number of cottages has been built along the south, north and east shores of the beautiful body of water the past few years, but now, the growth is much more rapid. New cottages are to be built this season by Luther M. Keith, Putnam, state highway supervisor, and by G. Ilene Caron of Danielson. Negotiations for sites are numerous and indicative of the desire of many to get located at the lake before real hot weather comes.

Out went the firemen and out went many others, to see what was doing, Saturday night, at 11:20, when an alarm came in from Box 18. It happened that many were already out and had little to do but chase up the fire machines the blaze giving them the direction to follow. It wasn't much of a fire—a blaze running along the east embankment of the Quinebaug river up at the old Riverside racetrack, where a real estate development has resulted in the building of a number of small dwellings, which seemed at one time to be threatened by the fire. Men beat out the fire and the sightseers went home to snooze until Sunday morning.

Tonight (Monday) will bring the inauguration of the Danielson-Goodyear coach service, one round trip. This arrangement has been perfected by the Connecticut company after negotiation with representatives of the chamber of commerce. It is to be hoped that this service will be sufficiently well patronized to warrant its continuance. To popularize the service the chamber of commerce caused heralds telling of the service to be circulated on Saturday. These circulars welcome Goodyear people to Danielson. The coach is to leave the mill office at Goodyear at 7 o'clock daylight saving time, will circle around Goodyear Heights and then proceed to Danielson. Returning the coach will leave Danielson at 10:10 p. m., daylight saving time, or as soon thereafter as entertainments at the theatre are over. The fare—one way—will be two tokens.

The chamber of commerce announces that the service will continue as long as Goodyear people patronize it sufficiently to make it feasible to maintain it.

It was stated Saturday that cash and pledges received in the past week's county Y M C A drive for funds in Danielson totaled $871. However, this figure is not the maximum that may be expected, for some reports were not filed when this compilation was made. Killingly's quota of the fund to be raised in the county for the general expenses of the organization for a year was $1,500.

Saturday morning the funeral of Mrs Helen Louise LaFleche was held from her home in the Daniels Village section of Killingly, with services at St. Joseph's church in Danville at 9 o'clock. Rev Ludovic Parthis of Voluntown was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Today, Tuesday and Wednesday will be observed as Rogation days at St. James' church. These days are set apart in the spring season that special devotion may be participated in by the parishioners toward a spiritual appeal for the success of the season's crops and the general well-being of all who labor.

State highway crews are receiving much praise from motorists this spring for the efficient manner in which they have applied road oil, covered it up and carried out the other operations incident to this part of their year's work. There has been no ground for complaint this year—as there has been in some other years—about applying oil and then leaving it uncovered, as a menace to the safety of all car drivers who came along. The work has been done with an exceeding degree of efficiency this year, and it is a pleasure to make note of the fact on behalf of the thousands who appreciate what has been done in this and other nearby towns. The work has been done with such rapidity and thoroughness as to be little less than amazing.

The persistently cold weather of May is explained. It's all due to daylight saving! It seems that it is always colder during the night season than during the day. Now people are getting up when its cold, don't get warmed up during the day and go to bed before the real warmth of the sun gets in its work—in other words, they are sleeping when it's really warm and comfortable. Well, there are a lots of laughs over time-keeping. Some people take it seriously!

Within a few miles of Danielson several forest fires were raging, Saturday afternoon. Getting them under control involved work by large numbers of men interested in protecting their own property or that of neighbors. Excepting for the night fire near the race track, none of these destructive occurrences were in the immediate vicinity of Danielson. The others were reported by motorists riding through the surrounding countryside. Lack of rain this spring has set up a dangerous condition—as to dryness—in woods and fields.

Following are the offices of Killingly Woman's club for another two years: President, Miss Emma F. Pilling (elected for a fifth term); first vice-president Mrs. Alfred L. Reed; second vice president, Mrs. Ernest R. Warren, treasurer, Miss Ada F. King; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. I. Craig; recording secretary, Miss Marion D. Chollar; auditor, Miss Elizabeth R. Woodworth; members of the executive committee, Miss Louise Danielson, chairman, Mrs James M. Paine, Mrs. H. G. Arnold, Mrs. W. E. Mitch.

Miss Amelia Hutchins, Mrs. Charles F Alexander, Miss M. J. Mendell and Mrs. Theodore Hammett are the delegates to the annual meeting of the state federation, May 17, 18 and 19.

Excepting for a day at Attawaugan this week, Tax Collector James R. Walsh is to give his attention to collecting taxes in Danielson. He has been at the work since late in April and is nearing the end of the year's period for intensive activity in getting in the money that pays to make the wheels of the town's departments go around. The money has been coming in very satisfactorily so far—yet much remains to be collected. The bulk of this likely will be obtained within the next ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Young of Providence were guests Sunday of Town Clerk and Mrs. Frank E. Preston of Broad street.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Andrews, of Boston, former residents of Danielson, spent the week end here.

Cold weather over the week end reduced the motor traffic in large degree, and, it is also held, there is less riding because business generally is not as good in southern New England as it might be and this fact cuts down incomes.

The late season, notwithstanding, there are those who tell you that peas they planted sometime since are showing to a height of four inches above ground.

Thursday, the feast of the Ascension, will be a holy day of obligation for Roman Catholics. Four masses will be said at St. James' church.

Michael Cronin is at Warren, R. I., this week, visiting relatives.

John Flood is now occupying and operating the Bullingame farm, in the Mashentuck district of the town.

Peter A Bedard of New Bedford spent the week end visiting with relatives in Danielson and vicinity.

William Hall was born in Ashford 48 years ago, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hall. He began his career in railroading at the age of 21 and later became yardmaster of the Putnam switching crew, a position he held until the switcher at this point was taken off. He was then transferred to the Willimantic yard but has continued to make his home in Putnam, commuting back and forth. BYRD'S POLAR FLIGHT

Once again the United States navy scores. It was Admiral Peary who first discovered the north pole and now it is Lieut. Commander Richard E. Byrd. The former traveled over the ice; the latter went through the air, covering the distance in a brief part of the time required in the tedious hike over the rough, icy trail. There is a difference in flying over and actually setting foot on the pole, but there is plenty of honor in both.

That Commander Byrd should be the first to accomplish this feat is particularly gratifying to those who have been following his preparations. He was a member of the MacMillan expedition of last year, but this was his first flight to reach the pole, and it will be remembered that he displayed his confidence in the airplane even after the experience of Explorer Amundsen, who forsook the flying machine for the dirigible and is about ready to hop off from the same point that the Byrd flight was made. The American naval officer has demonstrated what Amundsen once thought could be done, but what he became optimistic about after his own experience. Flying over the pole and returning to the point of departure differs from the plans of the heads of other expeditions which are expecting to claim polar honors this spring, and even though Lieut. Commander Byrd is the first to fly over the north pole there is distinction awaiting Amundsen if he accomplishes the flight from Spitsbergen to Alaska over the pole in a dirigible and also for Wilkins if he is successful in making a flight from Point Barrows, Alaska, over the pole to Spitsbergen in an airplane.

Each one has undertaken the task in a different manner; thus each, if he carries out his schedule, will be able to claim first honors for his particular stunt. One thing is being made evident is these days of increased aviation, and that is that the north pole is not as isolated a spot as it was once even though a flight over it doesn't mean the early launching of a Florida land boom there.

Full credit must be given to Commander Byrd for his accomplishment. He pursued a virtually unblazed trail under favorable conditions for that region, but involving large risks and requiring adequate courage and skill, both of which he has clearly demonstrated. He was given a big send off when he left New York and he will be given a bigger reception when he returns.

LIMITING BRIDGE LOADS

Protests are frequently made for selfish purposes rather than due regard for safety and such would seem to be the case in Washington where truck drivers are protesting changing in the traffic regulations of that city whereby loads on eight bridges would be restricted to 20,000 pounds.

There are those who seem to think that because a bridge looks strong enough it ought to be possible to subject it to anything in the way of a load from a baby carriage to a freight car and experience no bad results. There was the time when the loads transported on the highways caused no concern on these bridges but the situation is different these days. Loads which used to be carried by railroads are being moved by motor truck and when it is found that the modern highways are not able to stand the strain in some instances there can be no surprise when it is found necessary to safeguard life and limb by restricting the truck loads. It is no more than has been done with certain forms of bridge construction. A trip through the country discloses bridges which limit the loads that can be carried on them, and there were the days when horses were forbidden to trot across bridges, but the modern highway has not in all cases been accompanied by modern bridges. Old though safe structures have their limitations and it is far preferable that conditions should be heeded than to permit them to be disregarded and invite loss of life, the destruction of the bridge and the inconvenience caused by the closing of the highway until a new bridge can be erected.

Tests of the Washington bridges have shown that they will not withstand a greater weight than the ten tons per vehicle. That is a sufficient reason for establishing and enforcing such a limit. In fact there are instances which show that it would be well if there were more frequent tests made of bridges in order to ascertain the deterioration they have undergone and determine what needs to be done to them to insure safety. Bridges that can be pushed down or broken down ought not to be permitted to carry traffic under such conditions.

FIGHTING FOREST FIRES

Wherever a good start is possible forest fires can be relied upon to raise havoc. They sweep through underbrush, destroying the small trees and killing the well developed ones, and menace whatever buildings happen to lie in their way.

There are localities where such fires are bound to be more disastrous than in others, according to the character of the woodland. Some of the worst fires every spring are reported from Cape Cod where scrub oaks and pines cover a large part of the hills and dales, and a fire on land covered with pines is fast, hot and furious. If not only sweeps rapidly along but it is a hard fire to fight. The bed of pine needles underneath are like tinder when a spark falls among them and when the fire gets into the branches there is nothing that can stop it until it burns itself out. Great tracts of such burned over woodland are to be seen every summer and the owner needs no such reminder of his loss.

It is no small problem to decide the best manner of fighting such fires, but in the belief that tests must be made to determine the most effective method the conservation commission and the Forestry association of Massachusetts are to try out the idea of cutting up the large tracts of woodland into smaller ones by running what amounts to roadways through them, so that there will be a check on all sides of such blocks in case of fire and it will be possible to make a stand at such points. These roadways will have to be made wide enough so that the flames cannot leap across them, and so that the accumulation of leaves and needles therein can be prevented from furnishing food for the flames at such points.

It will involve no small amount of money to cut the woodland up into sections of a few hundred acres each but the test will be watched with keen interest for if it works out satisfactorily on Cape Cod there is no reason why it should not be just as successful, if not more so, elsewhere. Certainly the destruction from such a cause warrants the trying out of the idea.

GET STARTED

Because the recent decision, which showed that a broadcasting company was not obliged to respect the regulations of the agreement whereby radio regulation was left in the hands of the secretary of commerce pending legislative action, has not already produced chaos there are those who maintain that the dire predictions have not been fulfilled, and therefore there might be no harm in delaying action on a radio bill at this session.

Because chaos hasn't developed doesn't mean that it will not. Probably the reason it has not is that the broadcasting companies are for the greater part not of the same disposition as the Chicago station which refused to accept the wave length assigned, and do not want to trespass on the rights of others, established under a cooperative agreement. But the longer the situation is allowed to go whereby it is possible to disregard regulations more can be expected to kick over the traces and then the trouble can be expected.

It is possible for congress to wait until that situation develops and then prolong the agony by debating various measures for its relief. But that is the state of affairs which it is desired to avoid and which can be avoided by the enactment of legislation dealing with this matter. It isn't claimed that any one of the bills before congress is perfect. In fact, the two houses differ on the respective bills before them, but that is not a sufficient reason for doing nothing and blocking a start of what is needed. The time to act upon such a matter is before a grand mix-up develops. It may, and probably will need amending later on but a start is the desirable thing now.

KRIM PREFERS TO FIGHT

If we are to judge by the outcome of the efforts in behalf of a peaceful adjustment of the situation in Morocco the Riffians haven't been brought to the point where they are ready to accept the terms offered. They are willing to participate in more blood shedding. Unless there can be new pressure brought to bear, or new terms can be offered, there seems to be nothing to do but resume fighting.

There are many things which the Riffians can point to with pride in their success against the efforts of both the Spanish and the French. With the combined opposition, however, they have been less successful. But neithe country is desirous of continuing the struggle is an adjustment can be made. They have continued it as a matter of duty although the loss of lives and the large expense have been the cause of much opposition.

By the refusal of Abd-le-Krim to accept one of the requirements under the proffered terms of peace, although approving most of them, his reasoning is a bit hard to understand barring the fact that one objection is as good as another if there is the desire to refrain from peace on proffered terms.

The French and Spanish, under united forces, are probably nearer to a victory than they have ever been before, but the attitude of the Riffian leader indicates that he is not alarmed by it and is willing to take his chances.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Why not try making every day mothers' day?

The nice spring days create a longing for the long vacation.

From the numerous drops the French franc has had it ought to be rather badly dented.

These are the days when you no sooner feel certain of a color than it is replaced by something else.

The new traffic signal is furnishing a lot of entertainment and a variety of opinions. What's yours?

The man on the corner says: Putting in next winter's coal supply doesn't seem to make it any warmer.

The outbreak in Nicaragua is quite in keeping with what was predicted when the American marines were withdrawn.

The place where the auto makes the slowest speed is said to be in the courts. It is one of those baffling phenomena.

The mishaps to the Wilkins polar expedition are such, even before a start is made, as to warrant calling off the attempt.

WOMEN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Oat flour can be used with white flour for yeast bread.

The tops of young beets make very palatable greens.

Potatoes or dressed cucumbers are best to serve with fish.

If an ink spot has not dried it can be removed with water.

If you eat an extra potato you can save a slice of bread.

Allow five hours for cooking cornmeal in a fireless cooker.

The glass of pictures and mirrors may be well cleansed with dry whiting and woolen cloth.

To have your baked apples really delicious they should be baked in a hot oven and frequently basted with the syrup.

After drying salt for the table let it get quite cold before putting it into the salt cellars. If put in hot it will harden into lumps.

If you find raisins fall to the bottom of a cake you should try putting them in boiling water for a few minutes, then flouring them before putting into cake.

To thoroughly clean saucepans after cooking oatmeal, fill them with boiling water, empty and then fill with cold water and the oatmeal will almost fall away from the sides.

To remove black wagon or machine grease and tar apply ordinary cooking lard to the stain. Rub it in well, and after a short time wash with soap and moderately hot water.

Stair pads cannot always be afforded. When economy is necessary lay several thicknesses of newspaper evenly over the edge of the steps to spread the tread.

Are you bothered by having the tips of shoe laces come off? The next time this happens twist the ends of the lace and dip them into a bottle of glue. When dry they will be as good as new.

When cake has been stowed away in the larder for some time and becomes dry and hard, try the following plan: Soak it for a minute in cold milk and reheat it in a rather cool oven. It will taste almost like new again. Stale bread may be treated the same way.

UTILIZING DOUBLE BOILER

By using both parts of your double boiler while cooking a cereal you can save fuel. For instance, while cooking your dinner put beets in the lower part and oatmeal in the upper, thus cooking both with but one light.

THE OLD PATCH BAG

If a large safety-pin is attached to the top of the patch bag or box and a small sample of each piece of material contained therein is pinned on it, it will save many searches and disturbances among the patches.

FURTHER USE

In these days of slips it is wise to look over the shabby dress carefully before giving it away. Many times it can be changed into a slip and all worn places discarded.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

If plain milk is not attractive with the youngsters, try adding a little sugar and vanilla or fruit or chocolate syrup to change its flavor.

Powder puffs should be washed in warm, soapy water and rinsed in fresh water that is still a little soapy. The soapy rinse preserves the fluff.

Infant's feeding bottles should be placed daily in a saucepan of cold water, and allowed to remain on the stove until the water has boiled two or three minutes. By attention to this simple direction many baby ailments may be avoided.

If the nails have been discolored by housework they may be wiped with a mixture of equal parts of rose water and peroxide on a piece of cotton. Next with pure soap and water. Rinse well and dry before beginning to trim the nails.

If you are annoyed at night by the ticking of a watch, silence it by placing over it an inverted glass tumbler. This is particularly good in the case of an invalid, for the time can be seen clearly through the glass, but the little annoying sound is eliminated.

THE OVER-ANXIOUS MOTHER

For the mother who is extremely nervous about the danger of her children's clothes catching on fire, it is well to know that by soaking for five minutes in a solution of a pound of ammonia phosphate to a gallon of cold water the clothes may be made fireproof until washed or dreaneched with rain.

THE HOME FIRE DRILL

Children of the home should be taught plain facts concerning fire dangers. Impress upon them the folly of running about if their clothing is on fire. Teach them that it is better to smother the flames with a rug or quilt rather than fan the flames and spread them all over the body.

KEEP THEM SORTED

How much time and trouble we would have if we kept our good stockings in one drawer. Then when we are in that inevitable hurry to get dressed we can find a good pair of stockings without opening all the others first.

TIGHTER WINDOWS

When windows rattle and prove annoying, screw a small hook to the bottom of the window and a small screweye to the window sash, having them far enough apart to make it a pretty tight fit. It will lock the window tightly and help to keep out the cold air.

MELTED CHOCOLATE

Grating chocolate is a lengthy process and somewhat of a nuisance. Put the desired amount in a small saucepan and set it on top of the tea-kettle until melted. One cupful of grated unsweetened chocolate is the equivalent of two marked squares.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Tub silks are destined for a marked vogue this summer and among the prettiest designs are those plaided in pastel shades.

The dolman strikes an entirely new note in present day fashions, and it looks as though it will have a very definite bearing upon the fall mode.

Square, round and oval pillows, covered with checked linen in smart color combinations, are ideal for the summer cottage.

Large squares of dotted net in pastel colors bordered with double hems of matching chiffon are in keeping with the vogue of shawls.

A sleeveless jacket or sweater of some sort is now considered an integral part of the tennis outfit and harmonizes with or matches the dress. —Dry Goods Economist.

There is every indication that taffeta will be continued through the summer season, not in its entirety as it is used for spring costumes, but as foundation for plain and printed chiffons.

The very small person of three years wears a coat of black satin over a peasant frock of light colored crepe de chine and completes the costume with a beret or poke bonnet also of black satin.

The newest hats from Paris show a tendency to do away with the brim entirely and focus all the attention on the crown, which is folded and draped and in some cases form a wide halo about the face.

Flowered net is one of the lovely new materials being shown. The net is of rather heavy mesh with a dainty design printed in it. It is being especially used in nurseries over satin or sateen for the cradle, cushions and curtains.

A summer season without prints would hardly seem a summer season at all. They are beginning to appear in goodly number at the present time, and while printed flat crepes are frequently seen, the printed chiffons and georgettes, which are so often posed over perky taffeta, look somewhat newer.

KEEPS FIGURE SLENDER

Since fashion began a distribe against the diaphragm the makers of wrap-around corselets have been busy. With the lighter figure these are sufficient to repress the diaphragm bulge and flatten the back. For the heavier figures an under corset is provided with a cross section rather stiffly steeled and with wide sections of rubber. This is attached to the outer corset.

JAPANESE GAUZE

Japanese moncha gauze will make very lovely window curtains, draperies, and lamp shades, for it is soft and fluffy. It comes in pretty figured designs, such as chrysanthemums, cherry blossoms, etc., and in colors like gold, tan, ecru, mulberry, Copenhagen blue, reseda green as well as white.

BUYING HINT

You can make a number of very decorative handkerchiefs from a half yard of crepe de chine. Have it bicoted in even squares and cut them yourself. The cost will be but a fraction of what would be at a shop.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES

In allowing for shrinking in material which is to be washed it is well to remember that the coarser the material the greater will be the shrinkage.

Keep the uneven strips of linen left when you hem your new tablecloth. Threads drawn from these are the best possible for darning the cloth later.

Paper clips are very useful in sewing. Use them in basting seams and turning hems; they will not fall out as readily as pins.—The Designer.

When embroidering small initials in the corner of handkerchiefs, it is rather difficult to do it nicely. Before stamping the material starch it very stiff and press it into shape. The letters can then be embroidered perfectly because the material can not stretch.

You frequently come across patterns of crochet and embroidery illustrated in newspapers and periodicals which you wish to copy, but which you can not on account of the small size. You will find that by using a reading or magnifying glass you can readily copy the stitches.

MENDING LACE

Small breaks in lace can be very perfectly mended with a little care and patience. Place a tiny knot at the end of your thread and draw the thread through the place where the lace is broken, joining the broken thread to the lace proper. Then draw a succession of loop knots over the floating thread very tightly close to the base.

Now follow with the new thread the course that the old thread had taken and do the same with the other loose end, knotting it securely close to the body lace. Cut away the loose ends and the break is no longer perceptible.

AN EVEN EDGE

When putting a crocheted edge on a scarf, pull a thread through the linen about a quarter of an inch from the edge of your material. Use this line when inserting your needle and it will not only be easier to work but your work will be absolutely even.

SAVE SIRUPS LEFT FROM PICKLED FRUIT

Save the liquid left in a jar of pickled peaches or pears and you will have a delicious flavoring for roasts. If you will pour a cup of this liquid together with a scant cup of water over a beef roast, and baste it during the process of cooking, it will have an unusual flavor that will be enjoyed. Baked ham is especially appetizing cooked in pickled peach liquid. One tablespoon of this liquid from pickled peaches added to a stiff mayonnaise will delight your guests and set them wondering what new comidment you have discovered.—The Delineator.

FOR GOOD RESULTS

Furniture will never polish successfully unless first wiped over with a cloth wrung out of warm water. Then rub polish on with a damp cloth, followed by rubbing briskly with a soft dry cloth, preferably cheesecloth. Soiled wood will never take a clear polish.

CONCERNING WOMEN

The municipal council of Madrid, Spain, has three women members.

From Small Beginnings

John Wallace Crawford, the Runaway, The Poet-Scout

When you do a good deed you never know how far its effect will reach. The one you help may seem insignificant, but may grow into a person of consequence like the poor old people in the children's stories, who used to change into wonder-working fairies. A nurse in a Philadelphia hospital wished very much to help one of the wounded soldiers who had come under her care, a boy about 16, John Crawford, a humorous, bright-eyed Irish boy. "I'd like to learn how to read and write," he said, "me father an' mither were too busy stayin' alive to teach me." So the nurse taught the boy, who answered her with many a joke, and by the time he was able to leave the hospital he had begun the journey to a place in literature. That wounded Irish boy, born in Ireland, "on the auld sod," ignorant and untaught, grew into John Wallace Crawford, the "Poet-Scout," a man whose fame is like that of Buffalo Bill in one respect, and like that of Robert Burns or Robert Service in another—for he was a fighter of Indians and a poet of the humble life that he saw around him.

Although "Jack" Crawford was only a boy in the time of the Civil War he could not stay home when there was fighting to be done. He packed up a few poor treasures and enlisted, against the will of his father, actually running away from home "to get into the fight." When he had regained strength after a severe wound he went out again, like a good Irishman, "looking for another fight." At that time the miners and cowboys were coming into conflict with the Indians, and men of daring were needed to act as scouts in campaigns in the wilds of the west. "Jack" Crawford became a typical scout, picturesque in appearance, with beautiful flowing hair and handsome face, and full to the brim of courage. But now he knew how to read and write. His Celtic spirit saw the poetry in the rough life about him and he wrote songs and stories of the west, and slowly built up fame. When there came a lull in the Indian wars he tried his hand at ranch life and in mining, roughing it in the crudest sections of the west. Later still, he was among the adventurers who went over the White pass and down the Yukon into the Klondike seeking gold. "Captain Jack Crawford" saw to it that his poems were published and sold, and he soon found himself hailed as an original figure. He was called to the lecture platform and received with much applause. The nurse who taught him to read and write had changed an ignorant but patriotic

For next Sunday, which will be celebrated as Girls' Sunday, the girls and women of the Central church have challenged the boys and men to an attendance contest. BUNGALOW AT MOHEGAN IS TOTAL LOSS BY FIRE; WITHOUT INSURANCE

Between 5 and 6 o'clock Sunday morning a frame bungalow at Mohegan, on the Norwich-New London turnpike, was totally destroyed by fire of which the cause was unknown. The building was owned by Vincenzo Matassa and the loss was estimated at $3,000. There was no insurance.

Matassa, who lives in the lower tenement of an adjoining house, was notified of the fire in the bungalow by the family in the upper tenement. He jumped out of bed and rushed out half-clad, reaching the bungalow just as there was an explosion, according to the report, and the house seemed to collapse as it burst into flames. Nothing could be done to save the place.

The bungalow was occupied by a man named Grant, who runs the steam shovel on the road building work that is in progress nearby. It was reported that no one was around the place at the time of the fire.

Calls For Brush Fire

The Norwich fire department was called out twice over the week end by bell alarms, both calls being for brush fires. Saturday night at 8:47 o'clock boys pulled in box 163, Boswell avenue near Russell road, for a brush fire in the rear of St. Joseph's cemetery. The fire had been burning since about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, starting in Taftville and working its way within the city limits. During the greater part of the afternoon the Taftville fire department had been fighting the flames.

Sunday at 6:20 o'clock a ten year old boy pulled in the same box and the firemen on arriving at the box found that it had been pulled for another brush fire but as the fire was [illegible] the city limits the apparatus returned to the fire stations.

Saturday afternoon at 4:10 o'clock the department went out on a telephone call for a fire on Falls avenue. Rubbish burning on the dump had set fire to a pile of lumber stored in that vicinity and owned by the Connecticut Engineering and Construction company.

At 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon the fire department responded to a telephone call for the brush fire in the rear of St. Joseph's cemetery and which the Taftville fire department had been fighting throughout the afternoon.

BOZRAHVILLE COUNCIL OBSERVED MOTHERS' DAY

The Bozrahville council of Jewish Women fittingly observed Mothers' day Sunday afternoon at Palmers hall, Fitchville, with a program of vocal, piano and violin selections, which was successfully carried out with the aid of the children of the town with a good sized audience to take part in the exercises of the day. The decorations consisted of an American flag and many beautiful flowers Japanese lanterns being used in decorating the hall. Pretty May baskets made by the children filled with goodies added a very beautiful effect.

Mrs. Nathan Gilman, chairman of all arrangements, in her opening remarks after greeting and extending a most cordial welcome to the members and guests spoke briefly and said that the second Sunday in May was dedicated to our mothers and as we pause to pay our respect it is well also to sum up the part our mothers played since the beginning of time and today and note that along with the march of progress loom high the noble deeds of mothers. The Bible and history is rich with charming and beautiful characters, so that we may justly pride ourselves, for truly did they leave us a sacred heritage, ours to cherish and preserve. And as we have assembled here today to give expression to our love and reverence for our mothers, we are indeed honoring ourselves by the noble example we are setting our children. In our endeavors to pay a fitting tribute to our mothers we are at the same time bringing out the most inspiring sentiments which are manyfold and worthy in the objects they serve. For observance of Mothers' day is really another way to give expression to the fifth commandment, Thou shalt honor thy mother as thy father. Such an influence is a beautiful reflection upon ourselves and is creating that very spirit, that very sense of honor, of reverence, of respect and righteousness, which qualities go to the making of worthy man and women. And after all what is the fondest hope of every mother's heart? What is the goal of her life's work? Is it not that her children may grow up worthy men and women? That this influence is far reaching and uplifting morally and spiritually is quite evident. The children's part in this program in the making of these pretty May baskets, the flowers, the presentation of gifts to their mothers are all expression of inward sincerity of appreciation. So in promoting and exerting such influences on our children today we are building the characters of the citizens of tomorrow.

Among those who took part in the program were Mrs. Alexander Manes, who rendered very beautifully two vocal solos, accompanied by George Guile, who gave two violin solos.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was Mrs. Nathan Gilman, chairman, Miss Gussie Pearson, Mrs. C. Fishbone, Mrs. Esther Schatz, Miss Ida Laskowitz.

INJURIES ARE FATAL TO TAFTVILLE BOY

Fatally injured when he was struck by an automobile on the lower end of Norwich avenue, Taftville, Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock, Roger Scott, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Scott of Norwich avenue, died Saturday night about 7 o'clock at the W. W. Backus hospital. The boy was playing on the sidewalk when the Taftville fire apparatus came along the street on the way to a brush fire near the city line.

The child ran from the sidewalk into the street to watch the fire apparatus and was hit by a machine driven by Henry Filligar of Occum who was following the apparatus. He was thrown to the ground and knocked unconscious. Filligar pulled his car sharpy off to the left but could not avoid hitting the child.

The gift of the Connecticut branch of the Association of University Women was announced of $25 worth of books in the fields of political science and international relations, and a prize of $25 to be awarded for excellence in courses of education.

The board also took action looking to the reclaiming for sale of certain lands suitable for residential purposes for faculty and others related to the college, which is bounded by Deshon, Nameaugh and Oneco avenues. It is hoped that in this section a very desirable faculty residential section may be developed.

The tentative budget for the year 1926-1927, contemplating the expenditure of $387,000 was adopted by the board, the budget making provision for all the normal activities of the college.

MAY CHANGE TIMING ON TRAFFIC REGULATOR

To adapt the automatic traffic regulator better to the local situation at the corner of Main, Broadway and Shetucket streets, the suggestion has been made that the timing of this signal could be changed so as to make the period for the red and green lights showing 20 seconds instead of 30 or 40 seconds. This would tend to decrease the accumulation of long lines of automobiles in the streets, which has been the most pronounced source of criticism of the operation of the automatic regulator.

The device will be kept in operation at the corner for 60 days without expense to the city in order to give it a complete test. For the further guidance of automobile drivers and pedestrians, lines are to be drawn in the street this week. The price for the device is $600 installed.

SUIT OVER BUILDING HOUSE ON WEST SIDE

In the common pleas court here Saturday Judge C. B. Waller reserved decision after hearing trial of the suit of Boleslaw Zawadzki of this city against Abraham Shulman, Jennie and Benjamin Shulman, all of Ledyard. Zawadzki claims $1,500 for breach of contract, while on a counter claim and set-off, the defendants sue Zawadzki for $2,003 damages.

Attorney John H. Barnes was counsel for the plaintiff while Attorneys Lee Roy Robbins and Charles L. Stewart represented the defendants.

According to the plaintiff's complaint it is alleged that on October 9, 1924, the plaintiff and the defendants entered into a written contract whereby the plaintiff Zawadzki was to do certain work and labor in constructing and erecting a house for the defendants on the West Side, Norwich. The plaintiff claims that he performed said work and furnished materials, at a cost to him of about $950.

The defendants (Shulmans) in their counter claim for $2,000 claim that the house was constructed by the plaintiff, Zawadzki, in so unworkmanlike, unskilful and negligent manner that it does not fit the underpinning, the foundation is out of line and not plumb, the clapboards are split, the bed mould is not fastened, the rear gable and the columns on the front porch are not plumb, the shingles are improperly laid out and the roof leaks, the back stairway and the front doors are unlike plans and not according to the contract, the bath rooms are small, and the hall in the second story is narrower than called for by the plans, four closets and a back porch called for by the plans and contracts are omitted, all this causing damage and loss in value to the house amounting to $1,200.

BROOKLYN IS PROVING TO BE MYSTERY TEAM

NEW YORK, May 9—(AP)—A month of major league baseball finds Washington and Philadelphia in the American league and Brooklyn, Chicago and Cincinnati in the national setting a severe pace. Only one defeat was suffered by each of these teams during the week or play which ended Saturday.

Brooklyn has the mystery club. This team gathered by Manager Preisdent Wilbert Robinson for the 1926 race was described by the pre-campaign forecasters as a "collection of has-beens," but superb pitching by Jess Petty, Jess Barnes and Burleigh Grimes has carried the combination along in the older circuit cadership. The Brooklyn club's hitting has been good but its present standing can be attributed to the boxmanship.

Outstanding among the occurrences of the week was the failure of the two New York teams. The Yankees, after gaining a long lead, went into a slump and captured only one of their six starts, that against Detroit in an 11-inning battle on Thursday. The Giants managed to win two of their five contests but failed dismally before the Chicago Cubs in the first meeting of east and west.

Washington has shown the greatest hitting power of any lineup during the past seven days with 55 safeties, three of which were home runs. Next in line came the Chicago Cubs with 76 hits and the Athletics, Indians and Cincinnati Reds were close behind.

Cincinnati, a team supposed to have great pitching strength as its only asset in its efforts to gain another pennant, displayed remarkable defensive ability, making no misplays during the week. Chicago's Cubs were the next best in this department with three errors and the Giants were third.

Several good pitching performances were put into the seven days, but for the first time this year it appeared that the batters had the edge. High score games were numerous.

C. A. C. ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION TO ELECT OFFICERS TODAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, May 9—Nominations for officers of the Athletic association and Student organization at Connecticut Agricultural college have been announced, and elections will be held May 10.

William K. Schofield '27, of Waterbury, star athlete in major sports at Connecticut Aggie, and captain-elect of the 1927 basketball team, is the only nominee for the presidency of the Athletic association. Unless there are other nominations, which seem unlikely at this time, Schofield's election will be a unanimous choice.

Nominees for the vice presidency are Arthur V. Williams of Danielson and Harold F. Watson, 28, of Hartford. Williams is one of the few athletes in the history of the college who is proficient in four sports, the Danielson boy taking part in football, baseball, basketball and track. Watson made a letter in basketball and is at present a member of the baseball squad.

Andrew Sayers '29, of Hartford is the only nominee for secretary of the athletic association.

Nominees for president of the student organization, three in number, are Arthur Lorentzen '27, of Naugatuck; Randolph W. Whaples '27, of Newington; and John L. Braitwaiser '27, of Westport.

Nathaniel L. Holstein '27, of Hartford, is unopposed for the position of first vice-president, and Francis A. Ryan '28, of Revere, Mass., is the only nominee for the second vice-presidency.

Nominees for secretary of the student organization are Ralph Peck 29, of Cheshire, and Philip Armington of Danielson.

AGGIES PLAY TRINITY AND R. I. STATE THIS WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Conn., May 9—Two contests appear on the slate of the Connecticut Aggie ball team for this week the first coming Wednesday with Rhode Island at Kingston, R. I., and the second on Saturday with Trinity at Trinity, the Hartford team having previously lost 10-2 in a game that went only five and a half innings because of rain.

Coach Dole will start Makofski on the mound against Rhode Island, which is easily the stronger of the two nines to be met. Eddy will probably draw the pitching assignment in the Trinity game, though there is a possibility that Dole will use Makofski in both contests. No changes are contemplated by Dole in his lineup for these games.

Connecticut will also enter men in the eastern intercollegiate track meet at Worcester next Saturday though Coach Daly has not as yet announced his selections. Because of a lack of many consistent performers on this year's track squad, it is expected that Daly will enter only a few men at Worcester.

Freshman teams will also be active this week, the baseball nine meeting Pomfret Prep at Pomfret Wednesday and the track team entering Dean Academy in a dual meet at Franklin, Mass., on Thursday.

Riverview took a one-sided slugging game from the R. G. Miller Dairymen of Hartford Saturday afternoon 18 to 6 at the State hospital diamond. The Dairymen did not look so good against the pitching of Tony West and although Lefty Buckland pitched good ball his teammates were having a field day in an error contest the combined efforts of the Dairymen netting seven bad errors.

Mondi Normandin had a real field day at bat getting four hits out of five trips to the plate, two of his hits being triples, another a double and the fourth a single. Normandin also played a brilliant fielding game starting two double plays and handling 6 chances with but one error. Harry Mills also hit well getting three singles in five times at bat.

The Riverview team took an early lead and held it until the finish. West

The game was a disappointment to the fans as the R. G. Miller team came here with the reputation of being a real ball club but the exhibition they put up was far from good. Riverview has a hard hitting team that will go far this season. The score:

MYER'S BRILLIANT FIELDING SAVES GAME FOR SENATORS

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—A brilliant stop and throw to first by Myer, utility short stop, with the winning runs on base in the ninth inning, enabled Washington to beat Chicago today, 6 to 5. The game was a duel between Ferguson and Lyons but the Senators sent Marberry to the relief of Ferguson in the ninth when he weakened.

COBB LEADS TIGERS TO VICTORY OVER YANKEES

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—Smashing out four hits, including two home runs, Ty Cobb led the Tigers to victory today over the Yankees in a seesaw slugfest before a crowd of 55,000, the largest of the season. The defeat sent the Yankees to second place with the Senators moving to the front.

Cobb had a perfect day at bat, drawing a pass in a fifth time at the plate. His homers brought his season's total to four and his life-time total to 12. Score:

AMERICAN AMATEUR BOXERS IN BEST OF CONDITION

BUENOS AIRES, May 9.—(AP)—American boxers who will meet a South American team in the second Pan-American amateur boxing championships next Wednesday have ended week of intensive training in excellent condition. Both Captain Mabbutt, manager of the team, and Trainer Lacy expressed satisfaction with the training workouts.

All the South Americans are within striking distance of the official weights which will be registered at noon Wednesday for the four days fighting that night. Captain Mabbutt said today that the spirit of the team was good and everybody was confident.

Present indications are that the New Englanders, Francis Collins and Jack McCarron, will go into the tournament as featherweight and lightweight, respectively. McCarron, who has fought as a featherweight, has gained so appreciably of late that he is almost certain to be chosen to meet Gerzon of Argentina, the South American lightweight representative.

Boxers who fight Wednesday will have only light workouts Monday and Tuesday, while other members of the team will have a different course of training to keep them in condition until Saturday. The food of the fighters during the last few days will be cooked by American cooks in order to avoid any chance of last minute physical upsets.

The South American team, consisting of five Argentines, two Uruguayans and one Chilean, has been training in a suburb of Buenos Aires.

All tickets for the opening night of the tournament have been sold.

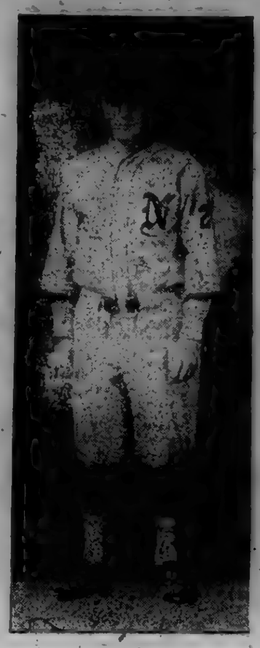
ACADEMY WINS NINTH STRAIGHT VICTORY BEATING TORRINGTON HIGH

The old adage "the bigger they are the harder they fall" must have a grain of truth in it if the Torrington baseball team is any criterion. Torrington high came to Norwich Saturday afternoon with a team of huskies but went back to their homes with the small end of an 11 to 3 score which was administered by Lloyd Jarvis and his Academy teammates. Never in recent years has a high school appeared on the local diamond with a team composed of such big boys as represented Torrington on Saturday. Every player on the Torrington club tipped the scales at better than 165 pounds and there were no shorties on the squad: In practice this club looked like a minor league team but in the game they became as grammar school kids before the brilliant pitching of Jarvis.

Jarvis pitched a pretty game from the start to finish and was invincible in the pinches and with men on bases. Although allowing eight hits he kept them well scattered, Torrington being only able to punch them in the seventh inning He fanned 10 men and allowed but one base on balls.

Mace Goldblatt, Jarvis' battery mate, who is steadily improving as the season wears on, led the batting attack getting three singles for two runs. Greene also hit well getting a pair of two-baggers which netted but one run. The Academy had men on base in every inning except the seventh. Torrington used two pitchers in the game, neither proving very effective as ten men were passed and two were hit. Blandino started the game but in the first inning passed three men but he lasted through the fourth inning before he was yanked in favor of Kahn.



LLOYD JARVIS

The latter was little better than his predecessor and the Academy scored six runs off his delivery. Neither pitcher was given the best of support, errors coming at critical times. Torrington on the whole played ragged baseball for a team with a reputation of having lost but two games during the season.

Szeszkowski, Torrington's giant catcher and star athlete of the school, was the only one of the visitors to show much ability. The big boy was a menace at all times and his home run in the second inning was one of the longest hits ever seen on the Academy diamond. He also secured a single in the ninth inning. Benvenuti also hit well for the visiting getting a single and a triple. His triple looked like a homer but fast fielding by Sadinsky kept the runner at third.

Benvenunti was the first man to face Jarvis in the first inning and he dragged a hit down the third base line and then stole second but was forced to die there as Jarvis fanned two and the third flied out to Sadinsky.

The Academy opened their inning by scoring two runs without the aid of a hit. Blandino passed Cimikoski. Sadinsky followed with a smash that no one on the Torrington team seemed able to surround although several made the attempt, and Hymie circled the bases. It was not a home run nor yet was it even a hit but it sure was a run. Hymie hit to the shortstop who let the ball bound through his legs, Hymie going to first. The centerfielder came tearing in to intercept the ball but the elusive pill evaded his hands and bounced through his legs and went merrily on its way toward the fence. Hymie went to second and seeing the ball bounding lightly along unmolested dug for third. Meantime the left fielder had joined in the chase of the ball and was successful in running it down. Seeing Hymie racing for third the left fielder with a mighty heave in the general direction of the bag chucked the ball clean over the baseman's head and into the crowd and Hymie kept going till the plate was crossed.

The antics of his fielders must have proved unnerving to Blandino for he passed Jarvis and Tombari who were advanced when Burke sacrificed. Jarvis was caught at the plate when Torrington hit to the third baseman. Goldblatt was an easy infield out.

Szeszkowski was the first man to face Jarvis in the second inning and he waited till he found a ball to his liking and promptly banged it over Sadinsky's head in left for a home run. Jarvis then proceeded to fan the next three men.

Johnny Greene doubled in his initial appearance at the plate and scored when Blandino threw wild to catch him at third and Sadinsky's roller. The Academy scored another run in the third inning when Burke singled and scored on the second double by Greene. Another run came in the fourth inning when with one down Jarvis was hit by a pitched ball but was forced at second by Tombari. Burke doubled but Tombari was held at third. Torrington walked filling the bases. Mace Goldblatt singled to center scoring Tombari but Burke was caught at the plate.

This inning saw the last of Blandino and Kahn was sent in to pitch and this auburn haired lad proceeded to fan Greene who was the first to face him in the fifth frame. Brewer was passed to the third time but was forced at the second. Cimikoski was hit and Hymie Sadinsky singled. Cimy was forced at third ending the inning.

The sixth inning was a big stanza for the Academy. Tombari singled immediately and stole second. Burke drew a pass and then Ray Torrington came through with a double to left field scoring Tombari but Burke was held at third. Goldblatt singled scoring Burke. Greene fanned but Brewer singled scoring Torrington. Cimy flied out and Sadinsky fanned.

Torrington scored one in the seventh with Coe down, Halloran walked and went to third on Donahue's single but Donahue was caught at second trying to stretch his hit. Halloran scored when Kelley singled to centerfield. Jarvis fanned Kahn. This ended Torrington's scoring.

In the eighth inning Torrington drew a pass and Goldblatt singled for the third time Green walked and the bases were full. Brewer who was having a perfect day at bat singled for the second time and both Torrington and Goldblatt scored on the hit. Greene was caught at the plate when Cimikoski hit to short. Brewer however went to third and scored on a passed ball. This ended the scoring for the Academy.

Eddie Brewer performed well at bat getting two hits in two times up and on these hits drove in three runs besides scoring once himself. He also walked three times. The score:

MANY TEAMS HANDICAPPED BY INJURIES TO PLAYERS

CHICAGO, May 9—(AP)—Many of the major teams face the fifth week of the 1926 baseball season with valuable players out of the lineup handicapped by injuries.

Two injuries in Saturday's game further increased the total of casualties, Hack Wilson of the Cubs and Roscoe Holm of the Cardinals being the latest additions to the hospital list. Wilson is out for some time with a ligament pulled when he slid to second against the Giants and Holm has injuries of undetermined extent as a result of crashing into a concrete wall in the St. Louis park while chasing a fly.

Tavener, Detroit shortstop, was temporarily out of the Tiger lineup because of an attack of grip.

Bennett of the St. Louis Browns is out for some time with injuries sustained, when he, like Holm, ran into a wall while after a fly ball at Philadelphia, his teammate, Gerber is nursing a split finger.

Jacques Fournier's broken ankle will keep him out of the game for an undetermined time, Gatreau of the Braves being also on the injured list as a result of the players' collision. Wertz, Braves flinger has a crippled pitching hand from an attempt to flag a hot hit.

Kamm and Barrett, White Sox regulars are still suffering from leg injuries and Gray of the Athletics is similarly laid up.

Babe Ruth turned on his ankle on Thursday but was back in the lineup without interruption, hitting home runs both Friday and Saturday.

JEWETT CITY BOY PLAYING GOOD GAME FOR ST. THOMAS

Origene Guillet, a Jewett City lad, is now playing great and sensational ball with the St. Thomas' Seminary baseball team of Hartford. Frenchy has already starred in the three games that his team has engaged in. In the opening game with Springfield Commercial high, the Seminary was trailing by a 4-2 score in the ninth. Two runs were scored by the Hartford team which tied the score. Then with the winning run on second Guillet sent a screeching single to deep center, scoring his teammate and winning the game.

Last Thursday in the game with Hartford high, their old time rivals, the Seminarians were again losing in the eighth. The score was 3-0. This however, was raised to a 3-1 score by heavy hitting. With two men on the plate, Guillet again strode to the plate and this time reduplicated his hit to center and scored both. The game was finally won by his teammates in the eleventh 4-3. In Hartford's half of the eleventh, Guillet began a double killing that cut off all Hartford's chance of victory.

Origene is pounding the ball at a .381 clip and all his hits have been registered at the right time. He has accepted 15 out of 16 chances in the three games, taking nine chances in the Hartford game.

Casper, another Jewett City lad, is pastiming in right field for the Seminary.

COUTURE PITCHES WARRIORS TO WIN OVER YANTIC A. A.

Couture's pitching, coupled with Marchand's hitting enabled the Warriors to defeat Yantic A. A. at Yantic Sunday by the score of 6-4.

Couture allowed but five scattered hits and struck out 11 men.

Marchand connected for a double and two singles which helped greatly in the scoring.

The Warriors got an early start, getting five hits and five runs in the first two innings.

Yantic scored three runs in the third on errors. From then on it was a pitchers' battle between Couture and Posick with the former having the better of the argument.

Marchand turned his ankle in the fifth and was forced to retire in the eighth.

Posick, for Yantic, pitched a good game but Yantic was unable to solve Couture's benders.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Today

So here hath been dawning
Another blue Day:
Think, wilt thou let it
Slip useless away?

Out of Eternity
This new Day is born:
Into Eternity,
At night, will return.

Behold it aforetime
No eye ever did;
So soon it forever
From all eyes is hid.

Here hath been dawning
Another blue Day:
Think, wilt thou let it
Slip useless away?

—Thomas Carlyle.

To a Robin

You are very gay outside my window
With your happy flood of morning song
Do not think that I am cold and numb
To all your joy. I would respond
If my heart were not across the sea.
O little herald of the morning sun!
You are so self-satisfied and sleek,
So plump and rosy-chested, little bird!
'Tis merriment to see you; but another
Little feathered singer stole my heart.
Could you but hear him once, I know that you
Would pause a moment in your caroling,
And hearken to a master-singer's voice.

O, how I yearn for a song that lifts me up,—
A flaming song! A chariot of song
Such as bore Elijah heavenward!
So did the lark of England, on the wing,
Bring the rising sun into my breast.

You are very gay outside my window,
With your happy flood of morning song,
And still I love to hear you, but I long
For the little singer of my heart.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

As most people are not aware of the fact that the real fruit of any tree is the seed, young folks are not expected to know it. It was not very many years ago that it used to be taught that fruits were specially designed for man, and the imaginative used to tell us that perhaps God's angels painted the flowers and fruits.

In this advanced age of science we know that the fruit is the envelope prepared for the sustenance of the seed and that the peaches, plums, strawberries contain the stimulative food that gives life to the young plants. The wise grower of fruit trees plants the whole fruit, not only the seed. Planting only the seed means that it has to struggle on the lean soil in which it has been placed to grow.

Man, bird and beast have all been profited by fruit just as they have been by the milk of animals which nature intended for the young animals but which man has learned to improve and apply to his own use. There doesn't seem to be anything accidental in nature for everything is wonderfully designed for its own particular purpose and is more perfect and more intricate than the finest machinery and instruments man has ever known.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

My Visit to a Farm

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide Awake circle and wish to win a prize. In it I will tell you about my visit to a farm.

One Sunday I went to visit my brother. He works on a farm. It is a large farm containing 120 acres. I first went to see the livestock. There were seven horses. My brother milked the cows twice a day. Behind the barn were two sheds. In one of them pigs were kept and the other was for the farm machinery.

We next went to the fields where the vegetables were planted. My brother said that they had potatoes, beets, corn and onions but they were not up yet.

He showed me the hot beds too. In them I saw lettuce and radish. My brother said farm life was very pleasant and helpful.

Our School Store

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing you about our school store. Every morning the one that come first to school and asks the teacher to dust the things that are in the store is the store keeper. Someone helps the person to dust the store.

The things that we have in the tore are corn flakes, cream of wheat, all bran, pep, eggs, baking powder, toilet soap, candy, peas, tea, lime, marshmallows, milk, ginger, matches, vanilla, corn, cracker jack, gold dust, mince meat, pop corn, dates, pineapple, cocoa, and carpet tacks.

The things that are in our store are not real. We bring the boxes from home when they are empty.

The children go to the store from first to fourth grades. We have toy money. The store helps us learn to make change, helps us to add and subtract. If we were in a real store we would know how to make change.

A Nest of Robins

Dear Uncle Jed: As spring is here and the birds are building their nests again, it reminds me of something that occurred last summer. One day my sister and I were walking after the plow. We got so hot we sat down by a stonewall to rest; presently we heard a noise. We soon found out that it was a nest of little robins by the wall where we were sitting. We ran after the plow again to see if we could find some worms for the little ones. We soon discovered some and fed the wee ones. They opened their mouths very wide every time we came near and let us feed them. After that we went there every day until they were taught to fly. One day we visited the nest and all the birds had flown away except one who was trying its very best to do so. When it saw us it tried harder then before and before we knew it, it too, had flown away. We love all birds and my brothers have put up many houses for them. We put out grain and suet for them in winter and in spring nail strips of tin around any tree that we find a nest in, so our cats can't climb up and get the little birds.

A Dream

Dear Uncle Jed: My father is beginning to plow. I am very glad. I romp and play with my brother in the field. But just at the time I am having the most fun, my father calls me to bring the seeds. My brother and I scramble across the field to get to the house first. I got there first. I took the seeds and ran back across the field to my father. There were many kinds of seeds; radish seeds, potato seeds, watermelon seeds, squash seeds, tomato seeds and many other kinds. I am going to help my father plant the seeds. But first we must put the fertilizer in the ground to make the seeds grow. We are beginning to put the seeds in. All I can do is to remember the last of my happy dream, because my brother is calling me to get up and go to school. I guess plowing is done now, but I do not live on a farm so we haven't any garden. I wish the dream was true. But now I must go to school so I cannot write any more.

My Favorite Flower

Dear Wide Awakes: The rose is the favorite flower of many persons and also mine. Roses are perhaps the most universally admired of all flowers. I love its beauty and color, so wonderful that poets call her queen of the flowers. The rose blooms in June making that month the most beautiful of months. It grows in quantities in the south and that is one reason why I should like to live there. The few bushes we have in front of our house produce handsome blossoms in varied colors such as, pure white, dark crimson and deep orange, loveliness with profuseness are combined in my rose bushes. All these are a delight to me and it gives a touch of beauty to the property. Whenever people want to repay a favor or kindness the rose is always chosen as a token of gratitude and love. Every day in summer we take a fresh bouquet in the house and it cheers everything in our home. Flowers are everywhere, on the kitchen table and in the parlor. Mamma loves them.

A Trip to the Base

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first story and I am going to tell you about the trip my father and I took to the Submarine Base, Navy Day.

We first visited the torpedo building where they assemble the torpedoes. I had no idea they were so big. From there we went to the machine shop, a very large building, where all manner of repairs are made. Then we went down into the submarine S-12. In the afterpart were the engines. They seemed to be very powerful. Amidship was the mess room. It was small but neat and clean. On the forward part we were shown the control room. In here were numerous dials, wheels and levers with which the boat was controlled. After coming upon deck, it being late, we started for home. My visit filled me with pride for my country, and for the brave men, who risk their lives in such small ships.

Filling the May Basket

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you how to make candy to fill May baskets. There are many ways for making fudge, but here is one that never fails to turn out O. K. 2 cups granulated sugar, 2 cups hot water, 1-2 cup corn syrup, (white or brown); 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup of chopped nuts, 1 egg, white beaten stiff. Boil until brittle against glass, pour hot syrup on egg white and beat until cool; pour in pans. When cold cut in squares or drop from small spoon on wax paper.

I hope the Wide Awakes will try this rule and add it to their cook book. I will close with greetings to the Wide Awakes.

When the Lava Flows

Dear Uncle Jed: We have read in the papers about the eruption of the volcano Mauna Loa in Hawaii. Before civilized people came to Hawaii the natives worshiped Pele the goddess of Mauna Loa. They sacrificed large tributes to her. When they picked the ohela berries they left half of them for Pele so she would not be angry. When the lava overflowed like it has been doing lately they brought costly gifts to Pele. One day a missionary went to Hawaii and went right down to the lake of lava. The people all said she would be killed but if she should return alive they would worship God but if she should die they would worship Pele. She returned but some people still believed in Pele.

Going Camping

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about camping. I like to go camping near a river and orchard. Almost every summer I make a camp in the woods. It is fun to get a pail full of apples and eat them while you are sitting in the camp. I take six stones and make a fire place where I cook the fish. Many times my father comes there with me.

Boy Scouts

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second letter I have sent to the Wide Awake Circle. In it I will tell you about the Boy Scouts.

The organization of Boy Scouts of America was founded so the boys could learn to be good soldiers. The scouts have khaki colored suits, red and yellow neckerchiefs. The Boy Scouts use scout knives and hatchets.

When outdoors in summer scouts sleep in tents. They go swimming, fishing, and hunting.

Many organizations go camping for about two weeks. They drink milk and eat digestible food, good for the stomach. They should not drink much coffee or tea.

The scouts have many games to enjoy themselves with as such Black Bear, Antelope Race, Tag and many other games. A scout never disobeys his scoutmaster, teacher or any older person.

My Cat

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide Awakes. I am going to tell you about my cat. We call him Midnight, because he looks like night. His middle name is Speck of Day, because he has two little white spots. One is under his chin and the other is on his back. We call the one under his chin his neck-tie. My daddy calls him skunk cat, which I do not like.

Sometimes he comes up at our door and mews for us to get up in the morning. His favorite sleeping place is up in the doll's bed.

He gets it all hair and then I have to shake it. I like him very much. I do not want him to get in any cat fights like he did the other night. He got hurt so badly he had to go up and sleep in the doll's bed all the afternoon.

The Airship

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake Circle and hope I will win a prize.

The airship is the most wonderful invention of the century. The first airship was invented about 1885. It was run by steam and was so heavy that it would not fly. The next kind of airship was the glider. This was an improvement over the first. Congress voted $51,000 to help perfect this machine. But many inventors lost their lives in trying to work it. Congress would not appropriate money any more.

Electricity was next tried as power. That was also unsuccessful. Finally a gasoline engine was built to make the machine go. The Wright brothers are famous for their airship.

The Biography of My Dog

Dear Uncle Jed: My dog belongs to the Boston bull family. He is very gentle and intelligent. Prince is his name, and what an intelligent dog he is! Prince is a good watch dog. When some one comes in the house, he is very dangerous. He barks and bites but he is very devoted. One summer day we went to Moosup pond and he came with us. Prince is very fond of children. There was playing on the shore a little girl about three years old. She fell in the water. Prince jumps in after her. When he came out of the water he was dragging her by the dress to the sand bank. The father and mother saw that they liked Prince very much. They wanted to buy him but we would not sell him for we would miss him too much.

The Arrival of Spring

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you and the Wide Awakes about the arrival of Mistress Spring. The birds are coming back from the south and blossoms are springing up. I have seen blue and white violets, coltsfoot, bloodroots, bluets or spring beauties and several other blossoms which show us all that Mistress Spring has come to warm and beautify our great world. I have seen blackbirds, bluebirds, robins, and many others which shows us that Mrs. Cold Winter has vanished quite away. The birds are building nests and laying eggs from which little birds will come.

I throw bread crumbs out for them to eat. I hope no boy or girl will ever kill the dear little birds which keep away the insects which devour our crops. The green grass is springing up, but best of all we love to think that Mr. Cold Winter has gone.

The Game I Like to Play

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake Circle and hope to win a prize. The game I like to play best is Blind Man's Buff. Sometimes when I have a number of friends visit me we play it. The reason I like it is, that so many can play it and all have a good time. It is lots of fun to tease the "blind man" by touching him and then dash away before the blind man can guess who you are. I dislike to be caught because that means I must be the blind man and be teased forever so long.

Feeds the Birds

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second time I am writing to you and I hope all the Wide Awakes will like it. When I get up in the morning, I go outdoors and get some corn, and water. Then I give it to the birds. There are three bird nests by my house. One is under the porch, and the other two are in the corn shed. In the winter I take the nests out of the trees. Then in spring when the birds come back from the south, I put them back in the trees. Then they can have a ready made nest.

Caught a Trout

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about fishing. One morning last spring mamma and I started out to go fishing. We took our rods and we went.

When we got there we started to fish. Then we followed the brook down. We saw trout, suckers and shiners. Mama caught a trout. Then we went home because we were hungry. When we got home we ate dinner.

What I Saw

Dear Uncle Jed: Would you like to know what I saw on my way to school this morning? Hearing a rustle or wings I looked up. There to my amazement was a flock of birds flying in rows. Trained soldiers could have done no better. Once in a while I heard a hoarse unmusical sound coming from the birds. When they alighted I saw that their color seemed to change as the sun shone on different parts of their bodies. I noticed that they had black necks and their heads and throats were bronze. Some of the birds were duller in color. These birds seemed to be about ten and one half inches long. Later I found that they are generally ten to 12 inches long. I also found that the mother and father build cozy little nests of twigs, feathers, and grasses that hold four to six bluish eggs with lines and spots of brown and black on them.

Their food consists of beetles, grubs, mice, crawfish, corn, raw meat, crumbs and weed seeds. They are a great help to the farmer even though they do eat some of his corn.

I wonder how many Wide Awakes can tell what they are?

The Camel

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide Awake Circle. I am going to tell you about the camel. The camel is chiefly found in tropical countries, particularly in Africa and Arabia. People could not cross the vast deserts without the aid of the camel.

He is a patient, gentle, intelligent beast and is an ugly looking animal. It is covered with long coarse hair. The camel's head is small and flat, its eyes are mild and gentle, fitted with long eye lashes which protect them from the suns rays and it can close his nostrils at will. His legs are long and thin, his feet wide and do not sink into the sand. He can smell water a great distance and drinks a great deal when he can get it. He kneels to be loaded and often goes a whole day with his heavy loads.

The camel is the most useful animal in the country in which he is found. He is often called the "ship of the desert."

Camel's milk is a favorite drink. Its flesh is used for food. The fat is melted and used as butter. The hair is made into clothing and fine brushes for painters.

Going Fishing

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about the fun we had on one of our camping trips. I was sitting on the porch. I saw a friend of mine coming down the road. I said, "Hello!" Then he said, "How about going camping?" That's just what I was thinking.

Then he said, "Get ready." I packed up my rod, and reel, worms, and books and lunch and soon we were off. We found a good place and set up camp. Soon we were down the brook trying our luck. The birds sang and we fished. Who would be first to get a bite was the question. All at once my line started going up stream. I gave a jerk and pulled it in. I had caught a ten inch trout.

It weighed half a pound. Soon I heard my friend cry out, "I got one." We had a successful day. Our catch amounted to 16 trout and all of them were over six inches. We went to camp and cooked our Campbell soup. While it was cooking we had our pictures taken. Then we went and cut some pine branches to make our bed. We ate and went to sleep. The next morning we took our tent and went home, each promising that — would have another trip like that one before long.

About Coral

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first letter I have written to the Wide Awake Circle. I am going to tell you about the coral animal.

Coral is found in the southern seas. It is a horny or stony substance formed by little sea insects on rocks and shoals. It has many stems and branches and looks like groups of bare trees. A coral reef is a mass of coral, extending sometimes for hundreds of miles. The coral is obtained in two ways, one is by diving. The diver, standing upon some weight which enables him the more swiftly to sink, and holding one end of a rope, into the sea. Here he is left for two minutes. Quickly he snaps the coral branches from the sides of the rocks and is then hauled up again. The other mode of coral fishing is by sinking nets to the coral beds and then dragging them along their surface. The coral thus becomes entangled in the meshes of the net, and by a sudden jerk is broken from its place.

Yellowstone Park

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake Circle. I am going to tell you about the Yellowstone park.

Yellowstone park, chiefly in the northwestern part of Wyoming, occupies about 3,500 square miles. It is an national park under the national government. It contains many curiosities. There are nearly 4,000 hot springs and probably 100 geysers in Yellowstone park. "Old Faithful" one of the geysers sends up a column of hot water 125 feet high every hour. Another wonder is Yellowstone river. This river is a tributary of the Missouri river. It flows through the Grand canyon of the Yellowstone whose steep walls are of bright red, green and gray rock cut into odd shapes. This Grand canyon is about 25 miles long and from 600 to 1,200 feet deep, the wall being from 1-4 to 3-4 of a mile apart.

Fishing

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about the river in front of our house. In the spring we spear suckers. It is nice to see such big fish swimming around in the water.

It was Thursday night when I was fishing for trout. I was just going away from that place when I saw a sucker.

A little while after my brother came down to see what we were doing. We were watching for suckers swim around in a little place. The sucker swam under some brush and I took a stick. Then I hit him on the back with a two by four. He went flying down the stream. My brother ran and tried to get it. But he could not get it at all.

This morning I went to see if there were some suckers under the bridge. There were a lot of them. We speared one of them.

West Point

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake Circle and I wish to win a prize. I will tell you about West Point.

West Point on the Hudson river is in the eastern part of New York state. The United States military academy is situated there. The building being on a plateau above the Hudson. The grounds are about two hundred acres. Here the cadets are given a military education, free by the United States government, the course taking four years to complete. Most of the West Point professors are United States army officers.

The Pointer Dog

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first letter I have sent to the Wide Awake Circle.

I will tell you about the Pointer dog. This dog belongs to the hound family, that is, the breed of dog which tracks its prey by scent. It is trained to stop, when game is near, and point toward it with the nose. In a general way, the pointer, resembles other members of the hound group of dogs. Its coat is smooth and short, the coloring being generally black or brown and white though some of the best pointers are entirely black.

The pointer's trick of showing the position of game birds is the result of a long course of training. It has a wonderfully keen sense of smell, and can track its prey rapidly and without mistakes.

A Good Complexion

Dear Uncle Jed: Most people want to be pretty. Not many know the secret. If you eat too many sweets and greasy foods you will have a bad complexion. To protect yourself from freckles, pimples, etc., you must eat simple foods, not too sweet or greasy. To keep your face clean is another important duty. Wash your face morning, noon and night, with a good soap. No creams or salves will help a complexion. Well I'll close hoping Uncle Jed and the Wide Awakes are feeling good.

Likes Spring

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to you before but as I did not win I am trying again. The name of my story is Spring. Do you ever stop to think what nature can do? She brings the flowers and the birds. Oh! it is all like a dream to go wandering through the flowers and birds of spring. The robin comes first to awaken all the flowers. He is a very jolly little fellow. Spring is a happy season of the year and everyone loves her. May is a beautiful month.

The Birds

Dear Uncle Jed: I am to tell you about the birds. They are building their nest under our porch. I saw them carry hay from our barn. There are some eggs in the nest now. I throw them crumbs every morning.

They fly to our cherry tree every morning and sing. I am very glad they built their nest there. This summer they will eat all the roseburs.

PLAINFIELD

WOODS FIRE OVER 150 ACRES BLAMED ON CIGARETTE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, May 9—Saturday afternoon fire broke out in the woodland south of the Lathrop farm and burned through from the state highways, where it started, to the Dan Downing farm, an estimated area of 150 acres. The fire raged high and in a westerly wind soon spread beyond control. Fire wardens from Bethel and Lebanon, came to the assistance of the local fire fighters, and at 7 o'clock had apparently extinguished the blazing woodland. At 8 the fire broke out afresh and was again apparently deadened. At 3.30 a. m. Sunday it started blazing again. Mr. Donals, who occupies a house in the vicinity, gave an alarm, which called out the Volunteer Fire company. At 6.00 a. m. the firemen retired, fully satisfied that no further outbreak would occur. The origin of the fire is laid to a cigarette thrown by a passing motorist into some dry leaves and brush on the east side of the highway.

At the Windham county older girls' conference held in the Brooklyn Congregational church Saturday, representatives from the Plainfield organizations who attended were: Mildred Heap, Christian Endeavor society; Ida Butler, Ladies' Aid society; Doris Generous, G. Berjersun was charged with breach of peace, as a result of the serving of attachment papers by Sheriff Tillinghast, the latter claimed the defendant used foul and abusive language to him.

Mrs. Cecil L. Butler, appointed delegate from the Plainfield Women's club at a recent meeting of that body, will attend the annual meeting of the state federation of women's clubs, to be held in Hartford this week. King, and Mrs. Irving Smith. Mrs. Arthur Moffitt and Mrs. Elmer Greene were hostesses. At the next meeting scheduled to be held next week Miss Pilling of Danielson, the county chairman will give an address on her recent trip to Washington.

The work of construction of the new bridge and the elimination of the grade crossing on the state highway known as Bishops crossing is progressing rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Moffitt left Plainfield Saturday, for Providence for a lengthy stay.

A food sale was held by the Parent-teacher association, Saturday, at the Plainfield public market, the proceeds will be used to defray part of the current expenses.

The Lincoln club is to hold its annual ladies' night tonight (Monday) at the community hall in Pachaug. The principal of Norwich Free Academy, Henry A. Tirrell will be the speaker. superintendent of the commission; A. Joseph Williamson, head game warden of the state; Carl M. Sharpe, treasurer of the club; Dr. James B. Hutchins and Irving Paine, directors; J. Fred Ash, newly appointed game warden and Louis A. Ingalls, president of the Danielson Rod and Gun club.

Attorney E. C. Morse, president of the club was toastmaster. The dining room was effectively decorated, the moose and elk heads on the walls which E. C. Rogers brought back from North Canadian forests, being augmented by the mounted fish and birds of Howard D. Reardon, Danielson. Among them was the two pound trout caught this season by Henry Provost of Putnam in Snake Meadow brook, probably the largest trout ever caught in the county.

Mr. Morse called on Chief Game Warden Williamson, who stated that wonderful work is being done in Connecticut making it one of the leading states in the country in game conservation. The progress in this direction has placed greater responsibility on the men whose duty it is to see that the game is played fair. That it was through such clubs as the local club that men who were prone to disregard the laws came to see the error of their ways. He said that arrests have been made recently for spearing bass, catching bass, shooting rabbits and even song birds, fishing without a license, and other violations of the law, and that it would be continued until all "go straight and play on the square." He urged the club members to report any irregularities that come under their observation, and assured them that they would receive attention. There is a chief warden, eight county wardens, and ten deputies, making a force of 28 men to cover the whole state. He asked unanimous cooperation for Mr. Ash, the new county warden in this county.

President Ingalls of the Danielson club, also a member of the Northeastern, spoke next, saying that the relation between the two clubs is most cordial and that is why he belongs to both. Both clubs are interested in the same general location, and both fish and hunt in each others' territory. Both are interested in wild life. He told of the Danielson club's trap shooting grounds and gave a cordial invitation to members of the Northeastern to come down any time and participate in trap shooting. He also said that his club was planning for a field day this summer and invited the members to participate.

Superintendent Titcomb's theme was state leased streams. He said that an increasing number of streams and brooks was being posted. The state has 150 leases of this kind; whether it would work out as successfully as hoped would depend largely upon the sportsmen.

During his talk he said that Windham county has some of the best streams in the state.

Mr. Walcott, the chairman of the state commission, was the last speaker. He said that if the present plans were followed for a few more years Connecticut would be the leading state in the Union in this respect, and to Superintendent Titcomb he gives the greater part of the credit. Connecticut, he said, had allowed her natural resources to deteriorate but when brought to the attention of the general assembly had acted promptly and wisely and succeeding assemblies had kept up the work. In the late Senator Ash of Pomfret we found an interested and sympathetic counsellor, adding that he was glad to know that his son was in charge of the work in this county.

Moving pictures that had been taken showing the scenes of his recent visit to Florida were put on, through the courtesy of Jake Alpert of the S-A Amusement company and helped make the very enjoyable address more interesting and instructive.

The Eastford philosopher, A. M. Bowen, has the following snake story: "John Whitford, the champion violinist around Eastford, started out hunting snakes at the Little Cedar Hole, west of the village, the first warm day of spring. He came upon a big number sunning on the edge and killed 11 one over six feet, and all measuring over 40 feet."

NEW LONDON HEARS COLCHESTER MAN WAS KILLED IN POQUONOC CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, May 9—John Fatt, of Colchester, employed by Thaddeus Raymond, of Groton, was almost instantly killed, late Saturday afternoon at Poquonoc Bridge when struck by a Groton & Stonington Traction company trolley car, the body of Fatt being so terribly mangled that recognition was impossible. So far as could be determined Fatt has relatives, but where they reside is not known. The body was removed to a New London undertaking establishment and on Monday Coroner J. J. Desmond of Norwich will conduct an investigation.

Fatt was assisting in hauling tiles. A truck upon which he was riding and which was in charge of Lawrence Thompson of Center Groton, was operated to a driveway between Bridge and Avery's memorial, for the purpose of turning around. As Thompson operated the car from the driveway and to reach the highway the trolley car, en route from Mystic to New London, in charge of Motorman John F. Montague, 16 Stanners street, this city came round the sharp curve. Thompson remained at his wheel, but Fatt seeing a crash imminent leaped from the truck and landed between the trolley tracks. In another instant the trolley car crashed against the truck, throwing it clear of the rails and Thompson with it. Before Fatt could scramble from between the rails the trolley car struck him and forced his body beneath the wheels. Montague brought the trolley car to a stop, but not before the wheels of the trolley car had repeatedly passed over all parts of the man's body. When the undertaking force arrived it was necessary for them to pick up the body in sections. Groton state police barracks was notified, and Officer Bernard Kenerson was assigned to investigate the crash.

GUEST OF LODGERS PROVES TO BE A THIEF

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, May 9—James Santangelo and Louis Rinaldo, lodgers at the Ideal Roominig house, 48 Bank street, complained to the police this forenoon that they had been robbed and that Jack Smith, an acquaintance was the thief. Santangelo and Rinaldo stated that Saturday night they shared their room with Smith. During the night he made his get-away and took with him a suit of clothes, pair of shoes and a shirt belonging to Santangelo and a gold watch and chain belonging to Rinaldo.

A thief gained entrance to the home of Mrs. Annis Slade, 43 Truman St., Saturday afternoon and stole $24. Mrs. Slade discovered the theft this morning and reported it to the police. Sergeant John Cavanaugh, who investigated the break, reported that the thief had forced a rear window by prying it open and going to one of the sleeping rooms where the money was taken from a bureau.

George W. Sisson, formerly of New London, now residing in Hartford where he is employed in the state treasurer's office, spent the week end with relatives in this city.

Two young men, one of them with a carnival that is exhibiting in Waterford, engaged in combat this afternoon at the union station. Both were arrested by Traffic Officers Frank Linehan and William Corcoran and will be given a hearing Monday.

Edward J. Reed and Albert Neldenberg, fellow, got into a mixup on Main street and that fact got them into the police court Saturday. Reed was strolling with a woman friend, their course leading them to a restaurant on Main street. As they passed along they met Neiderman and he said or did something that did not strike Reed as proper. They had an argument and that led to blows. Neither of the men was damaged but they created a breach of the peace in a public street. Reed was fined $5 and paid. No complaint was made against Neiderman, as he was not regarded as an offender, but an unwilling participant in the disturbance.

Henry Titus, a drunk for fair, was fined and went to jail. He will be obliged to serve out a sentence that was suspended a week ago, to give him a chance to leave the city, which, he represented then, was his desire.

The police court had three boarders to deal with taken from a passenger coach where they were lodging. John Brown, an old man and very garrulous, was fined and went to jail while two companions were released on a suspended judgment. They were Edward Twomey and Edward Callahan. They appeared to be in hard luck and had an excuse that warranted showing them some leniency. Daniel Flannagan, another of the bunch, went to jail. He was under the influence of liquor when taken from a coach where he was making a bed.

Funeral services for John C. Bellas were held Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at his residence, Harrison's Landing, North Waterford. Rev. Horatio J. Chase, pastor of the Montauk avenue Baptist church, officiating. Burial was in Union cemetery, Waterford.

The funeral of Miss Emily L. Douglass was held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Smith Memorial home, the services being conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. Acquaintances acted as bearers. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Amelia A., wife of Ralph R. Williams, of Cottage street, died at Lawrence hospital late Friday. She was of advanced years and had been under treatment at the institution several weeks for fractured leg. Mrs. Williams sustained her injury about two months ago when she fell as she stepped from the curb on Shaw street to cross the street. Mr. Williams has already caused notice to be served on the city that he intends to claim damages, alleging that the injury to his wife was the result of a defective highway. Besides sustaining the broken limb, Mrs. Williams suffered from shock and this hastened her death.

Christine H., 23, wife of Austin Kelly of 141 Park avenue, died Friday night at Lawrence hospital where she had been under treatment but a few days. Besides her husband, Mrs. Kelly is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J Higgins, three brothers, George, David and Stephen Higgins and a sister, Miss Marcella Higgins, all of New London. Mrs. Kelly was married about a year ago.

Paima, 52, wife of Nazzarina Camillucci, died Saturday morning at her residence, 6 Chelsea street. She had been ill a long time. Besides her husband, Mrs. Camillucci is survived by four sons.

The funeral of Virginia, widow of Julius Dates, was held Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, a mass of requiem being sung by Rev. Raymond O'Callahan. Among the mourners were delegations from the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent association and Catholic Women's club. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

William L. Reed, Sr., a former New London contractor, now located at Springfield, Mass., is spending a few days in this city.

John Carr of 321 Colman street and Mrs. Arthur Cabral and infant daughter, 17 Denison avenue, were patients dismissed Saturday at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital.

Mrs. Marian Potter of 42 Jay St., sustained a fractured hip Saturday afternoon when she was knocked down on Green street by an automobile operated by a sailor. The woman was removed to the Lawrence hospital, where she will be under treatment indefinitely.

Two sailors who were much the worse for over indulgence in liquor were taken into custody this morning on State street, by Sergeant John Cavanaugh, Motorcycle Officer George McCaskey and Patrolman Clarence Wells. They will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning.

Oliver Hill of 162 Bank street, who has been arrested many times for intoxication, was drunk again Saturday afternoon on John street where he fell against a window of the store of Isaac Katz, smashing it. Hill was taken into custody by Patrolman Patrick Sheahan and will be presented in the police court Monday morning.

Edward B. Sheldon of 77 Howard street, was arrested Saturday afternoon by Patrolman Michael Dorsey charged with violation of the automobile law. He will be given a hearing Monday morning. Sheldon was operating an automobile, but he had no license.

Noble Sundy, a sailor, attached to the United States coast guard, local section base, No. 4, state pier, was arrested Saturday afternoon by Traffic Officer John Courtney charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $150 for his appearance in the police court Monday morning.

It is stated that there are more garages in New London than there are in any city of its size in the state. This may be imagined when the number of permits to erect garages that are acted upon by the city council every week is considered. No week goes by when there are not six to a dozen applications acted upon at the council meeting. Few of the garages have accommodations for less than two cars and many of them are of larger size. Some astonishing figures are named in connection with the number of automobiles owned in this city. At night there is almost an endless string of the vehicles from Tilley street to a section far up Broad street by way of State street and all the cross streets are equally well lined with cars. The estimated cost of the machines runs into fabulous figures. Prior to the event of the automobile there was not one horse where there are hundreds of autos. There are those who can recall when there were not more than a score of driving horses owned by individuals in the city, where now men and women in the class of toilers are owners of automobiles. Contrasted with the cost of a horse in those times the car is several times as expensive. Mechanics frequently own cars and go to and come from their labors in their machines. At night these same mechanics are making use of their machines for pleasure riding.

The statement is made that the Barnum-Bailey-Ringling circus will not visit Connecticut during the summer, though it was understood a month ago that the company would show here the third week in June. The company left New York on its summer schedule a week ago.

An automobile owned and operated by Carl Larson, 109 Willetts avenue and a machine owned and driven by William Gard, this city, were in collision late this afternoon on the approach to the Thames river highway bridge. Both cars were damaged slightly.

Among about 15 drunks taken in this afternoon is Daniel Frazier, an old-time offender, who has been presented on various charges. Daniel was found on Main street and carrying a cargo that ought to have been in a van. He was charged also with vagrancy by Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman Clarence Wells who made the arrest.

Santo Dolce, 160 Shaw street, was taken into custody this evening by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray and Patrolman Frank Philopena, charged with breach of the peace by his wife. Dolce was not drunk and his wife declared that she had been subject to numerous beatings of late and without cause, but the one she received this evening was so severe that she decided to attempt to put an end to the inhuman treatment. Dolce, who was locked up because he was unable to secure a surety on his bond of $100 will be presented in the police court Monday morning.

Rev. David R. O'Donnell, newly-appointed pastor of St. Michael's church, Hartford, has begun his duties as pastor. He is successor to Rev. John J. Downey who was named pastor of St. Peter's church to succeed the late Rev. Paul F. McAleney. Father O'Donnell, a native of New Haven, goes to St. Michael's parish here after nine years as pastor of St. Michael's church in Waterville. In appreciation of his service there, he has been given a purse of $700 by his former parishioners. The presentation was made by Mayor Francis P Guilfoile of Waterbury. The altar boys of the Waterville church gave Father O'Donnell a gold fountain pen as a farewell gift. Father O'Donnell was educated at St. John's parochial school, New Haven; Hillhouse high school, Yale university and St. John's Seminary, Brighton, Mass. He was ordained December 18, 1896, by Archbishop Williams in Holy Cross Cathedral, Boston. He was temporarily appointed to Sacred Heart church, Waterbury and in 1897 was made assistant pastor of St. Mary's church, New London. In 1910 he became pastor of St. Andrew's church, Colchester. In 1917 he was made pastor of St. Michael's, Waterville.

C. H. Chapin, 11 Colman street, complained to the police late this afternoon that his home had been entered during the absence of himself and family. Motorcycle Officer George McCaskey was assigned to the case and upon visiting the house he found that entrance had been gained by a rear window being forced. So far as Chapin could determine nothing of value had been taken from the house.

There is no change in the situation of the striking carpenters, who have been out of work a week because of the masters refusing to grant them an increase of 15 cents per hour. Because four contractors have contracts to fulfill, which call for the work being completed within a specified time, several of the strikers have been promised permanent work if they will enter the employ of these contractors, who have granted the wage increase. The strikers have decided to enter the employ of these contractors Monday, provided the contractors who are holding out against the increase continue to refuse to grant the demand of the strikers.

New London appears to be harboring a set of crooks, for within the past 48 hours there have been a series of breaks and holdups, theh reaks having the earmarks of having been perpetrated by the same person or persons. Besides the several breaks, Darrill Dorner, United States Coast Guard, local section base, No. 4, reported to the police late Friday night that, while he was walking along the approach to the Central Vermont railroad bridge, near the Hallam street end, he was held up at the point of a revolver and that the money he had on his person, $6, was taken. The police made a search of the vicinity, but no trace of any hold-up man was found.

Guadalupe Acosta, Elko county murderer, sentenced to die in the lethal gas chamber at the state penitentiary at Reno, Nev., the week of May 16 has been found insane and the death decree has been suspended.

POETRY

Holy Communion

And now, O Father, mindful of the love
That bought us once for all on Calvary's tree,
And having with us Him that pleads above,
We here present, we here spread forth
To Thee
That only offering perfect in Thine eyes,
The one true pure immortal sacrifice.

Look, Father, look on His anointed face,
And only look on us as found in Him;
Look not on our misdoing of Thy grace,
Our prayer so mingled and our faith so dim;
For lo! between our sins and their reward,
We set the passion of Thy Son our Lord.

And then for those our dearest and our best,
By this prevailing presence we appeal;
Oh, fold them closer to Thy mercy's breast!
Oh, do Thine utmost for their souls' true weal!
From tainting mischief keep them white and clear,
And crown Thy gifts with strength to persevere.

And so we come; oh, draw us to Thy feet,
Most patient Saviour, who can'st love us still!
And by this food, so vigil and so sweet,
Deliver us from every touch of ill:
In Thine own service make us glad and free,
And grant us never more to part with Thee.

—W. Bright (1872).

Back Home

They are who think that lodestars must be all
Of the first magnitude and general fame,
Or that to be a talisman, a name
Must be of those men publicly extol.

Dazzle may temporarily enthrall,
And works be staged within the parish frame;
Mariners forget the way by which they came
To answer to ambition's siren call.

But man as exile lover seems little Returns
What time his restless feet are led to roam,
And with the strife of emulation past,
Back to the first-loved hearts and scenes he comes—
While ways forsaken for the lights of home,
And London left for Stratford at the last.

—Alice Lawry Gould in The Christian Science Monitor.

A new motor-driven device for the removal of snow from highways has been invented. As the motordriven truck moves forward the heated drum rotates over the snow, melting it rapidly. The truck moves at about three miles an hour.

Uaxactun, earliest of the Maya cities, is soon to reveal its secrets, O. G. Ricketson, Jr., archaeologist of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, as a result of agreement between the Guatemalan government and the institution, is now at Uaxactun preparing for studies and excavations at this ancient ruined city which dates from 68 A. Several years ago the California state division of motor vehicles adopted a policy of refunding motorists excess fees sent in for licenses where such excess amounted to 11 cents or more. Sums under that amount were turned into the road fund. Similarly, if the motorist was short 11 cents or more, the division demanded that he make it up, but if his shortage was less than 11 cents the division made it up without bothering the absent-minded motorist. A check recently made revealed that the "overs" have so far exceeded the "shorts" that the state is more than $800 to the good.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, May 9—(AP)—The British general strike dominated practically all financial and commodity markets this week.

Stock prices drifted lower with tradiar restricted by the uncertainty over the effect of the English labor crisis on American business. Bond prices generally held relatively firm, with easy money rates a sustaining influence, but a reactionary trend naturally developed in some of the foreign government obligations.

Wheat prices broke sharply and then made irregular recovery, with opinion rather general that the exports of foodstuffs would be the first to be hit by the tie-up of transportation in England. The adverse influence of the strike on the cotton market was offset by that of domestic weather reports, the New York market actually closing higher on the week. Sterling exchange, which was within striking distance of gold parity a week ago, lost all the year's gain, demand bills touching a new low at $4.84 3-8. French and Belgian currencies crashed to the lowest prices on record with selling inspired by the belief that plans for the international stabilization of these currencies would be delayed by the British crisis.

Wall street bankers generally showed no uneasiness over the British situation, expressing the opinion that the common sense of the English people would lead to a satisfactory solution of the present trouble. There was a rather general belief that an agreement would be reached sometime next week.

PRIZE WINNERS ANNOUNCED IN HUMANE SOCIETY POSTER CONTEST

According to the report issued by the judges of the humane poster contest recently conducted in the elementary, junior high and parochial schools throughout the state under the auspices of the Connecticut Humane society, about 1,800 children will receive awards. Instead of cash prizes as heretofore this year the awards will be gold, silver and bronze medals showing the seal of the society in the center and a border in enamel with the humane education slogan — kindness, mercy and justice. Mrs. H. Clay Preston of Hartford who is in charge of the educational work of the society announced there were about 4,000 posters entered in the contest and pointed out that the posters this year show vast improvement over any of the previous contests. These annual school competitions have grown to such proportion that the teachers have been asked to select a limited number from each room and that has contributed greatly to the success of these contests. Mrs. Preston also paid compliment to the supervisors of art and drawing teachers for the very original ideas displayed in the drawings and for the higher character of the poster work in general this year. ONE CAR TO EVERY THREE PERSONS SATURATION POINT

The saturation point of motor vehicles in Connecticut, according to calculations based on a statement of Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel of Connecticut in a recent lecture at Johns Hopkins university, will not be dependent upon road space, but upon the outcome of the economic conditions. In brief, when all those persons who are able to buy cars have bought them, that point will be reached. The guess made as to what would be the result is that the point will be reached when there is one car to every three persons.

When considered throughout the United States the average of persons operating cars still varies, but it seems to be a fact that each state in the Union can place its whole population and some of their belongings into its registered cars and move them all at once.

The saturation figure of one car to thee persons is uncommon, four to five persons to a car is fairly common and six persons to a car is the rule.

Taking this statement as a guide, a Connecticut man interested in safety work has attempted to reduce the question to a definite number of years. Last year, 262,564 motor vehicles were registered in Connecticut, as compared with 234,771 the previous year and 189,566 in 1923. At that rate he estimated that 300,000 cars will be registered in this state this year. From that point, his calculation was based on an assumption that the percentage of increase in registration and population in Connecticut will be approximately the same in the next ten years as in the past decade.

Motor vehicle authorities and others are trying to educate the people as a whole to protect themselves in the face of this steady increase of motor vehicles. In his lecture at Johns Hopkins, Commissioner Stoeckel said: "Along with, and caused by, the immense use of the automobile, growing more extensive every hour and day, are the complications and emergencies which the public has had to meet. Each individual, whether a walker, a rider or driver of a horse or bicycle, or the operator of a car, has had a new problem to work out, a new hazard to cope with, in a new environment. This environment, which includes all movement on streets and highways is known as traffic. It is probably only natural and to be expected that, during the time while experience in how to survice is being acquired, there will always be many misunderstandings and slips. The majority of these will cause inconsequental damage but some at least will cause serious and mortal injury.

"The new vehicle which has created the situation and its responsible operator, are in the limelight, and blame will, prima face, attach exclusively to them. The automobile in the fastest and easiest controlled traffic vehicle, so the legal principle of reasonable care is insisted upon to a degree where its operator is, to all intents and purposes, obliged to look out for everyone else. In traffic he has the most dangerous medium so he must assume the greatest responsibility, must exercise commensurate care to emergencies and keep the status safe. In other words, the use of every car is limited by the requirement, both in morals and in law, that such use must be safe."

MOTHERS' DAY ADDRESS WITH Y. M. C. A. PICTURES

The mens lobby at the Y. M. C. A. was the scene of an interesting and impressive service Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The opening exercises included the singing of hymns, reading of scripture and prayer, and solos by Hugh Kinder. The moving picture attraction was the first of a series of four showings on "The Chosen Prince" the great Bible story of David. The pictures yesterday dealt with the early life of the great Bible character amid the quiet pastoral fields of Judea, in preparation for his later remarkable life. The pictures were true to the sacred narrative, and deeply impressed the audience.

Between the reels Secretary Edwin Hill gave a brief talk, at first reminding the audience of Mothers day, and urged all present whether their mothers were living or dead, to be true and noble in life for the sake of mother in line with the title of the pictures, "The Chosen Prince", the speaker asked the question, "What is a princely life?" and in part he answered his own question as follows: There are far too many lives today lived on the lowlands when they should be lived on the highlands. There is the low life, the good life, the better life and the best life, and the latter is the kind of a life for which we all should strive. When it is well known that the low life of sin is always sooner or later a failure, it is surprising how many seem to be living on that plane. The group of men in our county jail where we conducted a meeting this morning was an illustration of what sin does to lives. Then there are so many who are satisfied with that kind of a life that just squeezes into the category of good life; they are not guilty of [illegible] sins, but they are satisfied with the ordinary life. Then there are those who have come up to the life that is better than the good, and there they remain satisfied, with no desire for the best. Jesus said that he came "to give us life, and to give it to us more abundantly," in a word, Jesus wants us to live the abundant life, the best possible life, and that means companionship with him. Why not on this Mothers' day move up into this abundant life and thereby become a real genuine follower of the Christ in life and service?"

MAN'S DEBT TO HIS MOTHER FATHER REILLY'S THEME

Crowding out into the three aisles, as they knelt to await their turn to receive holy communion, following confession on the previous afternoon and evening, men, women and older children of St. Patrick's parish did honor to mothers, living or dead, at the 7.30 mass Sunday morning. The rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May was assisted by Rev. John J. Reilly in administering the eucharist. The edifying sight was duplicated at the mass at 9 when Rev. Myles P. Galvin required the assistance of Father Reilly. At this service Organist Henry J. Lafontaine had arranged for the junior choir a special program of "mother" hymns.

It was the fifth Sunday after Easter, the epistle of every mass being James I, 22-27 and the gospel John XVI 23-30. Rev. Father Reilly preached on the love, tenderness, appreciation and respect men owe their mothers. In this age, which has been painted so black in its proneness to excesses in matters modern, earthy, frivolous, material, it is a sign of reversion to higher ideals when a world pauses to set apart even one day to the reverence of motherhood. While the Roman Catholic church never changes, it is quick to put its stamp of approval upon every worthy modern movement; hence joins in noting universal Mother's day, since it was the church which placed motherhood upon a pedestal and there would keep it. In a godless age which seeks to drag it down to the vulgar level of a racing stable.

The preacher set over against the idea of the so-called self-made man the obligations which every mortal, whatever his success, owes to his mother. A worldly career of prominence is the mere superstructure—mother's sympathy, love, tenderness and gentleness make up the foundation of whatever is great in a man. Lincoln was cited, in his avowal that whatever he might have accomplished was due to his saintly mother. A mother's heart is the world and there the child is king. Mother will acclaim her boy in anything worth while which he may achieve—but it is she who alone will stand by, when misfortune comes to a son and the world is heartless or unheeding. The preacher cited the instance in Scripture where, when the Saviour was acclaimed by the crowd, the voice of a woman was uplifted—doubtless herself a mother—in the words, "Blessed be the womb that bore Thee!" The eloquent sermon ended with the narration of the visit of a pagan to the house of St. John, after the ascension, when the Mother there proved to be Christ's mother, and answered the questionings of the stranger regarding the new teacher who had come to this earth to inculcate hitherto unheard-of doctrines of love.

If every home could be another Nazareth, the Holy Family the type of every household, the preacher pictured what a heaven this earth would become. Every utterance glorified the greatest of all mothers, the ideal held ever before Catholics, the immaculate Mother of the Christ-Child. The peroration was in verse—depicting that school which confers no diplomas or degrees, yet which graduates a man into the great world fortified by the noblest and most uplifting of principles and ideals, the school which begins at the good mother's knee.

WILLIAM COMAN CAUGHT— JUMPED HIS BOND IN 1922

William Coman, 33, formerly residing on Main street, whose wife now resides on Cedar street, was apprehended this afternoon by Patrolman William Graham charged with jumping his bond. He will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning.

Coman in 1922 was arrested charged with violation of the liquor law and secured his liberty when Joseph Rzepnewski qualified as surety on his bond of $1,000. When Coman's case was called in the police court the accused was missing, having left the city. Since that time Coman has made his presence in New London scarce, although it is understood that he has been here at times since. However, this afternoon Patrolman Graham noticed Coman passing through Main street and placed him under arrest.

BRITISH GENERAL STRIKE ENTERS SECOND WEEK WITHOUT ANY SIGN OF ABATEMENT

Its Continuance Means Increasingly Wasteful Consequences to All Classes—The Government is Maintaining the Feeding and Vital Services of the People—The Labor Council Has Issued a Call to Its Subjects to "Stand Firm, Be Loyal to Instructions and Trust Your Leaders"—All Newsprint, Except That at Present in the Hands of Publishers, Has Been Commandeered by the Government.

LONDON, May 10—(AP)—In the words of the British government itself, "The general strike as a whole continues unabated throughout the country."

In making this announcement, the government adds: "The success of the authorities in maintaining the feeding and vital services of the people must not obscure this grave fact or the increasingly wasteful consequences to all classes."

Well guarded lorries with food supplies continued to pass through the streets of London today, trains moved more freely, the striking workmen continued to obey their leaders and disorders of any kind were few.

On the side of labor, the general council of the trades union congress issued the following message, which appeared in the British Worker, headed "All's Well":

"We are entering the second week of the general stoppage in support of the mine workers against an attack on their standard of life by the coal owners. Nothing could be more wonderful than the magnificent response of millions of workers to the call of their leaders.

"From every town and city in the country reports are pouring in to the general council headquarters stating that all ranks are solid and that the workingmen and women are resolute in their determination to resist the unjust attack upon the mining community.

"The general council's message at the opening of the second week is: 'Stand firm, be loyal to instructions and trust your leaders.'"

Nothing thus far has developed relative to calling out labor's "second line of defense" comprising gas, electrical and general utility workers, but in the meantime the council has sought the services of the parliamentary labor party to direct meetings all over the country for the purpose of holding the strikers together.

There is no sign that the navy has any intention or attempting to mediate in the present situation. He is constantly in communications with certain ministers of the crown and is remaining at Buckingham palace for the purpose of keeping in close touch with current happenings.

The government has commandeered all newsprint except that at present in the hands of publishers. This is for the purpose of making certain that the official government strike organ, the British Gazette, may have a sufficient supply for its ever increasing circulation. The official newspaper of the strikers, the British Worker, may suffer on this account and may even have to disappear from the streets.

In the house of commons the government was sharply denounced for this action, as well as its failure to publish in its newspaper the peace appeal of the archbishop of Canterbury, and George Lansbury, laborite for Poplar, entered a strong protest against "introduction of thousands of troops into the east end of London with steel helmets and fixed bayonets when not a blunderbuss or even a horse-pistol had been discovered."

Over the week end many volunteers were offered their services in response to the appeal of Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the home secretary for aid in carrying on the vital services. At the same time the trades union congress withdrew the permits which had been issued to union men to assist the authorities in this direction because the offer of such assistance had been disregarded.

FIRST SERIOUS RAILROAD ACCIDENT SINCE STRIKE

LONDON, May 10—(AP)—The first serious railroad accident since the beginning of the strike occurred today, causing fourth deaths and the serious injury of about twenty others.

At a point near Edinburgh a passenger train manned by a volunteer crew collided with a freight train. Three passengers were killed and a number hurt. Another accident occurred at Cambridge, one person being killed and two injured. A third occurred north of Newcastle, several persons being injured.

PROCEEDINGS IN BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS

LONDON, May 10.—(AP)—About the time the government was commandeering all supplies of newsprint not in the hands of publishers, Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, announced in the house of commons today that such action was necessary because of a shortage of newsprint and the need of it for the government official newspaper, the British Gazette.

The subject of the British Gazette having been introduced, the government was taken to task by several members of the house for having failed to publish the peace appeal broadcast by the archbishop of Canterbury.

Seizure of the newsprint will compel the labor strike organ, British Worker, and the regular dailies to discontinue publication when their supplies now on hand are exhausted.

Lloyd George, liberal leader, was rather pungent in his remarks on the government failure to publish the Christian Appeal. He declared the government was not getting public opinion on the right lines when it aroused merely a spirit of antagonism by saying "break them in pieces like a potter's wheel!"

Ministerial protests greeted this attack, and Sir Henry Page Croft called out; "Every word you are saying is mischievous."

Mr. Lloyd George rejoined that he was for conciliation, while other members might take a different view. He was speaking his honest opinion as a member of parliament with all desire to save the country from disaster.

Chancellor Churchill, after explaining that the British Gazette could not publish everything and was trying to make a fair selection of news, remarked that Mr. Lloyd George, who himself had requently held the highest responsibility in trade crises, ought to have been ready to make a somewhat greater allowance for the government's immense difficulties. Later he promised that the appeal would be printed as soon as room could be found in the columns of the paper for it.

The laborite, Charles G. Ammon complaining of the Gazette's omission to publish the appeal, declared that Mr. Churchill, who was "running the Gazette," would so anything possible to prevent peace, "in order to bring down the iron heel and pose as the saviour of society."

Mr Churchill, he continued, fancied himself in his Napoleonic position. Both sides might have been discussing the terms of the archbishop of Canterbury's appeal but for the action of the chancellor of the exechequer and those associated with him.

Neither the police nor the special volunteer constables, have displayed unnecessary roughness in dealing with strike disorders, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, today told the house of commons in answer to a series of questions.

L. Haden Guest, a laborite, charged that police and special constables had entered a public house in the working district of Southwark and had clubbed workingmen who were playing cards. He also asserted they had chased women and children without cause and broken a house open and had ordered the occupants to the street in order to beat them.

Secretary Joynson-Hicks denied the allegation and declared that the Southwark district was notoriously rough, many lorries had been assaulted there, lorries overturned and burned and motor vans loaded with workers stopped. He read extracts of official reports confirming these and other incidents and said that the police were carrying on their arduous duties without unnecessary roughness.

The secretary said that he had made a complete inquiry and that he did not think that the police were exceeding their duty in any way. Asked whether a policy of reprisals had been adopted by the government, he replied "certainly not."

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL FOR PADEREWSKI

NEW YORK, May 10—(AP)—The tenth distinguished service medal awarded by the American legion was pinned on a bath robe today while the recipient, Ignace Jan Paderewski, pianist and former premier of Poland, lay propped up on his bed with pillows. A cold which caused the confinement of the recipient, had made necessary the cancellation of the presentation dinner planned for tonight.

M. Paderewski had been told only that some persons were called on him, so that he was taken entirely by surprise when John R. McQuiggan national commander of the military order, and a party of legion officials, made the presentation.

The medal was conferred for M. Paderewski's work for the legion in giving a series of benefits for the Legion Fund on a tour which was checked suddenly last week when he became ill.

The medal was inscribed as follows: "To Ignace Jan Paderewski, artist, patriot, and humanitarian with the highest esteem of the American Legion, New York, May 10, 1926."

The other recipients of the medal awarded for distinguished war or peace time service, are Marshal Foch of France; Admiral Beatty of England; Marshall Jacques of Belgium; General Diaz of Italy; General Pershing; Admiral Coontz, U. S. N.; General Haller of Poland; Deputy Bertrand of France and the Unknown American Soldier.

DISAPPEARANCE OF W. S. WARD REMAINS A MYSTERY

NEW YORK, May 10—(AP)—Mystery still shrouded the disappearance of Walter S. Ward tonight.

The automobile belonging to the son of George S. Ward, baking magnate, was found unoccupied in Trenton Thursday with its windshield smashed and a large stone lying in the front seat.

First inquiries of the Ward family elicited replies that the young man's whereabouts were known and that reports that he had disappeared were "bunk". Later, however, Ralph D. Ward, a brother, appealed to police to search for Walter and expressed the belief that there had been foul play.

Four years ago Walter Ward killed Clarence Peters, an ex-marine of Haverhill, Mass., but was acquitted of murder after testifying that he shot in self defense in an argument growing out of a blackmail plot. Shortly after that he disappeared for a time but was found by detectives "following the ponies" at a race track.

AGREEMENT ON NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL

WASHINGTON, May 10 (AP)—House and senate conferees reached an agreement on the naval appropriation bill under which the Pacific fleet will be able to come east this summer for maneuvres and the Lakehurst naval air station will be continued in operation.

A compromise was reached by which the personnel will be reduced from 83,000 to 82,500 instead of 82,000 and $300,000 will be made available for experiment with a metal rigid aircraft, as proposed by the house. Some details of the agreement remain to be ironed out, but the conferees expect to make their report within two or three days after. They have been deadlocked for more than two months.

LONDON, May 10—(AP)—Charles Sessler, bookdealer of Philadelphia, has purchased $400,000 worth of illuminated manuscripts of early English editions during the past fortnight and has bought a silver map of the world which was presented to the famous Elizabethan Admiral Drake.

LONDON, May 10, —(AP)—The general strike thus far has put the so-called American season in England back one month in the opinion of hotel men. The cancellation of American tourist reservations for May and June is variously given at from five to ten per cent but the reservations for July and August have been scarcely affected.

LONDON, May 10.—(AP)—An official government communique, issued tonight, says the country is quiet with few disturbances, but that where these occurred they threatened to become sharper. The police are in full control of the situation.

MADRID, May 10—(AP)—Premier Penno de Rivera has announced he will carry out a reform in bluli fighting that he feels probably will cause more comment than the United States dry law. ENDEAVORING TO RESCUE CHILD FROM WELL

BENNETT HARBOR, May 10.—(AP)—After flooding the farm yard here with lighting from an improvised electric lighting system, hundreds of farmers toiled tonight to reach the bottom of a 40 foot well where Dale Carter 14 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elkneh Carter, is tightly wedged on a ledge just above the water.

The child fell into the well this morning and was found a few hours later by searchers. Volunteer workers tried to sink a shaft but cave-ins forced the abandonment of this procedure. Road scrapers were then brought and work of scooping out a hole 40 feet deep and at least 75 feet in diameter was begun.

Alton B. Parker Died While Out Driving

Was in Central Park, New York, Was the Democratic Nominee For President in 1904.

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—Alton B. Parker, who rose from the obscurity of a youth spent on a New York state farm to bear the standard of the democratic party against Theodore Roosevelt in the presidential race of 1904, died today while driving through Central park.

The former chief judge of the court of appeals contracted a cold three days ago and had been under a physician's care. He was on his way to his country home in Esopus, N. Y., with his wife and nurse when he was stricken with a heart attack. Death was almost instantaneous.

The cold from which Judge Parker was suffering was not in itself serious, but because of his 74 years it had been thought wise to keep him in his suite in the Ambassador hotel until today.

An examination by Dr. Martin De Forest Smith, the Parker physician, this afternoon indicated that Judge Parker had thrown off his illness and permission was given for the Esopus trip.

Judge Parker has been in the habit of making frequent trips to Esopus, to indulge his enthusiastic interest in horseback riding and motor boating. The Parker country home is on the west bank of the Hudson at Esopus, a little village just out of Kingston, and there is located a private dock Judge Parker used for his motor boats.

On leaving the Ambassador today, warmly wrapped against the chill of late spring, Judge Parker directed the chauffeur to drive through Central park. He seemed in good health as the journey began, chatting contentedly between his wife, Mrs. Amy Campbell Parker, (Judge Parker's second wife, whom he married in 1923) and his nurse.

As the automobile neared the reservoir in the park, however, Judge Parker gasped suddenly, started upright and fell at his companions' feet. The chauffeur was ordered to turn the car and race back to the Ambassador, and the women drew the limp form back onto the seat between them.

Whether life still remained, the women were unable to tell, but when Dr. Smith went them at the hotel he immediately saw the end had come. He gave the cause of death as a heart attack and announced it was something which medical science could not have foreseen.

Judge Parker is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. Charles Mercer Hall, wife of a Bridgeport, Conn., clergyman, and two grandchildren, Mrs. Hall is the daughter of Judge Parker and his first wife, Mary Louise Schoonmaker Parker, whom he married in 1878 and who died in 1917.

Funeral services will be held here Wednesday and burial will be in the family plot in Kingston, among the gently rolling hills of the lower Catskills where Judge Parker spent his youth and where he always loved to return whenever his many duties permitted.

TO "CLEAN HOUSE" AT ILLINOIS STATE PRISON

CHICAGO, May 10—(AP)—The intention of a special grand jury in session at Joliet to "clean house" at the Illinois state prison, State's Attorney Hjalmar Rehn of Will county declared today as the jury resumed an inquiry into the escape from the penitentiary of seven convicts last week.

Declaring the escape but one incident in a panorama of poor system and faulty policies, Rehn says that as soon as the grand jury concludes an inquiry into the actual murder of Deputy Warden Julius Klein, killed by the prisoners when they fled, the jury will go into conditions at the penitentiary which enabled the men to carry out their prison delivery.

Although he is "interested" in the possibility that Nathan Leopold, one of the murderers of Robert Franks and a life prisoner at the Joliet prison, may have helped the escaping prisoners there to obtain weapons, State's Attorney Rehn said today he would not call Leopold before the grand jury.

The convicts who got out were armed with knives from the prison shoe shop, in which Leopold is a clerk. Two of the convicts are at large.

M. E. BISHOPS FAVOR THE PROHIBITION LAWS

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—The board of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church today re-affirmed its stand in favor of the prohibition laws, and urged enactment of the legislative programme of the treasury department, designed to strengthen enforcement machinery.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the board on temerance, prohibition and public morals, and Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, both urged a strengthening of the present liquor laws.

Bishops Lower of Signapore and Badley of Bombay, told their colleagues that prohibition in their country was grossly misrepresented abroad by American tourists, some of whom, they said, were intoxicated when they landed from "dry" ships.

VIEWS OF GERMAN PRESS ON BYRD'S POLAR FLIGHT

BERLIN, May 10.—(AP)—Reflecting the disbelief of some German scientists in Admiral Peary's discovery of the North Pole, the newspapers today give prominence to Commander Richard E. Byrd's flight as "a spectacular conclusion by air of something which numerous exprolers have for decades attempted to achieve by dog teams."

The Deutsche Allgemeinze Zeitung expresses the hope Amundsen will find Peary's as wel as Byrd's flag when he reaches the pole in his dirigible the Norge.

Although reserving final judgment until Commander Byrd presents scientific data supporting his claims, the press hails his announced conquest of the pole as a characteristic result of "Yankee enterprise and daring."

A despatch from Oslo says the American's victory in the race to the pole is looked upon as a blow to Scandinavian polar exploration enterprise although Amundsen was the first to congratulate the Americans.

CAT-EYE ANNIE ESCAPED FROM AUBURN PRISON.

AUBURN, N. Y., May 10.—(AP)—Catseye Annie is free again.

The internationally known jewel thief and confidence woman literally walked a plank to freedom over an Auburn prison wall early today and tonight hundreds of prison keepers, deputy sheriffs, city police, state troopers and country constables were searching for her.

The woman, who was sentenced to ten years in the prison for robbing the home of Mrs. Louis Surdam of Buffalo, of jewels worth $75,000, was known under a variety of aliases. On the prison records she was Mrs. Lillian McDowell. At the time of her arrest in Milwaukee last fall she was sought by the authorities of six cities for thefts totalling $200,000.

Brought to Auburn on a stretcher suffering from a broken ankle sustained when she escaped from the Erie county jail in Buffalo, just before she was to have been sentenced. Catseye lost no time in planning a new jail break. She had been recaptured after making her escape in Buffalo because she broke her ankle in leaping from a window and suffering from severe pain and hunger, had to take refuge in a partly finished house in Kenmore, a suburb of Buffalo, where she was caught.

INVESTIGATING FLOUR AND BREAD BAKING INDUSTRIES

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—The department of justice took a hand today in the investigation of the flour milling and bread baking industries with a view to obtaining through grand jury proceedings, if necessary, evidence which certain concerns have refused to divulge to the feadral trade commission.

In a preliminary report submitted to the senate, the trade commission charged restriction of competition among some flour millers but asserted its inquiry was blocked by the refusal of certain concerns to furnish data. It was learned at the commission offices today that Attorney Genery Bargent has requested and received the commission's report.

The trade commission reported to the senate that the largest and most active of these companies refusing to permit an examination of their correspondence were the Washburn Crosby company and Pillsbury Four Mills company. The commission also reby company and Pillsbury Flour Mills company permitted examination of its correspondence but refused copies to be made of any more than 300 letters or other documentary evidence selected.

Evidence already obtained in its inquiry, the commission reported, "indicates conscious attempts to evade" the Sherman anti-trust law. The inquiry was started by the commission in response to a senate resolution.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 10.—(AP)—A series of forest fires which began Saturday afternoon continued unabated in some sections of the country today after having laid waste to two poultry farms, a home, school house, club and church. More than 3,000 chickens perished in the flames.

A promised rain encouraged hundreds of volunteers who have been fighting the flames in the vicinity of Dorothy and Risley for two days.

Trapped with her three young children in her touring car by onrushing flames, Mrs. Joseph Johnson barely escaped being burned to death yesterday on the Honest John road between Risley and Estelel. She abandoned the car and fled with children. The car was destroyed.

RESTORATION OF ONE CENT POSTCARD RATE ASSURED

Agreed Upon by the Joint Congressional Commission After a Conference With Joseph Stewart, Executive Assistant to Postmaster General New—Other Changes Agreed Upon Include Restoration of the C. O. D. Postcard Privilege and Reduction in Rates on Transient Second Class Mail.

WASHINGTON, May 10—(AP)—Material changes in five classes of temporary postal rates approved last year were agreed upon today by the special joint congressional postal committee. They are:

Reduction in the rate on private mailing cards from two cents to one cent.

Reduction of the rate on transient second class mail matter—newspapers mailed by individuals—to one cent.

Establishment of a rate of not more than two cents on return postal cards sent out by business firms with the collection to be made after their return.

Rearrangement of the special handling rate on parcel post packages so that in place of the standard 25 cents charge there will be a graduation, with a 12 cents rate for packages weighing from two to ten pounds and 35 cents for packages over ten pounds.

A penalty of one cent for each ounce on mail matter on which postage is short paid more than one rate.

While concurring in these changes, Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, disagreed with the majority on several major points, proposing a restoration of the 1920 rate on newspapers and other publications with a 50 cents bundle charge rate; reduction of the rate on third class matter from 1 1-2 cents to 1 cent for each two ounces and abolition of the two cents special charge on fourth class mail.

The majority report will be made simultaneously tomorrow to the senate and house. The latter will act first under the agreement and members of the committee hope to get the majority changes through this session so that the commission can proceed with a study of other rate structures with a view to recommending amendments.

Declaring that it recognized the force of the arguments regarding a return to 1920 second class rates, the majority said that when statistics for a full year were in it might be possible "to provide some amelioration of the conditions of which the publishers of newspapers and periodicals now complain."

The majority said it also had in mind the establishment within the third class mail of subdivisions whereby the larger users of this class of mail could have the benefit of the pound rate somewhat in terms as is granted to the users of second mail.

"This committee is of the general opinion that the entire structure of fourth class rates (parcel post) should be recast," the report said, adding that the committee might ultimately determine that the postmaser general should deal with this class of mail under the authority given him to apply for rates through the interstate commerce commission.

PROPOSAL FOR BACTERIAL EXAMINATIONS OF MILK

HARTFORD, May 10—(AP)—Discussion as to the attitude of the Connecticut Association of Dairy and Milk Inspectors in connection with the program of expansion with regard to bacterial examinations of milk both and after pasteurization, will be conducted by Carl A. Brandt, bacteriologist of the Mitchell Dairy company, of Bridgeport, at the first regular meeting of the association to be held in the old senate chamber of the state capitol tomorrow morning.

The association was organized last January for the purpose of developing uniform and efficient inspection of dairy farms, milk establishments, milk and milk products to the end that a safe supply may be provided for the consumers in the state. Membership is composed of men actively engaged in dairy and milk inspection for cities and the state. Regular meetings will be held in January, May and September.

"Safe milk for small towns and cities," will be the subject of an address by I. V. Hiscock, professor of public health at Yaleu niversity. Thomas Holt, state dairy and food commissioner and president of the association, will discuss the value of sediment tests of milk as it comes from the farmer and its relation to bacterial counts. Observation of some recent experiments made in the care of milking machines and pasteurizing outfits will be discussed by A. M. Mitchell, inspector for the Mitchell Dairy company, of Bridgeport.

CAUSE OF DECLINES IN VALUE OF FRENCH FRANC

PARIS, May 10—(AP)—The readiness of London and Amsterdam to absorb all the pounds and dollars offered on the market in exchange for French francs has tied the hands of the French government for the present, making it impossible to effectively use the remaining $33,000,000 of the Morgan loan to defend the franc. After the bourse closed today the franc was unofficially quoted at 31.90 to the dollar. During the day it had exceeded 32 to the dollar.

There is good authority for the supposition that the government will not utilize the Morgan fund until it considers the moment ripe for stabilizing the franc. Steps then will be taken to procure credits in the United States for an additional amount sufficient to protect the franc.

The government's policy is to borrow no more money on long term paper but rather to arrange for the amount of credit necessary to keep the French importers covered without deranging the exchange once the franc is stabilized.

SIX INDICTMENTS FOR LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS

NEW YORK, May 10—(AP)—Six alleged leading figures in a bootleg ring with assets estimated as high as $10,000,000 were indicted for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law in a sealed true bill opened today by United States Attorney Buckner.

Emil Wormser, formerly an importer of liquor, was named as the central figure.

Investigators assigned to investigate the ring before the case was put before the grand jury reported that the Wormser syndicate was one of the largest operators off Long Island, fully equipped wit hboats and trucks to do business on a large scale.

The ring was alleged to have purchased its liquor abroad, and arranged the transportation and all other details through its own channels.

Her group, under the leadership of Mrs. Pankhurst, is arranging relief entertainments for the East End women with the object of keeping them off the streets and away from agitators' meetings.

SENATE ACTION FAVORS RAILROAD LABOR BILL

WASHINGTON, May 10—(AP)—Passage of the Watson-Parker railroad labor bill in the identical form in which it was approved by the house was made almost certain today with the first test of strength in the senate.

This came on a motion to recommit the bill for further hearings, made by Senator Curtis, the republican floor leader and rejected 14-to 59. Three democrats, Reed, Missouri; Ransdell, Louisiana, and Edwards, New Jersey, joined with 11 republicans in supporting the motion.

Several amendments, including one by Senator Curtis to place final authority over wage awards in the interstate commerce commission, have been or will be proposed, but their sponsors had little hope that any could muster a majority.

After the roll call today, some leaders said proponents of the bill had no less than 70 senators "signed up" to vote for the measure without "the dotting of an 'i' or the crossing of a 't'."

A final vote probably will be reached within a few days.

Besides the three democrats, those voting for the Curtis motion were Bingham and McLean, Connecticut; Curtis, Kansas; Fernald and Hale, Maine; Jones, Washington; Keyes and Moses, New Hampshire; Norbeck, South Dakota; Phipps, Colorado, and Williams, Missouri. More than three hours of debate preceded the roll call, with Senator Reed, of Missouri, leading the fight to recommit the bill.

FARM RELIEF LEGISLATION DEBATED IN THE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, May 10—(AP)—Heated charges and retorts were heard in the house today during the closing hours of debate on farm relief legislation. Personalities were not spared.

Representative Fort, of New Jersey, a republican member of the agriculture committee, started the fireworks by asserting that in response to his opposition to the Haugen price stabilization bill he had been told that if "eastern interests" defeated the measure, the "western states would pass legislation to keep eastern interests out and bring about a situation comparable to the British general strike."

During subsequent speeches, the house frequently was in an uproar as members clashed on the issues involved.

Debate proceeded under a program calling for its close at 11 o'clock this night, with the Haugen bill to be taken up for amendment tomorrow.

Before a final vote is reached, the other two pending bills, the Tincher credit plan and the Curtis-Aswell commodity marketing proposal, can be offered as substitutes, this procedure insuring a vote on all three bills.

BALD-HEADED MEN IN SESSION IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, May 10.—(AP)—The largest gathering of bald-headed men that ever assembled together at any one time, gathered at the Stratfield hotel tonight where the 14th annual convention of the Bald Head club of America, was held. Missing from the convention, besides adequate hair, was the fair sex.

Over six hundred heads, more or less round, small and square, but all bald heads, glistened in the bright lights of the ball room when the convention was called to order.

Former State's Attorney Homer S. Cummings, one of the baldest members of the club, acted as toastmaster at the banquet, and introduced the speakers of the evening, who included Governor John H. Trumbull, Charles E. Vail, of Stamford and Orville A. May, of New Haven.

The club, proclaimed as the jolliest club in America, lived up to the proclamation, for there was no mourning for the departed hair.

CHAPLIN BOY RUN DOWN BY BROOKLINE, MASS., CAR

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 10.—Nicholas Rosati, ten, son of Mrs. Maria Rosati, of Chaplin, is dying at St. Joseph's hospital from injuries sustained when run down by a Buick coupe operated by Herbert J. Lane, of 92 Colchester avenue Brookline, Mass. The accident happened at 6:15 o'clock Monday night as the boy was leaving the Danielson bus, opposite his home on the Old Ness place, midway between South Chaplin and Clark's Corner. The boy was picked up by Nicholas Demburo, his grandfather and rushed to the hospital by Mr. Lane. The child sustained fractures of both legs and a fractured skull. No hope was held out for his recovery late Monday night. Mr. Lane came to police headquarters and the officials turned the case over to the Danielson police barracks, the site of the accident being out of local jurisdiction. The car operated by Lane is owned by W. D. Lane and Co., cotton dealers, of 200 Summer street, Boston.

The Danielson-Willimantic bus headed for Danielson was driven by George Pearl of Hampton. The Rosati boy had boarded it here having come to this city for dental treatment. He got out at his home and went from the right side of the bus around the rear of it across the highway to go home. Mr. Lane was driving from the opposite direction. He claims that he sounded his horn as he approached the bus. He was just passing it when the child appeared less than four feet ahead of his car. He applied the brakes. The boy was thrown to the ground and run over, being rendered unconscious. State Policeman Edward V. Streaman of Danielson came to this city to conduct an investigation. Victor Lane was held on a technical charge of reckless driving, pending the outcome, and furnished a bond of $1000 for his release.

COUNCIL FIXES TAX RATE AT 27½ MILLS, SAVING A MILL

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 10. — The city council this evening did the unexpected thing, for it rejected the proposal of the city manager and the chairman of the finance committee and fixed the rate of taxes for the year at 27 1-2 mills instead of at 28 1-2 mills. Councilor Streeter led the opposition to the higher rate and amended the ordinance fixing the rate so that the lower mileage was decided upon. City Manager Holt insisted that the higher rate should be fixed and represented that the city should insist upon that rate, holding that if there was any surplus in the receipts at the end of the year it should be used for taking up bonds that will become due in 1927 and for taking up water bonds that have once been refunded. He held that the water bonds should never have been refunded, but that they should have been taken care of from a sinking fund which the city ought to have provided.

Councilor Streeter held that the appropriations set up in the budget were more than would be made use of. He said that was the case last year and it would be the case this year. He held that the collection of back taxes would be sufficient to permit the reduction he proposed in the rate. He declared he had gone over the figures of estimate very carefully and was convinced that the lower rate was feasible and that it should be decided upon. He referred to the surplus the water department would turn in and said that there was no doubt but that some $60,000 would be returned to the city at the end of the year.

Councilor May came to the aid of Councilor Streeter and advocated the lower rate, saying that he had watched the collections of back taxes and he, too, believed that the amount collected would be ample to fix the rate at the lower figure. He was emphatic in the belief that the lower rate was sufficient.

Mayor Fox endorsed the idea of the lower rate. He said the tax collector should be given to understand that the back taxes were to be collected. The office of the tax collector had become a receiving place for the taxes rather than a place of collection, citing the fact that Middletown and Norwich collected practically all their taxes and there was no reason why New London should not do the same thing. The water department collected practically every dollar due and he was of the opinion that the tax collector should do the same thing.

Councilor Murray and Councilor Woodruff favored the higher rate of taxation, saying that they did not want to hamper the city manager in the carrying on of the city's business.

Councilor Whiton was not present at the meeting.

The council voted to issue water works refunding bonds at 4 1-4 per cent.

J. Coleman Prince post of the American legion was given permission to conduct a sale of poppies on the streets two days preceding Memorial day. The Community Chest, the city manager explained, did not take care of this matter.

It was voted to refund to P. H. Wilson $144.42 overpaid in taxes. Mr. Wilson is a veteran of the war and is entitled to exemption on $1000 which he was not allowed.

A report of progress was made on the matter of Charles Schall against the Bath and Beach club for the removal of bath houses from the beach off Pequot avenue.

The council voted to buy a carload of cement from Raymond & Alexander company at $3,686 and three 8x16 inch insert valves for the water department.

There were a dozen applications for building permits but none of them were for more pretentious buildings than garages.

Frank Saunders appeared before the council in an executive session asking for a rebate upon his sewer assessment.

"I'm so proud of my washing when I see it hanging on the line, because it's always so white. Yet I get it out so nice and early. The reason is that I use Rinso to soak the clothes clean. Then I only need rub the most soiled spots with my hands, rinse away the loosened dirt and my wash is all done. The clothes seem to wear better, too because I don't rub them threadbare on a washboard as I used to."
MRS. ELLA TUCKER,

Norwich, Conn.
Millions use Rinso. Thousands write us letters like this.

Another Norwich Woman, Mrs. Tucker, Says:

Snow white clothes -this safe easy way

No washboard scrubbing — no red, swollen hands — yet your week's wash comes whiter than you've ever seen it.

A NEW kind of soap—granulated—actually soaks clothes cleaner than hours of rubbing could make them! Does the family wash for you without a bit of hard work—no need for a washboard!

It's so easy this new, safe way. You just soak the wash in rich, mild Rinso suds—rinse in clear water—and hang out to dry!

The dirt floats loose in the soaking and rinses off by itself. Even the most soiled and stained parts need only a gentle rub between the fingers to make them spotless.

Saves clothes—saves hands

Why rub things threadbare against a board, when Rinso soaks them whiter—so safely?

Rinso contains no acids, bleaches or harsh chemicals to injure white clothes or fast colors. So mild you could soak your finest white table cloth in it for days without harm. And no other laundry soap is easier on hands.

Even the hardest water, Rinso whips at once into rich, creamy suds that loosen the ground-in dirt and stains. Marvelous in washing machines—23 leading manufacturers recommend it for safety, and for a whiter, brighter wash.

Try it next washday

Say goodbye to bar soap, chips, washing powders, washboards! Let Rinso do all the hard work for you. Let it do next week's wash. See how much whiter clothes get without taxing your strength —even without boiling!

for foods without flavor

THE art of making meals attractive is in serving flavory foods.

In breakfast oats, see that you get the Quaker brand. The difference in flavor is amazing.

Some 90 years were spent perfecting Quaker flavor. No other oats have it to you. Yet the price you pay is the same.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "meat" of oats. And that makes luscious less often needed. Protein, carbohydrates and vitamines and "salts" are thus combined in making Quaker Oats an excellently balanced ration.

Quick Quaker cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. That's faster than plain toast. Makes the richest breakfast now the quickest.

ADD 15 POUNDS IN FEW WEEKS

Miss Rogers Uses New Way to Take Time-Tried Flesh Builder.

One of the principal reasons why people are thin and scrawny and unattractive—why they are weak and lacking ambition and "pep" and nerve force is simply this: The food they eat is lacking in the vital elements needed to put on solid, healthy flesh.

If you would gain weight—not merely flabby fat, but fine, firm flesh that fills up hollows in the neck and face and rounds out graceful arms, do as Miss Rogers did. Read what she says in grateful testimony:

After my attack of Flu I was thin, run down and weak. I had a sallow complexion, my cheeks were sunk in and I was continually troubled with gas on my stomach. I felt stuffy and had lost my appetite. I had read about McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets and decided to give them a trial. At once, I began to pick up an appetite, my cheeks filled out and my complexion became healthy looking and I gained 15 pounds in six weeks and am very thankful for what McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets did for me.

Miss Alberta Rogers, Decatur, Ill.

And there's good reason for her joy in her return to good health and normal weight. Everybody knows that Cod Liver Extract contains all the vital elements that make solid flesh and sturdy nerves. But many people cannot take it because of its fishy taste and odor.

Now with McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets all disadvantages are removed. They are pleasant, easy-to-take tablets containing all the vital elements of Cod Livers together with other ingredients recognized by physicians everywhere, that build strength and health. They quickly put on healthy stay-there flesh. In fact, you can get McCoy's Tablets from Lee & Osgood Co. or your favorite druggist with a specific guarantee that if you do not add at least 5 pounds after 30 days' use, your money is to be instantly refunded. Start yourself on the road to health by beginning to take McCoy's Tablets today. 60 for 60 cents.

DANIELSON

BAY STATE BOY JAILED— TAMPERED WITH STATE CAR

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 10—Martin Needham, about 21, of Clinton, Mass., went to Brooklyn jail from the town court Monday morning, because he could not pay fine and costs amounting to $51.33, imposed by Judge W. Fenner Woodward. A fine of $25 was for tampering with a motor vehicle owned by the state of Connecticut and in charge at the time of the occurrence of State Officer Arthur W. Williams of the Danielson barracks, and a fine of $10 was for being intoxicated. Needham was in Officer Williams' car and had the ignition switch turned when the officer came along and apprehended him. As the car was not underway, the minor charge of tampering with the car was filed against him. Needham went to jail hoping that his mother might be induced to produce the money needed to pay his fines and the costs.

HAD TOO MANY LIGHTS FAULT OF NORWICH DRIVER

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 10—Two other cases growing out of violations of the motor vehicle laws claimed the attention of Judge Woodward in the town court Monday. George W. Butts of East Killingly was presented to answer to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of an intoxicant and was found guilty. He having no money to pay the usual fine of $100 imposed in such cases and being the family of a family that needs his aid, he was sentenced to serve 30 days in jail and to pay the costs of prosecution. This will provide the equivalent in punishment that would be entailed by paying the fine. Butts was before the court last year on a charge of reckless driving.

John Sunkowski of Norwich appeared to answer to a charge that he had operated a motor vehicle showing a green and a red light in the front, without having the written authority of the motor vehicle commissioner for using such equipment. He was fined $5 and costs, a total of $15.49.

A rubbish fire that blazed furiously in the rear of the Keystone block, Monday afternoon brought a call for the fire department from Box 25, at the corner of Main and Water streets. While the fire did not amount to much, it was regarded as endangering a number of frame buildings, including the Keystone block, that are in the immediate vicinity. The firemen were absent from the station for about fifteen minutes.

The state has done a bit to stock Alexander's lake for bettering fishing by releasing a number of cans of perch in that pretty body of water. The lake already contained yellow perch and white perch, these later having been released about ten years ago. They apparently have thrived, because numbers of them are taken each season by fishermen who happen to know their haunts. However, no one has ever caught a chinook salmon, several thousand of which were released in the lake a number of years ago, some of the fish at the time being as large as eight inches.

Chauncey Parkhurst died during Sunday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Day, Goodyear road, where he had lived and been employed for a number of years. Mr. Parkhurst had lived in Killingly a great many years. He was born November 25, 1850, in Tolland, this state, a son of George and Mary Ann Wilbur Parkhurst. He leaves a sister, Mrs. Jane Matterson of Cranston, R. I., two nephews, William F. Parkhurst of Attawaugan and Pardon Parkhurst of Danielson and two nieces, Misses Nelli and Mary Parkhurst of Dayville.

The County Y. M. C. A. teams that have been obtaining funds here are confident that more money and pledges than has come in to date will be received during the month and the town's quota more nearly approached.

The A. T. and T. company is to make a heavy expenditure through this territory this season in installing transformers that have been distributed along the route of the underground across Windham county and into Rhode Island, through Hampton Brooklyn and Danielson. The work to be done will require many weeks. This line, running from New York to Boston is one of the most important in New England.

Textile operatives here have read with interest that the general British strike is apt to benefit the New England cotton and woolen goods manufacturers. For that particular reason the strike holds additional interest to many here. Great quantities of textiles have been coming into the United States from England the early part of this year. Some mill men say that if the strike should endure any length of time this will give business that has been going abroad to New England manufacturers.

Brick, tile and much other building material is being accumulated at Killingly High school where work on excavations for the foundations and on the foundations has been underway for several weeks. By June 1 such an advance will have been made in the work as to impress the casual observer. Many had not sensed how much larger the school is to be with its additions built until they looked over the excavations made.

Occasionally one hears the suggestion that the Eastern Connecticut chamber of commerce be revived and that an active organization such as it might be made would be of much value to this part of the state in arousing the interest of manufacturers and others in it in a financial way. There is nothing to indicate that any active steps for such a revival have been taken—just conversations relative to the subject.

Inquiry indicates that few veterans of the Spanish American war will benefit at present by the recent increase in pensions authorized by congress for the soldiers of this war. Danielson sent a company to the Spanish war—F company of the old Third Connecticut infantry. The majority of these men who are still living are in comparatively good health and busy at a variety of tasks. In later years they may be on the pension rolls, but are not at present.

A child health conference will be held at the town hall building this (Tuesday) afternoon, as is done once each month.

A meeting of the chamber of commerce is to be held this evening. The address will be made by Fred W. Orr.

Linwood E. Salisbury, who died in Moosup the past week, was for years a resident of Danielson, where his father was engaged in the hotel business.

There will be a delegation from the local legion and auxiliary at a dinner in Hartford May 26 when national commander and other high officials will be in attendance.

Next Saturday brings the Windham county Y. M. C. A. track meeting at the fairgrounds in Brooklyn. Amateur athletes from various county towns will compete.

Miss Emma F. Pilling will have the members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church at her home for a meeting Wednesday afternoon.

In sections of Killingly light frosts again were reported Monday morning, as has occurred several times within a week.

Work is underway to put cemeteries of Danielson and other parts of Killingly at their best for Memorial day.

Henry W. Babson, recently returned from the south after spending the winter, plans to remain in Danielson this summer, instead of going to Princeton, Mass., as he did last year.

Dog owners who did not register the animals by the first of the month are now being required to pay one dollar additional for having failed to do so on time.

Today (Tuesday) brings the annual meeting of the Windham association of Congregational churches and ministers with the church at Dayville, where Rev. William Swainson is pastor.

Arthur C. Johnson of Worcester was a visitor with friends in Danielson Monday.

Mrs. Ellen M. Adams, 77, widow of Charles M. Adams, died Monday night at her home on Academy street. She has been in failing health for some time. Mrs. Adams, a life-long resident of Danielson, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Burlingham. Her husband has been dead for several years. She leaves a son, Dr. Clarence L. Adams and a daughter, Mrs. Peter Spencer, both of Danielson.

EXPERIENCE OF WESTERN GIRL

Found Cannery Work Too Tiring

The fertile valleys of Oregon help to supply the tables of America.

This is possible thru the magic of the humble tin can.

In one of the canning establishments, Julia Schmidt was employed." It was complicated work because she did sealing and other parts of the work. It was strenuous work and she was not a strong girl. Often she forced herself to work when she was hardly able to sit at her machine. At times she would have to stay at home for she was so weak she could hardly walk. For five years she was in this weakened condition.

She tried various medicines. At last, a friend of hers spoke of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Miss Schmidt gave it a trial.

"Everyone says I am a healthier and stronger girl," she writes. "I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends who tell me how they suffer and I am willing to answer letters from women asking about it." Julia Schmidt's address is 652 North Front St., Salem, Oregon. For sale by all druggists.

SHARPERS TRICKED CITY DURING CLEAN-UP WEEK

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 10.—Last week was clean-up week in Putnam and the citizens in general responded to the appeal of the chamber of commerce in this respect. The city teams were busy for several days in carrying away the refuse and Superintendent Dumas now states that there were more than 15 loads collected. Mr. Dumas found that some people took advantage of the week to have their ashes carted away, free of charge. This was not part of the program, as it was intended primarily to have the yards raked and tidied up.

In the window at the Citizens National bank are five alarm clocks, each showing a different time. One clock denotes the time of day in San Francisco, another St. Louis, another Boston, one London time and the last one standard time.

Mr. and Mrs. John Salvas and daughter have arrived in Putnam from Florida, where they have a winter bungalow. Henry Salvas, Mr. Salvas' brother accompanied them, as he had been visiting them in the south. Mr. Salvas will leave for Nantucket Island soon, where he conducts a business during the summer.

The Parlimentary school, under the auspices of the Putnam league of Women Voters and the Putnam Parent-Teacher association, which session was postponed last winter because of the blizzard, is to be held all day Friday, May 14, at Odd Fellows hall.

The ten leagues of Women Voters in Windham county, as well as to the Parent-Teachers' associations of the surrounding towns, also all interested in the study of parlimentary law, have been invited to be present.

The engagement of Miss Dorothy Bundy, daughter of Mrs. W. T. Witter of Woodstock avenue, formerly of Woodstock, to Merrill Healey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Healey of Woodstock was announced recently at a bridge party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Ellis of Hartford. Miss Bundy, who has taught for two years in the William H. Hall high school, West Hartford, was graduated from Woodstock Academy in 1920 and from Brown university in 1924. Mr. Healey is also a graduate of Woodstock Academy and afterwards attended the Putnam State Trade school. He is now a contractor and builder.

Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows of this city has received an invitation to co-operate with Webster lodge in the celebration of the 107th anniversary of the founding of Odd Fellowship, today (Tuesday). The meeting of the local lodge, which comes on the same evening as the celebration, will be called to order at 7 o'clock. A brief meeting will be held and it is expected that owners of cars will be at the lodge rooms and furnish transportation for those who wish to attend the celebration.

The anniversary exercises are expected to be held at the Methodist church, Webster, the pastor being a member of the order. Odd Fellows are to be at the Webster lodge rooms before 8 o'clock and will march, accompanied by a band, to the church, where an interesting program of speaking and music will be given. The principal address will be by Rev. Frank Derrish Potter of Dorchester, Mass., grand chaplain of the Sovereign grand lodge.

Following the exercises at the church the members will return in the same line to Odd Fellows hall where refreshments will be served and an entertainment will be furnished. Fred W. Tafft is chairman of the committee having the celebration in charge.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Hereafter, instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent bottles, any druggistore.

GAINED EIGHT POUNDS BY TAKING

Father John's Medicine

Mrs. R. L. Doherty, mother of this little girl, writes:

"One of my neighbors told me about Father John's Medicine, and I gave it to my little girl when she was sick. Since taking it she has gained eight pounds and has a beautiful color. Now she can go out and play like the rest of the children. I am sending a picture of my daughter to show the benefits obtained from Father John's Medicine." (Signed) Mrs. R. L. Doherty, 449 Newfield Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

The pure food elements in Father John's Medicine build new strength and health and that is why it is the best spring tonic. It is a real body builder and not a stimulant because it is free from alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form.

JEWETT CITY

BISHOP'S CROSSING WORK IS BEING RUSHED ALONG

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, May 10—Local people are much interested in the work being rushed in connection with the elimination of Bishop's crossing, a couple of miles above the town. The engineer's plans call for the north approach to strike the present state road level near the Sprinvale barn, only a few yards from the actual crossing. On the south approach, the highway grade is reached at the rise over 200 yards from the bridge proper. It looks as though the book was closing on Bishop's long list of accidents, with not a few fatalities. It has never been the opinion of local automobile drivers that Bishops was over a dangerous crossing, indeed, it presented no hazard to the motor vehicle operator, for the reason that approaching it from either direction the view was unobstructed for close to a quarter of a mile. For actual liability of accident, Bishops was not to be compared with French's on the Providence division where several fatal wrecks have occurred in recent years. It is believed here that the real reason for eliminating Bishop's is to be seen in that the railroad maintains a quarter of a mile siding, where trains had to be cut in two, in accordancew ith the state law.

Finn's tonight. Alice Joyce and Warner Baxter in Mannequin.—Adv.

Railroad men, who generally turn out to be of a pretty good sort and who have been engaged in the passenger service, as the local traffic touches this station, have often gained for themselves the lifelong respect of Jewett City's travelling public. Two such men are "Dick" Brockett and "Jim" Vickery both of New London. It is with feelings of genuine sorrow that local people learn that both of these men are off duty on account of illness. As has been told in the New London news of The Bulletin the former is a patient in Lawrence hospital in that city, critically ill, and probably facing a major operation, with chances against him. He became a pilot in the trolley service shortly after that service was established over the local iron. During intervals of slack work on trains on the through expresses he put in several years of service on the Worcester-New London branch.

"Jim" Vickery also a railroad man of the old school, with a record for courtesy as a conductor and admirable efficiency when it comes to handling a train, has been laying off more than a month. To Jewett City people he is well known, from the fact that he married Miss Carrie Lamb, a native of Griswold, daughter of the late Ezekiah Lamb and who as a girl attended the local district school. "Jim" told some of his railroad friends last week that he will soon be running again, which determination, finds an echoing sentiment of "Here's hoping!" in his friends off the railroad, as well as on it.

The decorations at the Methodist church were furnished Mothers' day by members of the congregation and the Gardiner class. Those furnished by the Gardiner class were sent to shut-ins, after the evening service.

Very Rev. Michael McCabe counsail, K. of C. is making arrangements for the Columbia Players of Norwich, to present Couple of Millions in Jewett City. The company played to a splendid house in Norwich recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer oule, who were married in Plainfield last week were given a reception at the home of Mr. Boule's parents, on Mathewson street, Saturday night.

Baltimore orioles have been reported, and mourning doves have been seen in their accustomed haunts this week. On a farm near the borough, a carrier pigeon has been resting for three days. The lettering on a leg band has not been made out yet, although he is becoming more tame every day, and apparently is pleased with his new surroundings.

Mrs. George H. Thornton has been notified that the little daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Wilber, of Rock, Mass., formerly of Jewett City, has been named Dorothy May.

PLAINFIELD

Saturday, Miss Helen Palmer Gallup, and Cecil Bradford, both of Plainfield, were united in marriage. The ceremony being performed by Rev. W. C. Prentiss. The maid of honor was Miss Katherine Kingsbury of Wellesley Hills, Mass., who wore a becoming dress of light blue crepe de chine. The best man was Lucius M. Erley of Plainfield. Lubricoat Insurance for your motor

By the Veteran Motorist

TWO metallic bearing surfaces rubbed together dry will generate friction and heat and will wear rapidly. This absorbs power. A coat of the right oil between two such surfaces will form a cushion, reduce friction and heat and will prevent wear.

Pistons and rings must be made smaller than the cylinder in order to run without sticking. This slight clearance between piston rings and cylinder walls allows leakage. A coat of the right oil between rings and cylinder wall will form a gas seal to prevent lost compression and power.

The right oil for the lubrication of the motor is a heat-resisting, uniform quality oil that will form a coat highly adhesive to the metallic surfaces and will consistently maintain that coat under all service conditions.

Socony Motor Oils will "lubricoat" these bearing surfaces.

The SIGN of SOCONY Guarantees Motor Oils That:

1. LubriCOAT and cushion every part
2. Increase compression and power
3. Resist high motor temperatures
4. Maintain uniform quality
5. Are found throughout Sonoryland.

"LUBRI-COAT": To spread, as with an impenetrable coat of oil, all moving and frictional parts of a motor car engine; here done with the proper grade of Socony Motor Oil.

HOW well do you know how to take care of your motor? What do you know about oil? The Standard Oil Company of New York has commissioned The Veteran Motorist to preach the gospel of good oil these many years.

Now he wants to see how much he has helped motorists throughout Sonoryland. To learn how much the average driver knows about his motor, the Standard Oil Company of New York will award $2,500 to the 79 contestants who write him the best answers to five questions, the first of which is given in this advertisement.

Watch for the next Standard Oil of New York advertisement to see Question 2. It will appear in this paper two weeks from to-day.

WORKING WAY THROUGH COLLEGE

In most colleges of any size there is maintained a bureau or self help, for in every such institution there are those who are anxious to work their way through college and it is desirous that there should be some medium of bringing those students in touch with those instances where such work as they are willing to do is available. Many a student would not be able to get a college education were it not for the fact that he can work his way through.

Some of the best students are enrolled among the workers, and it is interesting to note as the result of a referendum at Princeton recently that by an overwhelming vote it was decided that the standing of the worker is not adversely affected among his fellows because of the fact that he works.

The referendum resulted as it ought to have been expected that it would. Why should the standing of a student be adversely affected under such conditions? He is demonstrating that where there is a will there's a way. He is showing that even though his parents are not able to provide his college expenses he is not prevented from getting the education he seeks. He is displaying his ability to not only get his lessons, but to be a wage earner at the same time. He is making the most of his opportunities in a manner that is a decided credit to himself and that is a great deal more than can be said of some whose college courses are paid for and who are at college not so much for the education as to have a good time.

The student who is earning his way through college is entitled to double credit. None but the snob would think of belittling him. Rather is it the case where the fellow who displays the ingenuity and resourcefulness to work his way through college has greater reason to look with disdain upon those who are wasting their time, efforts and other people's money in college, but that bothers them not in the least. They are too busy with worthwhile efforts and laying real foundations for greater things and days ahead.

GROSS NEGLIGENCE

Where the responsibility for too many railroad crossing accidents lies is distressingly illustrated in the case of the taxi which was carrying a Long Island family consisting of husband, wife and two children, to church.

It was necessary to cross the railroad tracks, at which point there is no signal to warn the users of the highway of the approach of trains, but it is a crossing where highway users have a full view of the railroad track in both directions and thus where they can be expected to use their eyes and head for the protection of themselves and others.

From all indications the taxi driver was paying no attention to anything but delivering his load. Whether he saw the train and believed that he could beat it to the crossing is not known but the indications are that he did not take the precaution to look up the railroad track in either direction for as the second car of the train was over the highway the taxi crashed into it, resulting in the death of the mother and two children and serious injury to the father and the taxi driver.

From all indications there was no attempt to slow down and no disposition to avoid danger by giving the train the right of way. The conditions which prevailed in that instance exist in too many crossing accidents. That fatal affair was entirely unnecessary. It could have been easily prevented had the driver been alert to his responsibility and devoting his efforts to safety as well as to speeding to a destination which was never reached.

The very fact that there was a crossing ahead was sufficient reason to have had his car under control so that he could have stopped without crashing into a passing train. Likewise it appears to emphasize the need of establishing some form of a bell or light warning signal at all crossings, the open ones as well as the bad ones. The human agent is not always tending to business at such points even though he most certainly should be. Such cases as that on Long Island can be regarded, however, as nothing less than gross negligence.

A FINE DEMONSTRATION

Ever since the stiffening of our immigration laws there have been those, who could not gain admission under the quota figures, who have made up their minds to disregard the law and get into this country somehow.

There are those who cannot obtain admission at all because they fail to measure up to the requirements of the immigration laws and cannot pass the tests. It must be humane or improved public policy may be humane- they have records which make them and undesirable.

When those who persist in violating the immigration law are caught they are deported, quite the same as is done with those who develop criminal tendencies or who become insane within a certain time.

That some of those who enter in violation of the law by being smuggled in might under ordinary conditions be regarded as fit for residence or citizenship here is entirely probable. The fact that they are disposed to break the law in order to get in does not react to their benefit, but there are occasions when it is possible for such persons to demonstrate their worth. An instance of this character occurred in New York harbor when a group of persons was about to be put aboard a ship for deportation. A woman instead of going aboard the boat rushed to the dock and jumped overboard. Efforts to rescue her by a sailor might have succeeded had he not been seized with a cramp. That prompted one of the deportees to plunge overboard and he brought both of them safely ashore.

It was an act of heroism that deserves recognition. It indicated that he was probably better than the ordinary type of deportee and could it have been possible for action to have been taken on the spot his deportation might have been recalled. But there is no doubt that it will serve as a means of cancelling the black mark against him for disregarding the immigration law and additional entrance should he decide to come back later and seek admission through the proper channels.

EMBASSY QUARTERS

For years the need has been persistently pointed out of having this country own its embassies and legations abroad, but it has not been possible to make much progress in that direction because of the policy which has been adhered to. We have stood out in marked contrast to other countries in hiring such quarters and being subject to the price jumping and the frequent cases of moving for our representatives.

In a few instances such property has been acquired by purchase or by gift but with the appropriation of $10,000,000 to be spent over a period of five years the situation should experience a decided change. Representatives of this country will be housed in American owned buildings. They will be at fixed points instead to subject to change and they will, it is to be expected be representative of the country, although elaborate structures such as characterize many countries may not be anticipated. What are needed are buildings that will adequately serve the purposes for which they are used. Some may be purchased, others may be built, but it is a move that will not only mean a decided relief to the persons named to represent this country but which should prove an economic benefit in the end.

We are doing with our embassies and legations what is being urged and probably will be approved concerning public buildings at home and especially in the national capital. The adoption of the bill concerning foreign quarters should logically be followed by similar action concerning the five year public building bill now before congress.

THE ROTOR SHIP

The arrival here of the motor ship Baden-Baden will direct increased attention to this method of propelling vessels. It has been given a thorough demonstration in Germany by its inventor Anton Flettner, who operated in the North sea before thinking of sending it across the Atlantic. It has, of course, received the attention of marine engineers and others but now that it has been shown that it can be employed in ocean transportation it is certain to get greater consideration. It is a trip for the purpose of impressing its merits upon transportation interests and this country is inclined to show keen interest in this new principle.

The vessels was driven 70 per cent of the distance across the Atlantic by its rotors, tall, circular towers erected on the deck which are described as tricking the wind into pushing the ship. There are no sails and no other motive power except for emergency purposes.

In these days the changing over of coal burning vessels into oil burners and the development of the Diesel engine for large vessels are signs of the time. The use of the wind for the driving of vessels has been steadily decreasing. The windjammers are rapidly disappearing, but if the Flettner rotor can be shown to be a practical thing and that it can drive large as well as small vessels under all conditions it will certainly get the hearing that it is entitled to. The rotor ship is in its early stage. Whether it is worthy of general adoption rests with the designer to prove. It is by small beginnings that the steamship has been brought to its present state of development. Perhaps there is as great a future for the rotor.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to the Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10.—Congress is still undecided about the date of adjournment, even though the Judge English impeachment case goes over till November.

Long ago Floor Leader John Q. Tilson predicted informally, that the first of June would be the earliest possible date. Some more optimistic members of the house fixed the middle of May as their hope. But that has gone glimmering under the insistence of the farm bloc that relief legislation for the farmers must be put through, or they will check the early adjournment move and nip it in its bud.

At this moment the president, and the titular leaders of both senate and house are all set for an early June adjournment, with necessary business accomplished, and it's a pretty safe guess they will win out, with but a week or two delay at the most.

Under the able floor leadership of Tilson of Connecticut, no time has been wasted in the house. Never before has the floor leader set so fast a pace and smoothed out factional difficulties with the readiness of Tilson. He has won laurels for himself and for his party and his continued floor leadership is assured for as long a time as the republicans remain in power and he will accept the arduous duties of that office.

Tilson's newly inaugurated method of making important chairmanships do their part of the work, have them meet the steering committee and himself in conference has worked out extremely well, and except for the farm bloc tie up, the work would be accomplished, and the congressional shutters up and fastened tight, by June 1st or even earlier. As it is, Tilson will be a factor in getting an agreement without undue delay.

Mrs. Coolidge is never more charming than when entering into the games of little children. She is entirely unaffected at such times and shows plainly her love for children is in no way diminished by the heavy social and official cares that fall on her shoulders.

For instance, the May day custom of leaving baskets at the door, and then running to hide before they can be caught, is as much fun for the children of Washington, as for country bred kids. On May day morning, three little tots, whose coming had been heralded, though unknown to them, trudged up the white house walk, climbed the steps, and gave several lusty knocks on the "front door" as they afterwards described it. They dropped the big basket of roses on the step and hid, behind the great granite pillars. Nothing happened. They peeked out carefully and repeated the knock—run back to their hiding place—still no one appeared. Growing bolder, they knocked again, and this time waited a jiffy—then the door opened, Mrs. Coolidge ran out, grabbed right and left, with a merry laugh and caught the three little youngsters in her arms, kissed them before they could scamper back to the shelter of the pillars.

She posed with the children, called them her "May day heralds" and finally gave them each a box of little cakes and a big red rose, to their delight and pride.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Ailsa Mellon, daughter of the secretary of the treasury to David K'E. Bruce, son of the senator from Maryland, caused a political sensation in congressional circles. Miss Mellon has been hostess for her father since his appointment as a cabinet officer and in that way has been an outstanding, though girlish figure in republican politics. Young Bruce is the son of one of the most outspoken and prominent democratic senators now a member of that body. To be sure, the elder Bruce sometimes puts aside partisanship, and goes his own gait when matters especially dear to his heart are before the senate, but he is an out and out democrat all the same, and the engagement has caused no end of political comment on that account.

Young Bruce is a lawyer and at present attached to the foreign department of the department of state. It is understood Bruce will be assigned to Rome with Italy as his headquarters and will be appointed vice consul. All of which will undoubtedly be acceptable to Miss Mellon, who is fond of society, has traveled much and is well equipped to fill the position of the bride of a young diplomat. Bruce is 28 years old and prominent as a clubman.

Among the biggest campaign primary fights for a seat in the senate will be that of Iowa in June, when nine candidates have filed for the nomination for the seat now held by Senator Cummins. Farm relief and prohibition form the chief issues in Iowa, and it is thought the great number of candidates will be an aid to the campaign of Cummins, who otherwise have faced Brookhart alone, on tickets other than democratic.

Brookhart will open the fight with blood in his eye, for he is by no means reconciled to having been ousted from his seat by the present senate. Cummins was excused from voting on the unseating of Brookhart, but that was not much of a sop to the anger of Brookhart, who is out after Cummins' scalp with all the vigor his fighting temperement can muster, and that's saying a good deal.

The trade commission this week made a decision along the lines of the Merritt truth in fabric bill, although not called by that name in the commission's report.

It seems that certain dealers have been introducing on the market what they call "Irish lace" but which is made in China. The commission said "Irish crochet lace acquired the reputation of being superior to other crochet lace long prior to the sale in this country of lace made in China."

Mrs. Rogers, member of congress from Massachusetts who introduced a bill for the benefit of war veterans seems to be about the only member of that body who expects additional pension bills to pass at this session.

Long ago Floor Leader Tilson stated that while many veterans were deserving of an increase of pensions he believed the Spanish war veterans pension bill would be the only one to pass this session.

HER WAISTED EFFORT

"A weak, delicate woman never in the world would have lived through it," insisted the girl who likes to talk. "Long before she had forced that money on its rightful owner she would have curled up like a withered leaf and expired! I had no idea being honest was such intense labor!"

"What are you being so honest about?" inquired the patient listener.

"It really was my Aunt Annie's honesty," she explained. "I was there when the delivery wagon left the 20 yards of chintz that had been sent c. o. d. for the sewing woman to make up into curtains and cushions. Uncle Horace had left his check for $45 to pay for it and when the boy muttered 'c. o. d. a dollarnahalf,' my Aunt Annie, who is a flighty, nervous soul, went completely floovy. 'But but,' she began extending the check for 40-odd. The boy regarded it totally uninterested. 'A dollanahalf,' he insisted, pointing to the c. o. d. slip. 'That's all I want!' Taking the dollarfifty I thrust into his paw he rushed off before Aunt Annie came to.

"I've got nearly $50 worth of goods for just a dollar or so!' she gasped, beginning to look around for police men with the law in their hands.

"It's too bad, when pleasant things like this happen to a person, that early upbringing arises and prevents one enjoying them,' I sighed. 'However, I am going downtown tomorrow and if you like I'll go and hand them their ill-deserved money,' and that's how it happened. I had about 15 minutes before I wanted to catch a train home when I approached the handsome young man in charge of the chintz. Modestly I told him my story and, extending the check, said 'I'd like a receipt and a dollar and a half back.

"He looked stunned. 'Will you please tell me that again?' he gasped. I did so. Putting a hand to his brow he beckoned another young man. 'Simmons,' he said fervently, 'this is the most extraordinary thing I ever heard happen! Please, madam, tell him about it!' So I told the story to Simmons. They stared unbelievingly at each other. Then with one voice they cried. 'The bookkeeping department! What do you know about that! Took the price of one yard instead of the extension! It never would have been known in the world! Madam, we certainly thank you!'

"They turned all the slips and the check upside down and over and over, meanwhile giving vent to little cries of amazement and disgust with the bookkeeping department. They would see about it and if I would just sit down and wait a minute or so—

"I looked at fifty bolts of cretonne, took notes of a dress I liked on a customer, yawned, found I'd missed the train and sat down. After a while the handsome young man rushed toward me with apologies. It was a shame I had been kept waiting, but he had had to telephone Mr. Phipps of the adjusting bureau, who would know all about it, and if I would kindly take these slips to Mr. Phipps, aisle eight, first floor, he would attend to it. Descending to the ground floor and searching out aisle eight and asking six persons where Mr. Phipps was hiding, I was told, after a conference, that I must want aisle eight in the State street side of the store. So I walked half a mile to that place, hunted aisle eight and an adjusting bureau, and asked for Mr. Phipps. Then, after another consultation, I was advised to go down to the bureau in the sub-basement. The third set of elevators I tackled went to the sublower regions—and, wandering about mail delivery rooms, steam pipes, telephones and bales of goods, I found the bureau and Mr. Phipps.

"You know all about this check for $45,' I began easily. 'No,' said Mr. Phipps, who was one of the acute, greyhound type of men. 'I was out—tell me!' So again I rehearsed the plot. 'I want a receipt in full!' I ended. 'H'm,' said Mr. Phipps, writing out one on the largest sheet of paper he could find. 'I should say you deserved the entire $45, my word!'

"Hours later I stopped in at Aunt Annie's and discovered I had in some way managed to lose the large and painstaking receipt.

"'Well, it doesn't matter, dear,' said Aunt Annie, who is delightfully vague about business matters. 'Losing it doesn't matter, because the same delivery boy came back today and I paid him the balance of the 45 and a half, so it's all right!' "—Exchange.

From Small Beginnings

Charles Hutton, the Self-Educated Measurer of the Earth

"Weigh the earth!" That was the simple order that was given to Charles Hutton in 1773. Such an order would puzzle most people. It would have puzzled some of the most learned in 1773, but it did not puzzle Charles Hutton, in spite of the fact that he had been born poor, that he had had to work for a living and that he had never been to college. Going to college is a convenience in the obtaining of an education; not a necessity.

The man who excusses his ignorance by saying: "I never had a chance to go to school or college," thereby acknowledges that he is unwilling to take the trouble to study by himself—as Abraham Lincoln studied, and as many great men have studied. Education comes from hard work, and where you do that work matters little.

Charles Hutton smiled when the Royal Society, the most learned society in England, asked him to weigh the earth. He went about the then great task with perfect happiness, and finally he presented his results. Weighing the earth was only one of the many great physical and mathematical problems that Charles Hutton worked out. He spent a long lifetime working over the mathematical problems involved in physics, and he, like Thomas Edison, of Nicola Tesla, or Guglielmo Marconi today, brought forth very important results.

This great mathematician was born in the coal mining region of northern England. His people were ordinary working people, with no known bent toward education. There was, so far as anyone could see, nothing whatever to turn Charles Hutton, the boy in the direction of learning. Something within himself moved him to read and to study. He sent himself to school, educated himself, and when he had to work for a living he started as a mere boy teaching school. He made very little pay, but he did an immense amount of hard study. In a few years he turned entirely to his favorite study—mathematics. As he could not make enough money by teaching, he united his learning with his broadwinding power and became a surveyor as well as a teacher. So he went on from year to year, always studying, with the result that at 26 he became a professor of his beloved mathematics in the great English Military school that corresponds to our own West Point. He became a member of the Royal Society and as such he weighed the earth. He died at 86, greatly honored by the world of science.

Stories That Recall Others

Oh, Woman!

A woman seemed much perplexed and in response to a question she said she had lost her tobacco pouch. She said she lost it in the street, apparently having dropped it while returning it to her pocket after "taking a chew."

A Forgetful Man

A certain prominent man is becoming alarmed over his increasing absentmindedness. The other day when he arrived at his office, his clerk asked him if he had remembered to bring certain papers from home.

"By George," he said, "that's what it was. I knew I was forgetting something when I left the house and I went back—and—well, I must have kissed my wife goodby a second time and I remember now that she laughed at me."

Today's Anniversaries

1868—The "farming out" of penitentiary convicts on Georgia was begun by Gen. Ruger.

1876—First game of polo in the United States was played at Jerome Park, New York.

1906—William A. Clark resigned his seat as United States senator from Montana, his election having been declared void.

1916—Premier Asquith informed the House of Commons that the government losses in the Irish revolt were 124 killed and 294 wounded.

1923—U. S. scout cruiser Omaha reached San Francisco from Honolulu in the record time of 5 days 3 hours and 40 minutes.

1924—The parliamentary elections in France resulted in defeat for Premier Poincare and the nationalists.

1925—The town of Mayo, in the Yukon territory, was almost entirely destroyed by fire.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The most discussed man of the moment in England is Arthur J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain. A boy who, at the age of 12, was working on a farm seven days a week for a wage of 50 cents, and educating himself during the little spare time he had, is now the guiding spirit of 1,000,000 organized miners and the most influential single factor in the present great industrial crisis. Mr. Cook was the son of a soldier and his infancy was passed in the atmosphere of the barracks. At 13 he was put to work on a farm, and at 16 he was a preacher in a Baptist chapel at Cooksley. Then he went to work in the mines in Rhondda Valley. He was doomed to spend 21 years in the pits, and in 1918 he was elected miners' agent for Rhondda. Two years ago he succeeded Frank Hodges as head of the great federation of miners. It is said of Mr. Cook, who is only 49 years of age, that he has never found time to play—not even a moment for a game of cards.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

Physician's Discovery Safely Reduces It to Normal and Dizzy Spells Disappear

Thousands who have dizzy spells, sleeplessness, nervousness, shortness of breath, pains in the head and impaired energy have been told by physicians or insurance examiners that they have high blood pressure. The serious results are well enough known to check it at once. High blood pressure caused by overtaxing the heart often brings on Bright's Disease, apoplexy and sudden death.

Norma reduces high blood pressure to normal. Often one bottle will do it. Many have so certified. It is a doctor's prescription that's harmless and is also much used by women at the changing time of life who usually have blood pressure there normal.

Johnny Chuck Gets into Mischief

What's mischievous to you, to me
Quite innocent may seem to be.
—Johnny Chuck.

Johnny Chuck sat up in the crotch made by the lowest limb of the young apple tree. It was a small tree. Probably he wouldn't have thought of climbing that tree had it not been that Chatterer the Red Squirrel had teased him until he lost his temper. Now as he sat there his temper was still lost. Isn't it funny how people talk about losing a temper? Really they don't mean that at all. No one with a lost temper has really lost it. In fact, the temper is very much in evidence. It was so with Johnny. He ground his teeth, he growled, he snarled up at Chatterer, who was clear at the top of the tree, as far up as he could get.

Johnny knew very well that he couldn't climb up there. He was too big. He couldn't hang on to those little branches the way Chatterer did. The knowledge that he couldn't get up there made him more angry than ever. Yes, sir, it did so. It made him so angry that he wasn't satisfied with just grinding his teeth. He felt that he must bite something. He was biting angry; that's what he was. Folks do get that way sometimes, especially the little folks who wear fur. He felt that if he could sink his teeth into something he would feel better.

Now, there wasn't a think for Johnny to bite but that young apple tree, so he bit the young apple tree. That is what he did, he bit the young apple tree. He just set his teeth right in and pulled off a big piece of bark. He didn't care much for that bark, although it wasn't bad tasting. He reached around and bit again. He was taking out his anger on that helpless young tree. By the time he felt better he had pulled off bark way around that young tree, and that meant that that young tree would die. You know that is what Peter Rabbit has sometimes done and what Danny Meadow Mouse has sometimes done in winter. They have gnawed the bark all the way around a young tree and the tree died. When bark is taken off a young tree in this way it is said to be girdled, and a girdled tree dies.

So Johnny Chuck had been in the very worst kind of mischief, although he didn't know it. He didn't know that tree would die. Probably he wouldn't have cared if he had known. But he hadn't known. It didn't enter his head that he had really hurt that tree. He had done it more to show Chatterer what he would do to him if he could only catch him. Chatterer continued to cling to the top of the tree and keep his mouth shut and his tongue still.

Johnny Chuck, having taken out on the poor young tree the anger which Chatterer had so provokingly aroused, felt better. He stopped growling. He stopped biting the tree. He stopped grinding his teeth. He looked up at Chatterer and grinned. He saw that Chatterer was anything but comfortable. This is what made him grin. He decided that he would make himself as comfortable as possible and keep Chatterer out there for a while. So there he sat and sat and sat, and up above him Chatterer clung and clung and clung.

They were both there when Farmer Brown's Boy came along. Johnny Chuck saw Farmer Brown's Boy the quite near, then he hopped down and scampered for home as fast as his long legs could take him. The last that Farmer Brown's Boy saw of him was a pair of black heels disappearing through that doorway. As for Chatterer, he jumped too, as soon as Johnny Chuck had jumped and away he went, chattering and scolding.

"Now, what," said Farmer Brown's Boy to himself, "was Johnny Chuck doing up in one of my young apple trees?"

The next story — Farmer Brown's Boy is Upset.

He just set his teeth right in and pulled off a big piece of bark

Little Talks on Th[rift]

SUDDEN WEALTH

One reads occasionally of spectacular fortunes being amassed over night. We hear frequently of some [man] who was poor a few years ago, but who is wealthy today.

These circumstances may cause many to feel that wealth and fortune come through some magical process. The truth is that we only hear of the outstanding cases. Where one man may be able, through shrewd manipulation or through a fortunate turn in affairs, to acquire a large sum of money without going through the slow, painstaking methods, there are a thousand others who are steadily advancing toward the goal of their success by the orderly processes of thrift.

It quite often happens that wealth disappears with the same apparent magic and with the same speed that it comes. It is contrary to all the laws of sound business that substantial fortunes come into being as the mushroom grows.

Hearing of these occasional instances of wealth suddenly acquired, may prove discouraging to those who, through thrift, are striving to get to a place of financial independence. But such discouragement is uncalled for. The thrifty man or woman is bound to succeed. Those who are courting success through spectacular methods may, of course, succeed but the odds are very much against them.

The majority of those who have built up fortunes laid the foundations of their success in thrift. They began by saving small amounts. They were, of course, tempted to put their money into schemes where fabulous returns might be obtained, but they chose the safer and soundar plan. Had they gone in for the larger and quicker returns they might have ended in complete personal failure.

No one can afford to take a chance in these matters. Successful plungers are few, but those who have succeeded through thrift are legion.

Even though ambition may point the way to wealth and fortune it will be only through thrift that you can be reasonably sure of arriving at this goal.—American Society for Thrift.

PREPARING TO POUR FIRST CEMENT ON NORWICH-NEW LONDON TURNPIKE

Preparations to pour the first slabs of concrete for the highway improvement on the Norwich-New London turnpike are being made at the city line in Thamesville. From there southerly a considerable stretch of the road down towards the sanatorium entrance is ready to have the concrete laid.

The easterly half of the roadbed will be laid first and on Monday the workmen of the contractor were placing the steel forms which are used at the sides and in the center of the road when the concrete is poured.

All stages of the work are underway on the 2 1-2 miles of construction from the city line to Mohegan hill, which this contract covers. Theb usiest spot is the upper part of Trading Cove hill where a steam shovel is at work biting into the bank on the easterly side and loading the dirt into trucks which cart it away and dump it for the shoulders farther down the hill. The big breast of rock and dirt on the westerly side of the hill has been cut back many feet and great quantities of rock have been blasted out. This provides the material for a long and lofty stone wall that is to be built to support the high bank on both sides of the road. At the present time the work has started on the stone wall on the westerly side there.

What has been done so far gives an idea of how the winding road up the hill is to be transformed into a fine piece of wide, straight highway.

A great quantity of crushed stone and sand for the cement work has been collected at De Wolf's.

COMPLETING 49 MILES OF HIGHWAY WORK

About forty-nine miles of new trunk line and state aid roads were under construction in Connecticut on April 1st, the state highway department announced Monday. This is work which was uncompleted when the winter weather prevented further construction.

Before cessation of the work became necessary last year, $912,030 had been paid to contractors, leaving a balance of $2,101,053 to be paid upon completion of the improvements. The cost of the four bridges will be, when completed, $66,050.

The work is divided into the following types: Concrete, 26.402 miles; water bound macadam 18.505 miles, bituminous macadam 2.400 miles, grading 1.630 miles.

Following is a list of the improvements: Canaan 2.215 miles, macadam: Hartland 2.773 miles, macadam; Sharon 3.103 miles, macadam; Torrington 1.797 miles concrete; Waterbury-Thomaston 1.257 miles, concrete; Greenwich .86 miles concrete; Westport 9.23 miles grading; Shelton .32 miles macadam; West Haven, bridge; Milford, bridge; Waterbury-Cheshire 5.58 miles, concrete; Cromwell 2.65 miles concrete; Southington 4.16 miles concrete; East Hampton .75 miles concrete; Norwich 2.76 miles concrete; Killingly 7.13 miles concrete; Franklin 3.47 miles concrete; Bozrah 3.02 miles macadam; Montville 3.93 miles macadam; Norwich 1.97 miles macadam; Killingly bridge; Roxbury 2.46 miles macadam; Bethel .81 miles macadam; Washington .54 miles macadam; New Hartford bridge.

SPARKS FROM BONFIRES THREATEN NEARBY GARAGES

Early Monday evening the fire department responded to a telephone call for several piles of burning leaves, etc., on a lot owned by J. W. Cadden on Broad street, opposite the old Porteous house. The bonfires had been left burning by the person who started them and neighbors feared that with the wind blowing garages and houses in the vicinity were in danger.

Department officials issued a warning Monday evening that people who burn rubbish should not leave the fires until they are out, especially on windy days. Sparks blown about are apt to set fire to nearby buildings and result in considerable fire loss.

PLAINFIELD DID HONOR TO DEPARTED CITIZEN

Business places in Plainfield were closed for an hour last Wednesday afternoon during the funeral of Edward N. Winsor, one of the best known and highly respected citizens of that community. Rev. William C. Prentiss officiated at the funeral and a quartette, consisting of James Boyle, Ray Greene, Sidney Mathewson, and Christopher Krauss, rendered "Saved By Grace" and "No Light There." There were 41 beautiful floral offerings. The bearers were Walter Lathrop, Ray Greene, Ralph Hopkins, Harold Lewis, Sidney Mathewson, and Christopher Krauss. Burial was in Evergreen cemetery, Central Village.

Mr. Winsor's death occurred as he slept a week ago Saturday night. He was born in Sterling, June 7, 1873, the son of Olney and Amanda Bennett Winsor. The family came to Plainfield when Edward was a small boy and his school days and life since have been spent in that village. He was at one time engaged with his father in the saw mill business, and for a short while worked on the railroad. Thirty years ago he started in a small way the bakery business which has grown and flourished from the unremitting attention which it received.

September 16, 1897, he married Miss Susan Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Ashley of Plainfield, who survives him. He leaves three children, Clarence, instructor of mathematics and athletic director at Wilbraham academy, Wilbraham, Mass.; Milton, who worked with his father; and a daughter, Marjorie who is employed in the office of the Lawton mills company. One son, Alfred, died on September 23, 1920, at the age of 20. He leaves also a sister Miss Carrie Winsor and a brother, Everett S. Winsor who was employed in the bakery business for Mr. Winsor.

Mr. Winsor was a kind husband and father, an upright business man, one whose going is a loss to the whole community.

POLICE WERE CALLED ON "DEAD" MAN ALARM

"Send a police officer to No. —— School street right away, some man has dropped dead there," said an excited feminine voice over the wire, shortly after 6 o'clock Monday evening as Captain Thomas F. Murphy picked up the receiver on police headquarters in response to a telephone call. Officer Peter Driscoll hurried in a private machine to the address given and the patrol wagon with Officer Patrick Murphy and Sergt. Matthew Delaney who were in Greeneville on a call, was diverted from Greeneville to the School street house.

Officer Driscoll, arriving on the scene, found an elderly man anxiously awaiting the arrival of the police. "He is inside the house and I can't get in because the door key won't work," said the anxious man. Officer Driscoll was endeavoring to unlock the door when the patrol wagon arrived on the scene.

Finding that the door couldn't be opened with the key, Sergt. Delaney raised a window on the front side of the house leading into the bedroom. As he was climbing into the room the "dead" man rolled over on his side and raising himself on his elbow looked askance at the officer.

"He is the liveliest dead man I ever saw," said Sergt. Delaney over his shoulder to his brother officers. The "dead" man got out of bed and after informing the officers that he wasn't dead, in fact very much alive, started for the sink to quench his burning thirst. A bottle quarter full of alcohol used for rubbing purposes, discovered on a dresser by the side of the bed was the answer to the "dead" man's predicament. He had indulged much too freely and failed to hear the insistent knocking of the elderly man who shares his room with him. As the "dead" man's partner knew he was in the room he took it for granted that his roommate had passed to the great beyond and hastened to have the police informed of the sad occurrence.

SPARKS FROM CHIMNEY CAUSED FIRE CALL

About 7.30 o'clock Monday evening Dr. N. B. Lewis built a fire in the fireplace at his home, No. 314 Main street. About 15 minutes later Officer Elmer Allen saw flames and sparks shooting from the chimney. He sent in a call to the fire department and the apparatus was quickly on the way.

Dr. Lewis was somewhat surprised when the firemen put in an appearance at the house. He explained that he had built a fire in the fireplace and that this was responsible for the flying sparks. There was no damage and the firemen returned to the central fire station.

DEVOTIONAL SERVICE OPENS LUTHERAN CONFERENCE HERE

A devotional service at the First Evangelical Lutheran church Monday evening opened the Connecticut district Lutheran conference, which will continue its session today (Tuesday) and Wednesday. About 40 delegates are expected for the conference, of which about 25 were here for the service Monday evening, these including pastors and laymen from over a dozen churches in Connecticut. The attendance of members of the local church made a congregation that filled the building.

The services were carried on in the German language and the confessional admonition was given by Rev. H. Sasse of Berlin, Germany. The sermon was by Rev. H. C. Bosch, president of the New York conference, who spoke from the text John 2.5 Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it. The preacher brought out the thought that Jesus had not ceased to command his disciples when he left this earth but his commands are just as real as they were to his followers when he was still with them in person. The disciples, he said, were always conscious of his divine presence and the work of the Christian church always has been carried on as it under the direction of the Master's will and as though he had personally commanded and they had obeyed. Otherwise there would be little justification for the extensive missionary work which has been carried on in the past and even up to the present day. The development of missionary work in Europe, in ancient France, among the Anglo-Saxons and in the wild steppes of Russia could not be justified except by the command of Christ. The work of the reformation of the sixteenth century ought not to be attributed to be attributed to the whim or the idea of an individual but as brought about by the consciousness in the mind of Dr. Martin Luther that he heard the call of God and obeyed. And as the work of the church is obedience to the command of God, so must the individual Christian life be a response to that command.

Rev. O. Heldenreich of Hartford and Rev. Paul A. Kirsch of Meriden, president of the Connecticut conference led the order of services, and the three pastors conducted the communion service for the delegates to the conference.

This (Tuesday) morning at 9 o'clock the business session of the conference will open. In the afternoon a lecture will be given in English by Rev. Henry Moehling of Philadelphia, Pa., upon the topic, Week-day Religious Education. In the evening at 7.45 the official service of the conference will be held. A sermon in English will be delivered by Rev. H. Mackensen, secretary of the Lutheran Orient mission. The sermon in German will be by Rev. J. A. W. Kirsch, of Jersey City, N. Y.

The main feature of the Wednesday morning meeting will be a report on Wagner college by Rev. F. Luther of Staten Island and an address by Rev. H. Bruechner, D. D., president of the Lutheran Seaman's mission, Hoboken, N. J. The conference will come to a close about noon Wednesday.

The ladies aid society will serve dinner and supper for the conference and the delegates are entertained at the homes of members of the church.

The delegates are from churches in Hartford, Rockville, South Manchester, New Britain, Waterbury, Terryville Naugatuck, Seymour, Torrington, New Haven, Bridgeport, Shelton and Bristol.

CHAPLIN

Mrs. Mary Phillips was a visitor with Mrs. Carrie Hemenway a few day the past week.

The basket of beautiful carnations in church Sunday were in memory of Mrs. William M. Smith.

There is much dissatisfaction that the new concrete state road is being constructed east of the village. A long petition was sent to the state road officials but it has been turned down and the wishes of property owners through the villages ignored. The people do not like to have the pleasant village sidetracked in this way.

SUSIE LEARNS MORE ABOUT AUTOS, ROADS, TRAFFIC AND MOTOR JOYS

Since Susie has been learning to drive an automobile she has taken notice of quite a few things pertaining to roads, traffic and speed and in her letter she comments freely on them. Her letter follows:

Dear Sports Ed: Gosh ain't it funny how different things look from a auto than they do from the sidewalk What I means is that once I thought everybody what drove a auto was a roadhog and that us pedestrines was bein given only half a chance. But now I knows that it ain't always the auto driver what's to blame if they's a accident.

Well Ed, I can get along pretty good now without no male chaperone to see that I does things right. Yep I got one of them slips of paper what tells your age, how tall you is and the color of your eyes and a lotta bunk like that what you pay five bucks for. I goes up to the court-house last week and meets that stule cop what says whether you can drive or not. Well I goes in and he gives me a card to fill out and I fills it out the best I can, but I guess it ain't so good 'cause when I hands it to the state cop he looks at it and says I thought you had some brains but I guess you aint. Course I don't answer so cop anyways but perlite so I says yes sir.

Well here's what I puts on that card in answer to them questions. the first question was what is your age so I writes 20 years and blushes when I puts down them figgeers. Your sex? and I writes unmarried girl. Height and I writes tall. Weight and I writes lightweight but I can get down to the featherweight class by hard trainin. The next question is to state the number of miles you have operated a automobile Now I didn't want that good lookin' cop to think I was any greenhorn at drivin' a car so I writes $00.000 miles. I guess I musta put down a couple miles too much 'cause he says to me "You has drived quite a lot ain't you?" I says, Yep, quite lot. He says how long you been driving a car and I says 'oh about a coupla weeks. He kinda gasps for air and looks at the figures again and says "My Gawd girl but you sure has been burning up them roads. Your statement says you has drive 300,000 miles and you say you did it in two weeks. Young woman you has set a world's record." Well maybe that didn't swell me up when I finds I has set a record.

Well the next question is "Have you any mental or phisical defect?" My answer was "Ma says no, but the neighbors say I have." "What is it?" the next question and my answer is "Charleston knees." Then the card asks has I read the motor vehicle laws and I writes "No but I'll get 'em at the library when I get time." Well they's a lotta other foolish questions about being convicted and havin' your lisense rebuked that I don't answer at all. Well I kids the cop along an' I gets a ticket what's says I can operate a car and I am a real driver now. Ed.

By gosh ain't it funny just when I gets so's I can show Bert Lamphere that I can drive a car they takes him off bein' traffic cop and puts up one of them mechanical things with lights. Course us experienced drivers don't have no trouble 'cause when it says red we stops and when it says green we goes. That's simple ain't it. 'Course then ain't the sport in it as when they is a traffic cop on the corner. You can't sneak up on the cop and blow your horn just to see him jump and there ain't the chance that some cop will get excited and run two cars together. No, there ain't the sportin' chanceww ith the new signal that there is with a nervous cop. Still if we wants safety and smooth workin' traffic that signal does the work. I'll miss wavin to the cops and havin' them try to guess what I mean and I'll miss havin' 'em wave at me.

Say Ed, didja ever drive down West Thames street over that lonely road. By 'onely road I mean that strip between the car tracks. It's lonely 'cause nobody seems to own it and it ain't got nobody to care for it. I don't blame nobody for not claiming it 'cause I wouldn't want nobody to say I own such a rotten road. Somebody says the city owns it and somebody says the trolley company owns it and I bet neither one of them wants it. If the trolley company owns it somebody oughta tell 'em to fix it and if the city owns it, folks in town ought a proprikate enough money to fix it with cement. Gosh I rid over that road and now I got corns and a busted spring on my car. Oh boy you don't have to go to no Ireland to find rocky roads. I says to the boy friend why don't somebody fix the road and he says maybe they will when they get enouch equipment for the street department to do the work. He says he knows a feller what works for the streets commissioner and they need a lotta new equipment if they is goin' to keep the roads like people wants 'em to

Well Ed I gotta lotta things off my chest what has been botherin me for a couple weeks and I has learned a lot since I has drived a automobile I ain't got so I can drive as fast as them fellers what drive the West Side fire wagon flash them boys to eten on the run when goin' to a fire I sees 'em Monday come tearin down Main street what's one way and goin' like the devil one after em and helluva me Ed he'll hafta or come to catch them bobies Gosh Ed I ain't much at seein' a prayer but I sure did pray nobody come around Broadway corner when they was comin' 'cause there was sure goin to be a crash.

I see them Academy kids won another game. Now if them kids don't get re swelled head, like kids is apt to they gotta have a good season Hmr tell 'em for me that they ain't no team that's as good it can't be beat. Inflation of the head is one of the worst things that happens to ball teams and when they is inflicted with this disease they might as well hang up the old uniforms. A swelled headed ball player is as useful to a ball team as a pair of green glasses is to a blind man.

Well Ed, take care.

SUSIE.

MEMBER OF YALE VARSITY BREAKS WRIST

NEW HAVEN, May 1—(AP)—The second member of the Yale varsity crew which won over Pennsylvania and Columbia at Derby Saturday, was lost tonight, when Arnold Hawley Peterson of Queens, L. I., b w of the varsity boat, broke his wrist cranking an automobile. He will be incapacitated for at least five weeks.

A jinx in the form of a mild epidemic of German measles threatened the crew last week and cost the varsity R. C. Durant of Hartford. Durant and Peterson, considered two of the strongest men in the crew will be a serious blow to Yale's future strength. No officia announcement of Peterson's successor has been made, but followers of the crew look to Henry B. Mosle, New York city bow of the junior varsity, to take his place.

Peterson attended the Olympics in 1924 as a substitute, rowed in the varsity last year and also this season. His work last Saturday was spoken of as a strong factor in Yale's strength.

BOSTON, May 10—(AP)—One big inning allowed Cleveland to make it three out of four in the series with the Red Sox and the visitor took the final encounter 5 to 0 here today. RHINOCK WINS FEATURE RACE AT CHURCHILL DOWNS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 10.—(AP)—Rhinock came out of the west to win the Derby trial, feature race at Churchill Downs today. He took Banco Suivi in the last 70 yards and his time for the mile was 1:39. Malcolm S., Jr., was third and American Son fourth.

The Prince Pal-Rose of Rose colt, off to a slow start, was cut off twice but got up to win going away. Banco Suivi set a fast pace for the first three quarters and held on gamely. It was the first start as three year olds of the colts. Malcolm S., Jr., will up in the first half mile, surrendered to Rhinock after a struggle in the stretch. American Son ran an even race.

Four other Derby eligibles, Spanish Ley, Smiling Gus, Bolton and Token finished in the order named. Rhinock was a 1 to 3 favorite.

Generally considered a certain starter in the Kentucky Derby next Saturday, Rhinock, by his race today, will win a place at the post, barring accidents. Banco Suivi looks eligible to be entered as a pace maker for his stablemates, Bubbling Over and Bagenbaggage. None of the others looks to be good enough for the issue.

Teak, a Derby eligible, won a six furlong sprint for fillies and mares in the handy time of 1:12 4-5.

Warriors vs. Saints

The Warriors and St. Joseph's club baseball teams will meet in a twilight game at the Academy Campus Wednesday evening. Each team will use its strongest lineup in an effort to win.

RANK OUTSIDER WINS FAMOUS PREAKNESS AT PIMLICO TRACK

BALTIMORE, May 10—(AP)—A rank outsider dealt won the Preakness, Maryland's historic classic at 1 mile and three sixteenths today.

W. S. Salmon's colt Display almost completely overlooked by the railbirds at the pari-mutuels booths, swept through to an impressive victory in the 50th renewal, nipping Harry Payne Whitney's Blondin by a head. The few betters who backed the Salmon entry were rewarded at the rate of $40.70 for each $2 mutuel ticket. Display's time was 1:58 4-5.

Mars, a Man-o-War colt from the Walter M. Jeffords stable, was a close third with Dress Parade fourth. Little more than a length separated the four leaders at the wire. Canter, the Maryland favorite and Beggenbaggage, a Kentucky entry, a heavily backed favorite were shuffled back in the pack, although Canter had held the lead for a mile of the distance.

Canter and Rockman, another Maryland colt, rounded the first turn neck and neck and passed the grandstand with a two length lead over the field, with Dress Parade leading the trailers. Racing through the back stretch the pair increased their lead to four lengths over all but Dress Parade, who hung on doggedly.

As the colts sped around the last turn the race tightened as Blondin drove to the front with Display jus behind as Canter and Rockman weakened.

Display disposed of the Whitney horse handily in the race for the wire with Mahlen wielding the whip. He raced at the wire and Display was the winner by a head with apparently plenty of reserve.

More than 30,000 persons witnessed the classic, which with 12 starters was worth $53,615 to the winner. It was the second richest Preakness stake. Nellie Morse won $54,000 for Bud Fisher in 1924. Fourteen colts and one filly originally were scheduled to go under the barrier. Lee Rosenberg withdrew his Ingred, the lone filly, early in the afternoon, and Montereant was scratched by the Sagamore stable, just before post time. The colts carried 126 pounds.

ACADEMY TRACK TEAM MEETS WESTERLY AT CAMPUS TODAY

The Academy track team will entertain the Westerly track and field team this afternoon at the campus in a dual meet. Since the meet with Chapman Tech Coach Whitney has had his men smoothing out some of the rough spots that showed up in the first meet, and it is expected that they will give Westerly plenty of opposition especially in the dashes and in the runs. In Armstrong, Courbois, Waters and Kramer the Academy is well represented in the track events and it takes fast men to break the tape ahead of them. The field events are where the Academy is weak although Gulomb, Disco Krohn and Mousley are showing up well.

The Westerly team comes with a good reputation although they have not had the weather advantages of the local school during their training. The meet is scheduled for 2 o'clock D. S. T. The following are entered for the Academy:

220 yard hurdle—Armstrong, Courbois, Moore, Fallows.

440 yard run—Disco, Waters, Palmer and McCluggage.

100 yard dash—Armstrong, Courbois, Krohn and Grover.

Shot put—Gulomb, Kramer, McCluggage, Schwartz.

220 yard dash—Armstrong, Courbois, Krohn and Grover.

Broad jump—Mousley, Greene, Waters, Armstrong.

One mile run—Kramer, Waters and Vec.

Javelin throw—Woods, Waters, Lavine and Mousley.

880 yard run—Moore, Palmer and McCluggage.

High jump—Sullivan, Fallows, McCluggage, Armstrong, Mousley.

Pole vault—Krohn, Mousley, Disco.

880 yard relay—Courbois, Krohn, Disco, Armstrong.

HAGEN-FARRELL EXHIBITION DRAWING STATE WIDE INTEREST

That the coming eighteen hole exhibition between Walter Hagen and Johnny Farrell at the Norwich Golf club is attracting state-wide interest is manifest in the number of inquiries and reservations for tickets being made by golf clubs all over the state. The match will take place next Sunday afternoon at the Norwich Golf club and the tee-off will be at 2 o'clock. Those who have seen neither Hagen nor Farrell come to see two masters of the game perform but those who have seen both come for a far different reason.

Hagen, recognized as the premier golfer of America, must give way some day to youth. Will this youth be Johnny Farrell the Quaker Ridge pro and one of the greatest medal players of the game? This is a question that golfers will try to decide for themselves in watching the mat on next Sunday. Hagen goes on year after year in that same steady way of his playing brilliant golf and bowing to defeat but few times in a year. Farrell is of the younger school and has been coming steadily to the front in golf during the past two years. Last year he sprang into national prominence when he came within one stroke of being national open champion at Worcester. Since then the eyes of the golfing world has been upon him and many predict that he will not be denied the national honor for long.

It is for comparison that many will attend the match Sunday and there will be still others who will attend simply to see "how a champion does it." No matter what the reason it is certain that all will be well repaid.

There will be a touch of collegiate color in the match for paired with Farrell is Captain Waddell of the Yale golf team and paired with Hagen is Captain Stimpson of the Harvard team. Old swads will follow the youngsters with no little interest and although there will be no Yale and Harvard cheering sections the old college spirit will be silently manifest.

ANOTHER OUTSIDER WINS FEATURE AT JAMAICA

NEW YORK, May 10.—(AP)—Racetrack followers, upset by the unexpected victory of Mirador, 10 to 1 shot, in Saturday's Kings county handicap, received another staggering blow today at the Jamaica track when James Butler's Pique, quoted at 12 to 1, captured the Rainbow handicap.

The Rancocas entry, Silver Fox and Superietta, ruled strong favorites, the former being quoted at 1 to 7, but Pique, off to a good start, was never headed.

Earl Sande, piloting Silver Fox, saved his old until the stretch. After running last over most of the six furlong journey, Silver Fox made a game attempt to move up on the outside of the field. The Rancocas favorite closed some ground, but was unable to overtake Morgenthau finishing in second place, half a length behind the winner, and Silver Fox third.

WESTERLY

SON TESTIFIES AGAINST MOTHER IN ALIENATION SUIT

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 10. — The second week of the April term of superior court for Washington county was begun in the Westerly court house Monday at 10:45, when in the Westerly trial calendar the suit of Edward A. Greene vs. William H. Northup was taken up before Associate Justice Antonio A. Capotosto and a jury. The case is brought by E. A. Green of North Kingstown, against William H. Northup of West Warwick for the alienation of his wife's affections.

Previous to the empaneling of a jury, Judge Capotosto announced that, as far as he knew, he would be in Westerly for the next three weeks. Just before the spare jurors were excused to report this (Tuesday) morning at 10:45, the judge asked how many jurymen were finding it difficult and inconvenient to attend court. He said that he had a leeway to excuse four or five but had to keep 23 or 24 to carry on the court business.

Charles M. Tallman, a railroad man from North Kingston, said he was in charge of seven or eight workmen, had to go to Providence daily and his superiors were asking him how long he would be detained. Judge Capotosto excused him.

Joseph W. Holberton, a farmer of South Kingston, said he was doing his farm work alone at a busy time of year, he was excused. John E. Waldbana, a mill employe of South Kingston, claimed to work in the Peace-dale mill and said when he returned he would have to run his winding machine to catch up. The judge told him that he himself had to "catch up" when he returned home, so he was also excused.

Clement D. Tallion, mill hand, of Westerly, said that although he had no particular reason, he also would like to be excused. His frank statement caused his being excused and the four men were paid for services, and allowed to go, but Antonio Nardone, foreman for construction, of Westerly, having been drawn on the panel was told to apply when the case was added.

The jury was empanel as follows: Frederick A. Lane, retired, South Kingston; Robert D. Lewis, dresser tender, South Kingston; Arthur B. Ladd, real estate agent, North Kingston; Nelson Lafreniere, barber, North Kingston; Antonio Nardone, building foreman, Westerly; Thomas W. Nye, clerk, Hopkinton; Robert M. Mills, auto driver, Charlestown; Edward Donnelly, clerk, Narragansett; John H. Carpenter, farmer, Narragansett; Allan C. Whitford, accountant, Westerly and Warren A. Tucker, farmer, Hopkinton. Allan C. Whitford was made foreman.

For the plaintiff, Judge Watts said that it would be shown that defendant had alienated his wife's affections; that when defendant first called he brought his wife, but later called alone. Because of the transfer of affections the wife had left plaintiff and had gone to live with defendant, and that no cause or reason had been given except the whole reason—enticement.

Edward A. Greene, formerly a fireman, now keeper of a gentleman's estate, plaintiff and the first witness, said that he had lived in North Kingston 35 years. On April 6, 1905 (on the certificate, he said the date had been changed by him to 1905 by agreement between his wife and himself), he married in North Attleboro, Mass., Gertrude M. Parker (Smith) it being her second marriage. From Massachusetts they had gone to Hamilton, R. I., where they had resided for 20 years. Dec. 9, 1922, his wife left him and had gone with their sons to live in Crompton and Arkwright, R. I. On visiting the house there he declared that May 1924 Northup had "got up out of a chair and started for him." On cross examination by Attorney Murphy, Greene said that when his wife left him he had gone to the "Sand Hole", in North Kingston where he said he boarded and where liquor was sold. He claimed never to have abused his wife and not to have gotten drunk on an average of more than once a month. He said that when his last child was four days old he was at the firemen's fair at Brockton.

Fred Green, a son, testified to Northup co-habiting with his mother, William H. Northup, the defendant, employed as a carpenter at Scituate reservoir, testified that they had had no improper relations. He said that his son married Mrs. Greene's daughter and that they all lived as one family.

When Mrs. Henry M. Clarke was burning paper at her home, 27 Highland avenue, Monday morning about 10 o'clock, some of the burning paper passed up the chimney. As but little wind was blowing the burning paper fell back upon the shingle roof, igniting it in two places. She telephoned her husband, who was downtown at the time, after being notified by a neighbor and was directed by him to have the fire alarm rung in. A bell alarm was sounded from box 27, Highland avenue at Rathbun's drive, and the apparatus of the Westerly fire department responded. Ladders were raised to the roof and the fire was put out with the use of chemicals. The fire not having burned through the roof, the loss was slight.

Samuel Bailey of Pawcatuck was in Providence Monday.

Frederick J. Hardwick of Taunton, Mass., where he is a heater manager, was a week end visitor in Westerly, going to Ashaway to visit Mrs. D. A. Stoddard, who is ill there.

Samuel W. Throop of Lebanon Green, returned to Norwich Monday, having been a Westerly visitor during the past week.

Westerly Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossi appeared before the weekly meeting of Westerly highway commissioners, Charles F. Berry, Elihu H. Cheseboro and Harvey C. Perry, at the office of the highway commission in Westerly town hall during the week. In attendance were Engineer A. L. Leon and clerk Mrs. William R. Wilcox. Inspector Rossi stated that following a meeting of the zoning commission held last Thursday to act on a building permit asked for by David Novogrod, to erect a business structure, on the site of the old Dr. J. Howard Morgan house at 43 High street, he had been asked to come before the highway commission, to see what action it would take in the widening of High street. Mr. Rossi said that High street was only 48 feet wide, where a 70 foot highway was desired with 10 foot sidewalks on each side. To make this width, he explained that approximately 16 feet would have to be taken into the street from the Novogrod property. As the Novogrod architect's plans called for 140 foot depth for a limestone building for theatre use, to get this depth, provided the land was taken into the highway, the 16 feet from Wilcox park land, would probably be asked for. The widening of High street met with the approval of the highway commissioners, but it was their opinion that the park trustees of the Library association should be met. On recommendation of Commissioner Cheseboro, it was left that a joint meeting be arranged this week between the Library association trustees, the Westerly zoning board and the highway commission. The park trustees hold a regular meeting Wednesday of this week and the matter will probably come before them at that time.

Samuel H. Davis came before the highway commission with plans for approval of the layout of four sections of "Weekapaug Beach park, or Winnapaug Hills," along the Shore road, and the commission considered the proposed street and boulevard widths.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

Building activities in Norwich and vicinity showed an increasing improvement over the previous week and with continued fair weather there is every indication that considerable work will be accomplished on projects now under construction. As yet Norwich contractors are not faced with any labor difficulties but in New London there are wage difficulties between the contractors and laborers. Practically all the local contractors are busy at the present time although there are few large projects in view. The larger part of the construction work is on smaller buildings of the frame type. Frame garages take the lead in the new construction with only a very few new houses being contracted for so far this year.

It is expected that the construction work outside the city will be heavier this year than in the city. Already much excavation work has been done for new dwelling houses to be erected. Several new houses in the East Great Plain district are under way and at Norwich Town there is a noticeable activity in the construction work. Another section that is fast building up is that part of Montville through which runs the Norwich-New London highway. Several new houses have been erected near Mohegan hill and several are now under construction.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were nine sales of real estate as compared to 23 sales for the corresponding week in 1925. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $36,800 and $84,500.

In New London during the past week the sales of real estate numbered eight exactly the same number as reported for the corresponding week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $61,833 and $92,800.

State Building Permits

As shown by the totals of building permits issued in the cities and towns of this state covered by The Commercial Record during the past week the rate of building activity in Connecticut has increased substantially and is considerably in excess of the high pace set in May 1925. There were 554 permits issued during the week for construction work estimated to cost $2,163,200 compared with a total of 416 permits for the like week a year ago, when the projected work was estimated to cost $1,631,956.

New London

With about 120 union carpenters out on strike since Monday, and several of the largest contractors of the city standing firm in their refusal to give the increase demanded by the carpenters, construction was considerably slowed up during the past week.

Carpenter work on the new Garde building in State street and the extensive alteration work to the Connecticut Power Co. power house in Water street is practically at a standstill. Other work in these two major constructions was progressing rapidly, however, and no serious setback is anticipated at either job.

The contractors acceded to the demand of the masons for a 10 cent increase per hour, the new rate going into effect Monday. In view of the fact that there is usually but little masonry work in the majority of local construction work, the increase granted the masons has but little effect in the cost of most construction. It is estimated that the increase of the masons' increases the cost of laying brick about 10 cents per hundred brick laid or $1 per thousand.

Contractors will face another local demand for an increase in wages next Thursday when the painters will demand 15 cents an hour more than their present rate.

The plumbers will demand an increase May 20. At the present there is no indication of how the future demands will be met.

The foundation is being finished for the new two-story frame cottage being built for Henry H. Coogan in Fitch avenue. Plans call for a structure 24 by 26.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

Norwich people with others from eastern Connecticut enjoyed excursions to New York city 75 years ago and enjoyed hearing the gifted singer, Jenny Lind.

Other items of interest in those days, taken in part from the files of the Norwich Courier of 1851 are republished as follows:

Tuesday, May 6, 1851—A number of Norwich people are planning to go on one of the grand excursions this week and hear Jenny Lind in one of her wonderful concerts at Castle Gardens. Trips have been planned for Wednesday evening and Thursday morning, giving Norwich people an opportunity to hear this gifted singer and return to Norwich in the same day. Concerning Jenny Lind Norwich people learned authentically today that she received $1,000 out of every $6,000 of the gross receipts from her concerts. In her Philadelphia concerts her share was $6,000 and all of it went to charity. Thus is this gifted singer spreading cheer in this country, entertaining those who can afford to pay to hear her sing, yet giving of her income to those who are in need.

The New London, Willimantic and Palmer railroad is now making six trips daily out of Norwich, three for passengers, while several other trips are possible by use of the combination train, freight and passenger.

The ship Surprise has arrived at San Francisco from New York, having made the trip in 96 days, the fastest trip on record.

In compiling the records of those killed or injured during the year 1850 it is noted that two men were killed and two men injured on the Norwich and Worcester line during the year. The grand total for the country is 44 killed and 34 severely injured during the year. Out of those killed but three were passengers, while 11 were brakemen, killed mostly when struck when trains were passing beneath bridges.

Thursday, May 8, 1851—The Norwich Courier has received word that Governor Seymour has been reelected by a majority of four votes, although other stories have given it as a vote of one majority. Just what the actual figures are, or how the hocus pocus work won the victory for him, the Courier is not able to state just at this time.

The steamboat Knickerbocker, on her trip from Norwich to New York Tuesday night had a nice little number of about 1,200 passengers aboard, besides any quantity of freight. The Connecticut also had a very large passenger list last night.

All indications are that South Carolina will secede from the union before the southern rights convention, now in session at Charleston, comes to a close. Speeches made during the two days past have all been along the line of secession.

Saturday, May 10, 1851—Governor Seymour's majority was one vote it has now been determined, this having been brought about when Mr. Eldredge of Groton voted against Foster. This came as a great surprise as he was elected with the entire loco foco vote against him, really winning by vote of the whig party, against which he voted when the fight for governorship arrived. Other whig candidates for officers were elected by majorities of at least four votes. Governor Seymour in his message to the people of the state says that the balance in the state treasury is now $32,000, the original balance of about $26,000 having been increased by receipts since the beginning of the present fiscal year.

The success of the Jenny Lind excursions to New York this week has been so great that more are promised for the coming week. Over 2,000 people from eastern Connecticut went to New York this week to hear this gifted singer and it seems possible that fully twice that number are waiting for an opportunity to go to New York to hear her sing.

Henry Bill is calling for young men with school teaching experience to travel and sell his publications. This occupation he claims is not only profitable but afford the young men an opportunity to travel in various sections of the country as he has territories open in every section of the United States.

Teeth Made White -Glorious, Gleaming

Please accept 10-day tube to try

Your gums like coral to contrast them—just remove that dingy film, see what happens.

• • •

Modern dental science now has found a way that restores "off-color" teeth to clearness, that gives toneless gums a healthy coral tint.

Famous movie stars use this way before going on a scene. That's why movie smiles glisten so. Leading dentists urge it widely. For it protects the teeth and firms tender gums.

It is called Pepsodent—a new-type tooth paste that works by removing the dingy film coat from teeth that old-time dentifrices did not clear off successfully. That's why brushing fails you.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you'll feel that film. A slippery coating that absorbs discolorations and keeps your teeth off color, that breeds bacteria by the millions and invites tooth decay, gum troubles and pyorrhea.

Remove it and you will be amazed at what you see. Discard old ways now. Get Pepsodent at any drug store. Or send coupon for 10-day tube to try.

NEW LONDON FIRE DEPATMENT AIDS IN SUBDUING LEE RESIDENCE BLAZE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 10—Seven cottages and the Hotel Griswold, Eastern Point, were threatened with destruction by fire this afternoon when a lively blaze was discovered in the residence of Mrs. Rosalie Hubbard Lee which has been occupied by Mrs Lee and her mother, Mrs. Charles L. Hubbard formerly of Norwich. So threatening did the blaze become that aid was requested of the New London department Deputy Fire Chief Thomas Shipman and the Nameaug engine company responding. The Lee residence was badly damaged but the other cottages did not become ignited, nor did the hotel, in spite of a high wind.

The fire it is believed, originated from an exploding acetylene gas pipe and when discovered had gained great headway. The cellar was a mass of flames which had reached the partitions of the first floor.

A maid in the employ of Mrs. Lee discovered the fire and ran to the hotel wharf where she summoned assistance from the crew of a United States Coast Guard patrol boat, which was moored there. The crew used fire extinguishers obtained from the hotel and cottages but so great was the intensity of the flames that the fire continued to rage. An alarm was sent in summoning the Pioneer Hose company, Groton's fire fighting equipment, but on the arrival of the firemen and with the other cottages and hotel threatened the call for assistance was made upon New London. When Deputy Chief Shipman and the engine company reached the fire several streams of water were poured into the burning building and after two hours of hard work the fire was extinguished. What the damage will be it is not known, but it will probably reach $10,000 if not more.

The residence is on the shore road, directly south of the hotel and faces New London harbor. The place was recently equipped with all modern conveniences for cooking and underwent extensive alterations prior to its occupancy by the owner and her mother, who recently returned from California.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broad Theatre

A three million dollar setting! Such is the background for "The Unguarded Hour," First National's latest Milton Sills' starring picture which comes to the Broad theatre on Wednesday and Thursday.

The set is the magnificent Commodore C. M. Benedict estate at Greenwich, Conn. This estate has long been known as one of the real show places of Long Island sound. Following the commodore's death four years ago the place was closed and since then its only occupants have been the caretaker and a staff of ground keepers.

First National offers an unusually talented cast in "The Unguarded Hour," Sills has the starring role. Doris Kenyon is the feature feminine player. Supporting this brilliant pair are Jed Prouty, Claude King, Dolores Cassinelli, Cornelius Keefe, Vivia Ogden, Lorna Duveen and Charles Beyer. "The Unguarded Hour" was produced under the supervision of Emil Hudson.

Lecture by Dr. Emily Burr

Under the auspices of the Norwich neuropsychiatric clinic committee a lecture is to be given this (Tuesday) afternoon at 3 o'clock at Slater hall annex by Dr. Emily Burr, director of the vocational adjustment bureau for girls in New York city. In the general invitation issued it is stated that Dr. Burr's talk will be particularly for those who are interested in the girl who does not easily adjust herself into an ordinary group. Dr. Burr has developed some new tools for better work with this kind of girl. She will tell about the work done and possibilities of adapting these methods to smaller towns. The lecture is open to the general public.

Palace Theatre

For all brides and grooms, and for those who have dodged matrimony, there is an entertaining film sermon at the Palace theatre, where "His Jazz Bride," a Warner Bros. classic of the screen, opened Sunday. Matt Moore and Marie Prevost are starred in this story of a frivolous wife who, after nearly wrecking her marital happiness, repents and reforms.

This screen version of the Beatrice Burton novel, "The Flapper Wife," which ran in serial form in the leading newspapers throughout the country, gives Miss Prevost an opportunity to prove herself a dramatic actress as well as a comedienne. Mr Moore, as the overworked and overworried young husband, hands another scalp to his impersonations of the outwardly shy and inwardly seething young man. The supporting cast is excellent, the story moves along at a gay and rapid pace to a powerful climax and it is only after the performance is over that you realize you have been entertained and lectured at the same time.

The cast of "His Jazz Bride," directed by Herman Raymaker includes John Patrick, Gayne Whitman, Don Aivarado, Mabel Julienne Scott, Geo. Irving and Margaret Seddon. The scenario is by Charles Logue.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

$10 PRICE REDUCTIONS ON CHRYSLER "SEVENTIES"

Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler corporation, announced the most remarkable price reductions in the history of his company effective at midnight May 8. These reductions are on the six-cylinder "Seventy" model and range from $50 to $200. Mr Chrysler adds to his announcement that in the accomplishment of these lower prices there is absolutely no change in engineering or manufacturing specifications or in equipment, but that the reductions have been made possible by a tremendous increase in the company's six-cylinder production. Retail deliveries of the Chrysler "Seventy" for the first quarter have been 31 per cent greater than for the same period a year ago, with orders on hand assuring even greater increases in the coming quarters.

Broadway Theater

What was termed as one of the most entertaining programs of Keith-Albee vaudeville attractions of the season opened at the Broadway theater yesterday and remains through Wednesday. It is snappy, good, clean and funny all through.

Jean Carpentier, a versatile Miss romps through a musical diversion with songs. She is exceedingly clever and made a solid hit.

Lewis and Maxine, two youthful artists were brimful of mirth, melody and dance. Their's is a slightly different and novel offering well deserving of praise.

Bessie Rempell and Billy Howard in Brown Stone Fronts went after fun, song and dance for all there is to be had out of these things and the result was oodles of entertainment.

The Farrells are two of the finest Italian character comedians that have ever appeared in a local theater. Crossfire comedy patter that is new and original kept the house in roars of laughter.

The Dubois Trio, an European novelty turn with three men holding the stage, proved a relief from the usual run of this class of novelty entertainment.

Hairpins, combs, buttons and other objects on the floor are nuts witnesses after every performance at the Broadway theater, this week, of the laugh tornadoes sweeping over the audiences upon viewing "What Happened to Jones," the latest Universal-Jewel rib-tickler, which continues through Wednesday.

The hero, Tom Jones, is portrayed by the one and only Reginald Denny. With every succeeding picture this star emerges with a stronger hold on movie fans and in this one he has not failed his admirers.

POETRY

My Mother

Who trudged me to my school beside
As in her arms she bore my boy,
And made me love her more for her
When she was young and sorry and gay?

Who watched me in my chambers quiet
And vigilance that I was true,
Who prayed to God my youth would shun
Upon the as in dreams I flew?

Who taught me lisp those tiny prayers
Lin my poor heart still pleased keep,
That little verse which runs like this:
"Now I lay me down to sleep"?

And as the days and years went on,
And I to manhood grew to be,
Who always had a kindly word,
A loving smile and kiss for me?

When aged and bent, who still was dear
To me, as in those days gone by;
Whom did I watch with tender care,
As she had me, in days before?

And when, in death, she passed away,
And I gazed on her lifeless form,
For whom did I then drop a tear—
For whom did I then say a prayer—

My mother.
—John Clagett Proctor in Washington Star.

THE MOTHER FACE

The Mother Face! The sculptor's fingers play
In mud-pie memory through the silent day,
As down the years his dream-eyes bring to view
Another face—the Mother Face he knew!
The model sits, and can not understand
What queer emotion sways his magic hand.
Then comes a whisper, as his old eyes blur:
"My mother's smile! You make me think of her!"

The Mother Face! The painter's brushes fly
Unyielding to the colors he would spy.
The tints are there, the bronzes pearly too,
But something halts his blending of the blue.
The aged sitter wonders at his pause—
The blue he sees is blue of other days.
He takes her hand, smiles tenderly and sighs:
"Forgive my stare! You have my mother's eyes!"

The Mother Face! The poet, flame-intent,
Scans passing throngs, on gain or pleasure bent.
The wise, the dull, the dreamy, grave and gay
Seem empty subjects for an ardent lay.
Then inspiration comes—a Mother Face
Deep furrowed, yet with Youth's abiding trace.
"I'll sing of her," he says, and goes along;
"Each wrinkle echoes back a mother-song!"

The Mother Face! What magic they possess—
Each vital charm another's loveliness!
Your mother's face reflects a joy divine
Were she but here, I know you'd find in mine.
A word, a smile, a twinkle of the eye
Are mirrored dreams of happy days gone by Each Mother Face the Master made to be Reflected love—as yours now is to me!
—William Herschell in Indianapolis News.

It is almost impossible to remain awake, says this authority, after three figures have been painted. He usually falls asleep after he has painted perhaps two or three figures, but if not, invariably after the third figure is painted.

BREAK IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, May 10—(AP)—Stock prices broke sharply today under a heavy selling attack by bear traders but the extreme declines, which ran from 1 to 5 points in active issues, were substantially reduced by the late wave of covering. Total sales crossed the million share mark for the first time since last Tuesday.

The announcement of a sharp cut in automobile prices by one of the largest manufacturers and the unexpectedly large decrease of over 500 tons in the April unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation, presumably inspired the selling movement. The late recovery was associated with the publication of unconfirmed report on the financial new tickers that many English railroad men had signified their intention to return to work, indicating a break up in the ranks of British labor.

Motors and rubbers bore the brunt of the selling, new low prices for the year in those groups being established by Studebaker, Dodge Brothers A, Jordan Moon, Fisher Body, U. S. Rubber and Goodrich. General Motors broke nearly five points to 124 1-4 and then rallied about above 126. Fisher Body rallied from a low of 79 1-2 to 83, off 3 1-4 net. Mack Tru closed 1 1-4 lower at 111, after having touched 109. Weakness of General Motors was somewhat of a surprise in view of the fact that a substantial extra cash distribution is expected at the directors meeting on Thursday.

U. S. Steel common fluctuated between 121 1-2 and 119 5-4, closing at 120 7-8 for a net loss of 5-8 on the day. Wall street's early estimates of the decrease in unfilled orders ranged from 375,000 to 450,000 so that the actual drop of 511,959 came as a surprise. Bethlehem sagged to a new low for the year at 38, and fractional recessions were recorded by the other independents.

Dupont scored the largest individual loss by dropping 8 points to 305 but it snapped back to 311 1-4 at the close.

Independent strength was shown, however, by several industrials and specialties. Radio Corporation was a late feature, rallying from 39 1-4 to 44, up 4 points net on the day. Postum Cereal closed 8 points higher at 84 1-8 and Pullman advanced 7 points to 166 1-2.

Rails were rather slurgish. Atlantic Coast Line closing 4 points lower at 192 and Union Pacific 1 1-2. Rock Island moved up a point.

Commodity markets were mixed. Active wheat futures showed irregular fractional changes on the day. Cotton advanced 8 to 29 points on favorable weather reports in the southwest. Coffee declined 18 to 30 points in sympathy with the lower Brazilian market. Raw sugar advanced 1-16 of a cent a pound and futures were slightly firmer.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent, and held at that figure all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

The foreign exchange market was steady. Demand sterling was slightly firmer around $4.84 7-8 and French francs were quoted just below 3.50 cents. Other changes were largely nominal.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, May 10—(AP)—Bond prices drifted to lower levels in today's extremely dull trading. Operations were governed by an even greater degree of hesitancy than characterized last week's listless dealings, with no change in the British strike situation or in the domestic credit outlook to affect the market.

The excitement which attended the dissolution of the Italian loan syndicate last Saturday and the subsequent break in this government's bonds subsided today when it became apparent that strong support was at hand for this issue. All offerings were readily absorbed by institutional buying orders, with the price fluctuating between 89 1-2 and 90 in a turnover of about $1,000,000. Interest lagged in other European obligations, French and Belgian issues moving within a narrow and irregular limit.

Scattered liquidation of high priced issues unsettled the railroad group, but changes here, as in other sections of the list were limited mainly to fractions. Norfolk & Western convertible 6s fell back 2 1-2 points to 140 but the division 4s reached a new high price for the year coincident with the announcement of an additional $6,000,000 offering of these bonds. Florida East Coast 4 1-2s and Ontario & Western General 4s worked moderately higher.

Industrial bonds generall developed an easier tone. Anaconda 6s and 7s were freely sold and losses of 1 to 2 points were registered by Skelly Oil 6 1-2s. Dold Packing 6s, Crown Cork and Seal 6s and Dominion Iron & Steel 5s.

Reports were current in bond circles that a $30,000,000 issue of 4 1-2 per cent. bonds for the New England Telephone & Telegraph company would be offered shortly, but bankers declined to discuss the details. A $2,000,000 seven per cent loan for the Free State of Anhalt, Germany, will be marketed tomorrow at prices to yield 8 to 7.60 per cent.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

NEW YORK, May 10—(AP)—Although rain in the Dakotas, Minnesota, Nebraska and the Canadian northwest ended finally today to lower prices for wheat it was a two-sided market. Much buying resulted from the government crop report pointing to 12,000,000 bushels smaller yield of domestic winter wheat than has recently been expected. Chicago closing quotations on wheat were irregular, at 3-4c net decline to 5-8c advance, May 1.61 3-8 to 1.61 4-8 and July 1.33 5-8 to 1.33 3-4c with corn 1-2 cents to 7-8 cents up, oats a shade to 1 1-4c cents off, and provisions showing ten to 15 cents gain.

Throughout the day the wheat market was unsettled and fluctuated rapidly within a range of 2 1-4 cents. Demand became chiefly evident when the market declined, whereas offerings increased on the bulge and in price. Frost predictions tended to help the market upward at times, especially when corn values developed some strength. Another somewhat stimulating influence in the wheat market was the fact that the United States visible supply today showed a liberal decrease of 1,482,000 bushels. With lake navigation open the visible is expected to shrink rather quickly from now on.

Corn owed its advance chiefly to heavy rains in Iowa, frost predictions and to promote of cold weather for several days, oats were responsive to favorable crop advices.

Provisions reflected the upward trend of hog values.

CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, May 10—(AP)—Reactionary tendencies became more pronounced in today's curb market with little disposition shown by operators to bid up stocks in any quarter of the list. A rally took place during the afternoon in sympathy with the covering movement on the "big board," but it failed to make much general headway.

Oils were slurgish despite constructive trade news and the public action of an unusually favorable 1925 earnings report by the Skelly company. Gibson, the most active, opened with a block of 6,000 shares at 7 1-2, a new high and then broke to 6 1-4. Gulf, Aquum and Humble also sold down a point or more although the last-named made up nearly all of its loss.

Despite recent predictions of special dividend developments at tomorrow's meeting, Glen Alden Coal broke over 5 points to 155 1-4 and then rallied to 156 1-2. Lehigh Valley Coal closed fractionally higher. Public utilities were practically neglected the only change of consequence being a drop of over a point in electric investors.

General Electric (new stock), the most active industrial, fluctuated between 77 3-4 and 79, closing 3-8 net lower at 78 5-8. Industrial Rayon and Fabize Silk also showed marked heaviness.

Motors turned heavy with selling based on the announcement of a cut in prices by one of the large manufacturers. Ford Motors of Canada dropped from 500 to 490 and then rallied to 498, off 4 points net. Stutz dropped nearly 3 points and then recovered most of its loss, and Rickenbacker duplicated the year's low.

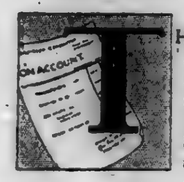
Keeping Tabs on 1,600,000 People



THE Merchants Protective Credit Service of Southern New England must be able to check on short notice the credit standing of the 1,600,000 people living in the State of Connecticut. This task at first seems almost impossible, and one wonders how it can be done quickly and efficiently. The toll lines of the Telephone Company, stretching to every corner of the State, are the answers to that question. Every day they hum with the messages of this Credit Service.

Mr. R. P. Nason, Manager of the organization, says: "Fully 30% of our investigations can be done just as well by telephone as by a personal trip. Your toll operators are apparently girls of keen intelligence and always on the job. Of course we do find that an operator will occasionally make a mistake, as do all of us mortals, but for day in and day out service, utility, our reporters find that your toll service is an invaluable assistant."

Toll telephone service brings the state and its people to your door. In business, it is a salesman, purchasing clerk, and general agent; in social life it is a private secretary.

Our local Exchange Manager will be glad to explain the various classes of toll service now available and how they may be best adapted to your exact needs

LEONARD AGAIN MARSHAL OF MEMORIAL DAY PARADE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 10.—George Elmer Leonard, of Pawcatuck, Spanish war veteran, was again named marshal of the Westerly Memorial day parade. His election occurred at the close of a two-hour meeting at the American Legion post rooms of the Veteran Board of control, made up of members of the Spanish War Veterans, Foreign wars and American Legion. Harry T. Powers was chairman and Harry Russell Burdick, clerk. The meeting at which there was an attendance of 35 was also attended by Samuel Tefft, G. A. R. veteran, and member of Amos Chapman Camp, Sons of Veterans; the latter were invited to be present to smooth out some of the misunderstandings as to who should complete arrangements for the Memorial day observance for which preliminary details had been "unmade" by G. A. R. Veteran Tefft and the Sons of Veterans camp. The Veteran's camp claimed they were not going to let go entirely or fall down on the job of assisting or representing the G. A. R.

In accepting the appointment, Marshal Leonard, while stating his perfect willingness to do anything to promote harmony, said it was not necessary that he should be elected marshal year after year. At the close of the meeting Mr. Leonard asked the G. A. R. veteran Tefft, and the members of Amos T. Chapman camp to meet with him, that he might learn what had already been done. The Marshal is to appoint his aides and it is left to him to arrange the formation of the parade in keeping with the expression of the meeting.

P. A. Quinn, counsel for the defendant, asked for a non-suit, but Judge Waller decided to give a continuance to next Saturday morning.

Movie Plots at Low Price

Chinese or foreigners who expect to reap rich rewards for writing motion-picture scenarios for Chinese film companies are doomed to disappointed if a special scenario contest inaugurated in Shanghair gives a true indication of the prices to be paid. One Chinese company offers a cash prize or $100 local currency, or about $50 gold, for the best motion-picture story submitted.

New Use for Masks

Gas masks of the type that protected soldiers during the World war were pressed into service by a crew of workers in London while hunting leaks in the city gas mains. The hazard of the job was increased by the necessity of working in deep trenches where vapors had insufficient chance to escape in case flows of considerable pressure were encountered. With the masks the workers were able to make a thorough search.

In the city court Monday morning Robert H. Sinclair, 24, U. S. N., of the submarine base at Groton, was fined $200 and costs and given a suspended 30 day jail sentence, on a charge of driving his machine while under the influence of liquor. Sinclair entered a plea of guilty and the fine was quickly meted out by Judge Arthur P. Libby. Michael P. Ryan, U. S. N., who was riding with Sinclair, was fined $10 and costs for intoxication. Ryan paid his bill, but Sinclair was able to pay only part of his and the machine is held for security. Sinclair was arrested on Franklin square Sunday afternoon by Officers Keenan and Coburn. Two bottles of liquor nearly gone, were found in the new Ford touring car which he was driving.

A Norwich Town man drew a six months sentence at the state farm and a transient who was in court two weeks ago for intoxication, and who appeared before the judge Monday morning got a 15 day jail sentence. A Jewett City man paid $5 and costs for intoxication.

Fidel Williams, colored, was presented on a charge of evading payment of a restaurant bill of $1.85 and also on a charge of breach of the peace. Williams ordered food in Fern's restaurant about midnight Saturday and then there was an argument over the amount due. It was testified in court that there was a lively argument and that Williams left the place without settling. He was later arrested at his home on Laurel Hill. In court he denied having an argument and stated that he intended to pay the bill Sunday, as he had no money with him when he was in the restaurant.

Judge Libby noted the case on payment of costs and with the understanding that Williams pay his bill at the restaurant.

DOES SUCCESSION TAX COVER OUTSIDE STATE?

The question of whether or not the property located outside of this state is subjected to the Connecticut succession tax was put up for decision by the supreme court last week when the case of appeal by Arthur Silberman, Charles Moeblius, Joseph Plaut and Charles Gutman, of New York, executors of the $2,646,2.85 estate of Robert H. Hirsch of Stamford, from the probate of the estate came up in the first judicial district in Hartford. The probate court allowed and approved a computation of inheritance and succession taxes to be paid to the state of Connecticut, amounting to $188,780.58.

The appeal came to the supreme court by reservation of the superior court of Fairfield county. Hirsch was a general partner in the firm of William Openhym & Sons of New York practically all of the assets of which were in New York state. The Hirsch interest in the partnership was $1,637,245.24. It is contended by the executors that this interest cannot be taxed in Connecticut. It is stipulated that all the bonds and certificates of stocks were physically located in New York at Hirsch's death and that of the stocks and bonds amounting to more than $900,000 less than $1,000 were obligated by Connecticut corporations.

A part of the appellant's case deals with the fact that the tax appraiser appointed by the surrogate's court in New York reported as taxable all the assets of the state except the very small amount located in Connecticut.

COURT TO HEAR APPEAL OVER LAND VALUATION

The appeal from the award of the board of compensation made to Mrs. Mary Flynn of New London for a narrow strip of her land to be taken for widening Church street in that city, will be heard in the superior court here today (Tuesday). Director of Law Thomas E. Troland will represent the city while Attorney C. Hadlai Hull of the firm of Hull, McGuire & Hull, will represent Mrs. Flynn.

Mrs. Flynn was awarded $500 damages by the board of compensation after the public hearing on the Church street widening project, but claimed $1,500 damage to her property. At the present time the Church street work is going on but a disposition by the superior court of the Flynn claim will clear the way to completing the widening and resurfacing of that thoroughfare in time to meet demands of heavy summer traffic.

ANSWERING THE QUESTION "WHAT AILS TEACHING?"

The woman's viewpoint and the man's viewpoint are represented in the two first prize-winning answers for the $2,000 contest, "What is the Matter With Teaching and How Can Its Evils Be Cured," which has been carried on for the last six months by a New York magazine, and for which the six prize-winning names are announced.

"Teaching, as now constituted, is not a profession," states Mrs. Grace P. Miller, of Denver, Colorado, in the letter which won first prize for the teaching group. "In my opinion this is what is fundamentally wrong: Teaching differs from true professions in many ways principally in preparation, permanancy, advancement, and working conditions."

"The trouble with teaching," says Charles Milton Newcomb, of Lakewood, Ohio, who won first prize for the non-teacher group, "is that mothers are interested in education, but fathers are not. Why is this? Are not fathers parents? The matter with teaching is that father has turned the job of educating the children over to mother. Somebody has got to sell father his job as a parent.

Winners of the six prizes, three for teachers, and three for non-teachers as announced are: Teachers, Mrs. Grace P. Miller, Denver, Colorado; Harlan A. Davis, superintendent of schools, Port Huron, Michigan; Miss Bertha Lee Gardner, Washington, D. C. Non-teachers: Charles Milton Newcomb, Lakewood, Ohio; Mrs. Agnes Lovendahl Stewart, Salt Lake City, Utah; Miss Erie Chambers, Little Rock, Arkansas.

Mrs. William Brown Meloney, editor of the magazine, who had an analysis made of these three thousand answers announced that "the system" was blamed by 1,203 school teachers for much of the present dissatisfaction and hardship in teaching that the attitude of the community bringing with it loneliness, poor living conditions, and inferior social position, was blamed by 1,079 teachers for their desertion of the profession and that low standards of teaching were blamed by 890; and low salaries by 798. It is stated that 110,000 men and women last year deserted the profession of school teaching, for which they had given at least half a lifetimes preparation.

The roof of the three story building at No. 312 Main street, owned by Caspar Graff, was considerably damaged by fire caused by sparks from the chimney on an adjoining building Monday afternoon shortly before 1 o'clock. At 12:53 o'clock a telephone call and a bell alarm from box 223 came in together and the fire department made a quick response. The flames were extinguished with a stream of water. The damage, estimated at $500, is covered by insurance.

While returning to his work from dinner, Robert G. Woodmansee, son of Robert F. Woodmansee, driver of truck No. 1, noticed the roof on fire and pulled in box 223. The fire was at the rear of the building.

"NO PARKING" IN FORCE AT OTIS LIBRARY CURB

The "No Parking" regulation for the space along the curb at the Otis library between the court house crosswalk and the Broadway crosswalk went into effect Monday and no parking signs were placed there by the police department.

At least three drivers placed their cars there during the day, without noticing the "No Parking" sign, and had red tags placed on their cars by the police department. When the drivers reported at police headquarters, they were warned not to let it happen again, as future violators of this new "No Parking" ordinance will not have leniency shown to them.

BRITISH UNION LABOR CALLS RESERVES AS GENERAL STRIKE PROVES INEFFECTIVE SIGNS OF IMPORTANT PEACE MOVEMENT

Significance Attached to Early (Wednesday) Morning Session of Labor Leaders While a Special Cabinet Meeting Was Being Held—Labor Congress Has Issued Strike Order to Men in the Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades—Government Reports Improvement in Conditions, With Growing Disastisfaction Among the Strikers Over the Policy Pursued by the Trades Union Congress—Women's War Organizations Have Been Revived to Aid the Government.

LONDON, May 12—(AP)—Prolonged secret discussions at Trades Union headquarters which lasted until an early hour this (Wednesday) morning, simultaneously with a special cabinet meeting held in the house of commons which was followed by further ministerial conversations in Downing street, were taken as indicating that an important peace move was afoot. Consequently there is strong hope in some quarters that the strike may be called off before long.

While it is impossible to obtain any authoritative statement of what passed at union headquarters in Eccleston square, it is evident that the matters under discussion were of great consequence.

If there were no other grounds for this deduction, the fact that the premier and several other ministers, as well as some prominent officers of the labor department remained at the prime minister's residence until after one o'clock in expectation of receiving a communication from the labor leaders, would be sufficient to show the importance of the discussions.

Not until the officials received a definite message that the labor representatives would not for the present make a visit to Downing street did they separate and leave for their homes.

It became known soon afterward that a trade union delegation probably would confer with the premier and other ministers some time this morning, after another meeting of the labor leaders.

While apparently matters have not progressed to a point enabling the Trades Union congress and the parliamentary laborites to submit any definite proposal to the government, the relief is generally expressed that not many hours will elapse before the premier and his colleagues will receive from the trades union council some important communication.

It is understood the executives of the miners' federation who left Eccleston square more than an hour before the labor conference adjourned, will return there at 10 a. m. to meet again the trades union council.

LABOR IS RESORTING TO SECOND LINE OF DEFENSE

LONDON, May 11—(AP)—Although an undercurrent of peace was noticeable in London today and there was much talk of the possibility of an early peace, the government and the leaders of labor did not relax their measures—on the one side to overcome the gigantic labor demonstration, and on the other to carry on the general strike, which is just beginning its second week.

Labor's official mouth piece, the British Worker announced the spread of the strike to the men in the engineering and ship building trades, the Trades Union congress having issued the strike call to the unions in these trades, which are affiliated with the congress. Men working in government dock yards, admiralty ship yards, and the government engineering departments, however are not affected.

This is in part the second line of defense, which the leaders promised several days ago would, if necessary, be brought into the field, and, in making reference to the call, the British Workers says:

"These men have awaited their instructions impatiently and throughout the country they have received their marching orders with enthusiasm and a sense of relief.

"In addition to the men obeying this call to reinforce the gallant first line, others area of because of refusal to work with blacklegs or because the pressure of the strike is closing down factories."

This was one of the outstanding events of an eventful day, and it means that not less than 300,000 engineers and shipbuilders have joined forces with other industrial workers standing out against the government's warning that the general strike must be called off before negotiations for the settlement of the miners' strike are possible.

Justice Astbury's pronouncement in the bankery division that the general strike was illegal was received as highly important, and was utilized by Sir John Simon, the former home secretary, in the house of commons to support his previous contention that the men on strike had violated the law and could be held responsible for the damage ensuing from the general strike.

Peace activities were of a livelier and more extensive character than on any day since the men withdrew from their labors. Sir John Simon declared in the commons that he and some of his friends were about to take up the responsibility that both the government and Trades Union congress had appeared to avoid—that of initiating a definite movement for the resumption of peace negotiations. This will take the form of a request that the house of commons record its view that the government under certain conditions set forth, consent to give temporary assistance to the coal industry.

The conditions were that the general strike be called off, that work be resumed in the mines at the old rates and that the recommendations of the royal coal commission be put into effect.

BID IN COMMONS FOR PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

LONDON, May 11—(AP)—Sir John Simon, in behalf of the liberal party today made a fresh bid for a resumption of the peace negotiations in the course of a speech in the house of commons. He maintained his arguments that the general strike was illegal, as opposed to the contention of Sir Henry Slesser, legal adviser of the trades union congress, that it was covered by the trades disputes act.

The prince of Wales and the duke of York were amid attentive listeners to the debate.

Sir John was met by angry interruptions from the labor benches in his attack on the trades union congress for calling a general strike, which he characterized as "an attempt to blackmail the community." At the same time he was unsparing in denouncing the government's "blundering," in handling the negotiations.

He referred to Colonel Edward M. House's description of the difficulty of getting peace negotiations started in the great war owing to the fear of both sides of displaying weakness, and was unflinching in denouncing anyone wishing to fight to a finish.

"A fight to a finish, he said, meant striking down our own flesh and blood and no man ought to talk of such a horrible conflict.

Then, reiterating that both the congress and the government appeared to be afraid to make a move for fear of displaying weakness, he announced that he and some of his friends proposed to assume the responsibility.

Their intention was to place on the order paper a resolution asking the house to put on record its view that if and when conditions became satisfactory the government ought to announce its willingness to give brief temporary assistance to the coal industry. He enunciated the conditions under which this should be done, first, calling off of the general strike, second, resumption of work in the mines at the old rates, and the carrying out of the recommendations of the royal coal commission.

In addition miners and mine owners give definite understandings that they would negotiate on the basis of the coal commission's report.

WOMEN WILL HELP THE GOVERNMENT WIN STRIKE

LONDON, May 11—(AP)—Women's war organizations have been revived to amazing strength, and an emergency will find them ready for surprising feats in support of the government, said Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, suffrage and war work leader today.

Mrs. Pankhurst is in charge of the relief and recreation branch of the relief and recreation branch of the women's auxiliary, which includes several thousand volunteers. If the strike continues her workers are ready to open relief stations throughout London's labor sections, where the strikers' wives and children will be invited for tea and recreation. She declared that English women are prepared to render the government whatever assistance is asked of them in the strike situation, and they are only awaiting the command to turn their organizations loose.

"This is a revolution," she asserted, "not an industrial climax. Every woman who believes in suffrage should be in active support of the government in this situation. The women must stand together now in the interests of all. The mothers are the first concern."

The women's activities Mrs. Pankhurst summarized under three headings; the women's auxiliary service, with which she is identified, ready to do transport and auxiliary police and first aid work as well as operate recreation and relief stations; the women's legion, which the marchioness of Londonderry recruited from former motor drivers in the war, doing hospital transport and newspaper distribution work, and the women's guild of the empire, utilizing its large organization for relief work in Yorkshire, Lancashire, South Wales and Scotland.

So many women have applied for service in all three organizations that the applicants are being placed on the waiting list; thousands have been inscribed thus far, but the applications are still pouring in.

DAILY STRIKE COMMUNIQUE BY BRITISH GOVERNMENT

LONDON, May 11—(AP)—The daily government communique issued tonight says that although there is little sign of a general collapse of the strike, the situation throughout Great Britain shows further improvement with the prospect of a growing dissatisfaction among the strikers over the policy pursued by the trades union congress.

The communique follows:

"The situation throughout the country shows further improvement. The distribution of food gives no cause whatever for apprehension. There have been a few reports received of temporary local shortages in particular commodities, but investigation found that the majority of the reports were inaccurate and in the remaining cases the necessary steps were taken to make the position secure. Specially large supplies of sugar were distributed.

"The situation at the ports is entirely satisfactory with a growing confidence among traders of their ability to move goods consigned to them without direct government assistance.

"Petrol distribution is proceeding more rapidly than in any other previous period of the strike.

"The power services are uninterrupted and railway traffic is continuously increasing. There were 4,000 trains operated on the four main systems yesterday and 4,500 today with a great increase in the number of freight trains on which the railway companies are concentrating for further improvement. There were 7000 trains which ran in London yesterday, increasing to 850 today. The public is urged to avail themselves freely of traffic facilities.

"Order and quiet reign throughout the whole island and there are practically no attempts at sabotage. Sharp sentences have been imposed by local magistrtes on persons arrested for disorder and intimidation.

"The recruitment of special constables proceeds a pace, with 200,000 in the provinces 40,000 in London and a satisfactory enrollment of the first day's enlistment in the new civil constabulary reserve.

"As regarding the strike position, the general number of individuals returning to work is increasing and in some cases, considerable bodies of strikers applied for reinstatement.

"There is as yet little sign of a general collapse of the strike and the trades union congress is believed to be making efforts to call out certain trades which are still at work. It can definitely be stated that there is a growing disaffection among the strikers with the policy of the general strike and considerable uneasiness as to it's ultimate results."

SECOND LINE WORKERS RESENT CALL TO STRIKE

LONDON, May 11—(AP)—The trade union congress summons to the second line has not been welcomed everywhere by those affected. Among the 20,000 engineers and shipworkers on the Tynside considerable resentment was shown by the men. Owing to the prolonged depression their unions are unable to provide unemployment pay, and some of the men protest against being called out without a ballot.

The flour mill workers at Hull, which is a large flour milling center went on strike tonight.

IMPORTANT COMMUNICATION MAY BE EXPECTED TODAY

LONDON, May 12—(AP)—In expectation of some important communication from the labor men in conference at headquarters in Eccleston square, Premier Baldwin, Chancellor Churchill, Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, minister of labor, the earl of Birkenhead, the marquis of Salisbury, the earl of Balfour and others waited early today in the premier's residence in downing street to receive it.

It is understood that a delegation of the T. U. C. will meet the premier and other members of the cabinet this (Wednesday) forenoon.

Raba, secretary to Prince Ludwig Wimisch-Graetz, who was among those indicted in the "thirty-billion franc" counterfeiting case, created a sensation at the trial of those indicted by the declaration that Premier Bethlen had been mixed up in the affair according to Prince Ludwig.

Pope Pius received the gifts with appreciation. The ring and the cross will be preserved in the vatican's treasure chamber in St. Peter's.

THREE PRISONERS RETAKEN AFTER FOUR MADE BREAK

COMSTOCK, N. Y., May 11—(AP)—Four prisoners made a break for liberty from Great Meadow prison today and one succeeded. The three others, one of them wounded by a shot from a guard, were back in the prison tonight. The wounded, John Day, was shot through the thigh. The three re-captured were George McDaiser, Louis Ahorn and Fay.

All were serving sentences for robbery.

TILSON OPPOSED TO THE HAUGEN FARM RELIEF BILL

WASHINGTON, May 11—(AP)—The Haugen price stabilizing bill withstood first efforts to alter its provisions as the house moved slowly today in its consideration of farm relief legislation.

A series of amendments in order for the first time was rejected, but leaders still at sea as to what the lineup will be on the three proposals reported by the agriculture committee, did not attach much significance to the action. None of the amendments was directed at vital provisions of the bill, and less than 100 of the 435 members took part in the voting.

During the amendment stage, the house is operating under rules requiring only 100 on the floor for a quorum, and preventing roll call votes on modification proposals.

At the outset of today's session, the Haugen bill did suffer a reverse, however, when Representative Tilson, the republican leader, announced his opposition to it. He advocated passage of the Tincher credit measure, which, with the Curtis-Aswell commodity marketing proposal, is in position to be offered as substitutes to the bill sponsored by Chairman Haugen of the agriculture committee.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

First efforts to amend the Haugen farm relief bill in the house failed.

Hearings on the American-Oriental ship sale were concluded by the senate commerce committee.

The Parker-Watson railroad labor bill was passed by the senate and sent to the president.

A favorable report on the revamped dry enforcement measure was ordered by the senate prohibition committee.

Reduction a Great Social Experiment

Bishop Manning of New York Declares It is Too Soon to Conclude That Prohibition is a Failure.

NEW YORK, May 11—(AP)—Prohibition was characterized by Bishop William T. Manning in his address today at the 143rd convention of the Episcopal diocese of New York as a great social experiment which should be given full and fair trial. He called on "Christian people of all names" to join in a great united movement for full observance of the law.

"It is too soon to say that an effort of this magnitude has failed," he asserted. "We may rather, I believe, be surprised at the extent to which it has succeeded. Most of the evils complained of as resulting from prohibition result in fact from lack of sufficient effort to enforce the law."

Reasserting his previously expressed belief that moderate use of intoxicants is not a sin, the bishop dwelt upon the evils due to immoderate indulgence, which he called one of the greatest curses of mankind. He said that all should abstain and obey the laws "for the help of our weaker brethren."

The first part of his address dealt entirely with church finances. He stated that whereas some persons, "not, unnaturally," feared that the building of the cathedral of St. John the Divine might stand in the way of meeting missionary and other obligations, the effect has, in fact, been exactly the reverse.

He said that the work for the cathedral has so "stirred the spiritual life of the whole diocese" that never before has it done so much for the church as a whole. Bishop Manning reported that $241,039 had actually been paid by the diocese toward paying off the church debt and that the full $350,000 it had offered to raise has been pledged. This amount is a little more than one sixth of the complete church debt.

The raising of the full quota, Bishop Manning said, means that the salaries of the clergy may more quickly be increased. He expressed the belief that no clergyman in this diocese should receive less than $2,400 a year and a house.

STRIKE PICKET WAS ARRESTED IN PASSAIC

PASSAIC, N. J., May 11—(AP)—After the issuing of a permanent injunction by Vice-Chancellor Bentley at Jersey City today against the United Front committee of textile workers, a strike picket was arrested at the Forstmann and Huffman plant in Garfield where the order forbade more than eight pickets.

The man held was George Costello who police said disputed a ruling against the right to be followed by the line of eight pickets. The line dispersed after the arrest.

Organizer Albert Weisbord, against whom the injunction was issued along with the United Front committee, called it a "barren victory for the mill owners," and declared that because of its permitting "peaceful persuasion" it made "a mockery of the original restraining order."

The injunction, obtained by the Forstmann and Huffman company, provided that bombs must not be set off or any violence shown; homes or property of employes must not be trespassed upon; threats must not be mailed or published; pickets must not speak to employes who object; insulting language or terms such as "scab" must not be used; parading or displaying banners or placards at the mill is prohibited. The number of pickets permitted was fixed at eight.

FLYING FROM SPITZBERGEN TO NOME, ALASKA, BY WAY OF THE NORTH POLE

NEW YORK, May 11—(AP)—Messages from the airship Norge, in which the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile polar expedition left Kings Bay, Spitsbergen at 10 o'clock this morning for Nome, Alaska, by way of the north pole, show that she is making "steady progress" on her course, it was announced tonight by the New York Times and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The airship's voyage across the pole to Alaska is expected to take from 36 to 60 hours. She will proceed to Nome by way of Point Barrow, base of the Detroit arctic expedition, unless weather conditions drive her from her course or cause her to land short of that point.

The airship was ready to sail at 1 o'clock Norwegian time, this morning, but her departure was delayed by local wind squalls. She got under way at 10 o'clock Norwegian time, which is 9 a. m. Greenwich time, or 4 o'clock a. m. eastern standard time.

Railroad Labor Bill Passed Senate 69-13

Designed to Create a New Method For Handling Disputes Between Carriers and Their Employes.

WASHINGTON, May 11—(AP)—The Watson-Parker bill to abolish the railroad labor board and set up new machinery for handling disputes between carriers and their employes was passed today by the senate, 69 to 13.

The measure now goes to President Coolidge who has declared for the general principle of the legislation provided the public interest is protected. Whether the bill does that formed the chief point of controversy in both the house and the senate.

The proposal was drafted by representatives of the larger railroads and the railroad labor unions, but was strongly opposed by the National Manufacturers' association and some of the smaller railroads.

Six amendments were offered today but all voted down by overwhelming majorities. Chief among these was one by Senator Curtis, the republican floor leader, proposing to give the interstate commerce commission final authority over wage awards. This was rejected, 64 to 12.

Senator Bruce, democrat, Maryland, proposed a series of amendments, the principal one of which would have given the emergency board to be set up by the president if a strike threatened authority to subpoena witnesses and papers. This was voted down, 57 to 19.

A surprise was sprung by Senator Norbeck, republican, South Dakota, with an amendment proposing to repeal the rate-making section of the transportation act. That was rejected, 55 to 23. Some of the proponents of the bill went on record for this amendment, while some opponents voted against it.

After the measure had been passed, Senator Norbeck proposed to amend the title, but that effort failed without a roll call. Under his proposal the title would have read: "A bill to increase the farmers' working day from 14 to 16 hours and to reduce the railroad men's working day from eight hours to seven hours."

On the question of the passage of the bill, 39 republicans joined with 29 democrats, and the one farmer-labor member in voting in the affirmative, while nine republicans and four democrats voted in the negative.

MRS. C. C. STEVENSON SUES FOR ANNULMENT OF MARRIAGE

NEW YORK, May 11—(AP)—Mrs. Claire Cornell Stevenson, daughter of Mrs. Claire J. Cornell and member of the Junior league has started suit for annulment of her marriage to Robert Ten Eyck Stevenson, costume designer and scion of a prominent Chicago family, it became known today.

In papers filed in Westchester county May 6, Mrs. Stevenson charged her husband with fraud, in a second cause of action she asked a separation on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment. Stevenson denied the charges, contending his wife is seeking to ruin his career and that she entertained beyond his means.

Miss Cornell and Mr. Stevenson eloped to Portchester, N. Y., last December shortly after she had broken a long-standing engagement to the Marquis De Arales, second cousin to the king of Spain.

At the time of the elopment, Mrs. Stevenson and her mother were engaged in litigation regarding clothing and millinery bills totaling $2,927, and deputy sheriffs had seized $85,000 worth of their effects to satisfy judgments against them. Mrs. Cornell and her daughter instituted court action temporarily holding up the sale, but last week the supreme court decided they must pay the judgments.

PARLIAMENTARY SITUATION IN GERMANY IS ACUTE

BERLIN, May 12—(AP)—The parliamentary situation reached a critical stage by reason of a midnight caucus by the democrats who adopted a resolution that further co-operation with Chancellor Luther was impossible because of his procedure in the flag issue.

With the exception of Dr. Gessler, minister of defense, the democrats will withdraw their ministers from the cabinet today (Wednesday) it is announced, in protest against the chancellor's failure to withdraw his flag order.

The democrats' defection will force the centrists to follow suit, which would make Dr. Luther's continuance in office impossible.

The resolution is believed to have been due to the chancellor's irreconcilable speech, which is viewed by the democrats as an affront and insincere.

Chancellor Luther told the reichstag today that the government's recent two flag decree was in force and would remain in force.

FREIGHTER SEIZED WITH A HUGE CARGO OF LIQUORS

Whiskey, Champagne and Alcohol Valued By the Authorities at $1,420,000—Freighter Donnetta Was Captured 50 Miles Southeast of Atlantic City by the Coast Guard Cutter Seneca—Ship Was Taken Under Condition That Came Technically Under Classification of Piracy.

NEW YORK, May 11—(AP)—With a cargo of whiskey, champagne, and alcohol, valued by the authorities at $1,420,000, the freighter Donnetta, was brought into the harbor tonight by the coast guard cutter Seneca, and anchored near the statue of Liberty.

The freighter, seized last night sixty miles southeast of Atlantic City, flying the American flag, but without ship's papers and with no one aboard with officers credentials, was said by coast guard officials to come technically under the classification of piracy.

Coast guard officials believed the Donnetta to be connected with the operations of an alleged bootleg ring of Port Chester, L. I. Emil Wormser and five other men were indicted yesterday in connection with the ring which is estimated to have had assets or $10,000,000.

When the freighter was anchored in the harbor seals were placed upon its hatches and the crew of 23 men were left aboard for the night under guard. They will be arraigned before the United States commissioner at the federal building tomorrow.

Commander John Blake of the Seneca said he pulled alongside the Donnetta Monday night and got a "gigantic whiff of, alcoholic content which would have staggered a theatre crowd." Coast guardsmen boarding the freighter, found men on the bridge who would not admit they were officers, and who had no credentials. Part of the crew were intoxicated.

Commander Blake placed a prize crew on the freighter and took her in tow. The two boats battled a northwestern gale, the Donnetta had eight feet of water in her second aft hold.

Another boat said to have been employed by the Wormser ring, the Admiral Schley, was seized by coast guardsmen off Greenport, L. I., today, but no liquor was found aboard.

The cargo of the Donnetta was said to include 500 drums of Belgian alcohol of the highest proof, each drum containing 90 gallons; 75,000 cases of champagne, and 7,500 cases of scotch and liquors.

Coast guardsmen said that the privilege of boarding an American craft at that distance from shore was "an attribute of sovereignty." They maintained that the ship was first seized under suspicion for flying the American flag and having no ship's papers. Seizure for having liquor aboard was a second matter arising from the first, they said.

Wormser and his five alleged associates were said to be leaders of a gigantic bootleg ring operating many rum running vessels and supply liquor in large quantities to the metropolitan district. In the indictment opened by Federal Attorney Buckner yesterday, Wormser was described as "a millionaire resident of Riverside drive."

LACKS MONEY TO GO AND EXONERATE HER HUSBAND

KANSAS CITY, May 11—(AP)—Anxious to exonerate her husband, Mrs. Clara Thompson, whom Iowa authorities believed was the victim in the Carlisle strawstack murder, was stranded here early tonight and unable to go to his aid because of lack of money.

Earl Thompson, the husband, was arrested here last night and taken back to Des Moines, Iowa, for questioning in connection with the murder. Mrs. Thompson's grandmother, Mrs. Maggie Harmon of Omaha, had identified the strawstack victim as Mrs. Thompson.

Although she had been separated from Thompson for almost a year, Mrs. Thompson said her old love for him returned when she read of his arrest and that she immediately informed the authorities she would go to his assistance.

"Grandmother always had it in for me," was the explanation Mrs. Thompson gave for the fact that she identified the body of the victim as that of her granddaughter.

Mrs. Thompson said she had been in Denver, Tulsa, Oklahoma, Hastings, Neb., St. Joseph, Mo., and Kansas City since she left Omaha about a year ago, and that the first time she had seen her husband since they separated was when they met in the lobby of a local motion picture theatre Sunday night.

Mrs. Thompson indicated she would go to Des Moines from Omaha.

EXPLOSION ON PATROL BOAT INJURES TWO MEN

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 11—(AP)—Two men were blown into the water and three others were forced to leap into the sea when an explosion in the engine room fired the coast guard patrol boat 2341 off West Island in Buzzard's bay, near here tonight. The 2341 was burning fiercely when last seen and it was believed she sank soon after being abandoned.

The five men were in the water half an hour, clinging to a life raft snatched from the roof of the pilot house, before the schooner yacht Blue Goose of New York rescued them.

They were transferred to the CG250 and rushed to this port where an ambulance, summoned by radio was waiting to take them to a hospital.

"CAT EYE" ANNIE HAS BEEN RETURNED TO AUBURN PRISON

AUBURN, N. Y., May 11—(AP)—"Cat Eye Annie," so-called because of the peculiar coloring of the iris of one of her eyes, tonight was ill in the Auburn prison hospital recovering from the latest unsuccessful attempt to regain her liberty.

The woman, who was sentenced to serve ten years for the theft of $75,000 worth of jewelry from a Buffalo home where she was employed as a maid, escaped by digging through her cell wall and scaling the outer barrier with the aid of a blank early yesterday. She was found under a pile of straw in a field 11 miles north of Auburn this morning suffering from exposure and hunger.

Auburn prison officials, under strict orders to give out no information either about the woman's story or her condition, refused to confirm, or deny well-authenticate reports that she had developed pneumonia.

"Cat Eye Annie" known under many aliases but sentenced as Mrs. Lillian McDowell, had no money nor weapons when found. A farmer going to work noticed her arm protruding from a pile of straw and promptly notified the prison authorities. There is a standing $50 reward for information leading to the apprehension of an escaped Auburn prisoner.

A party led by John Martin, deputy keeper, found her in a pitiable condition. Her thin gingham prison dress had served her as a protection against the cold drizzle and she had been without food since Sunday. She was barely able to talk. The notorious jewelry thief was arrested in Milwaukee last fall and Buffalo was the successful bidder among several cities who wished to try her for robbery.

(Special to The Bulletin).

WILLIMANTIC, May 11—Arthur Gaudreault, who resides at and conducts the store 187 Main street, was arrested on violation of the liquor law charges, Tuesday afternoon about 5:00 o'clock. A raid at his place by a police squad netted two pint bottles half filled with alcohol splits. When the officers arrived Gaudreault was just leaving the store with a handful of corks. It was presumed that a large quantity of liquor was hidden somewhere in the building but after an hour's search of the store and home on the second floor, which failed to reveal the hiding place, the officers left with what evidence they had found. The squad was composed of Acting Captain Frank W McLean, and Patrolmen Pierre Marrotte, Leo Piche and Daniel Cargill. Bonds of $1,000 was named. This is Gaudreault's second offense. He will be given a hearing in police court Wednesday morning.

NICHOLAS ROSATI DIES AS RESULT OF INJURIES

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 11—Nicholas Rosati, the ten year old son of Mrs. Maria Rosati, of Chaplin, who sustained a fractured skull, broken legs and internal injuries when run down by a Buick coupe operated by Herbert J. Lane of Brookline, Mass., on the highway near his home early on Monday evening, died from his injuries at St. Joseph's hospital, about 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. No hope had been held out that the child could recover. The boy was struck after he had alighted from the Providence-Danielson bus opposite his home and started to cross the road. The Lane car came from the opposite direction and struck the child as he came from behind the bus. The boy had boarded the bus in this city. George Pearl of Hampton, driver of the bus told State Policeman Edward Streaman of Danielson that Lane had sounded the horn on his car as he approached the bus which had already gotten into motion when the boy was struck. He signified that Lane was not driving at a reckless rate of speed. Among witnesses who are to be questioned are Nicholas Demauro, grandfather of the boy and a relative. Mike Gattus of 128 A 15th street, Brooklyn, N. Y., who state that they were witnesses to the accident.

Lane is held on a technical charge of reckless driving and has posted a bond of $1,000. He retains Attorney W. A. Kner of this city for counsel.

The Rosati home is on the old Neff place, midway between South Chaplin and Clarks' Corner on the main highway. The mother is a widow and works in a local mill, rooming here during the week with a sister, at 44 Union street. The grandparents care for the children at home. Besides his mother and grandparents the boy leaves three brothers, Louis, who attends Windham high school, August and Joseph Nicholas was next to the youngest, August, who is 8 years old.

When notified of the death of the boy by Acting Lieutenant Edward P. Leahy and Officer Arthur Hurley, Mrs. Rosati was nearly prostrated and became hysterical. Great grief also overwhelmed the grandmother with whom the little boy had been a favorite. Medical Examiner Dr. Louis L. Mason viewed the body and notified Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson who started an inquest Tuesday afternoon.

The Rosati family figured in a mishap about a month ago, in Hampton, when the horse which they were driving on their way to church took fright and bolted. Three members of the family were injured, Mrs. Demauro, their grandmother, being dragged for some distance.

DANIELSON

HIKER FROM LOWELL RIDES WHEN POSSIBLE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 11—Daniel Jolie, hiking from his home in Lowell, Mass., to Vancouver, B. C., walked through Danielson (in an automobile) Tuesday afternoon. Danny is the first of a host of transcontinental hikers likely to be seen here before the late fall season is at hand. These hikers have increased in number in proportion to the increase in the number of motor vehicles on the highway. Most of them have a khaki rig and a camping roll and a pretty little story about being engaged in some walking contest for a huge sum of money. They tell about time limits set for the completion of their feat and have tales with various embellishments and plausible explanations of being on what undoubtedly to them is a good time.

Jolie indulges in none of that kind of talk. He's 20 and husky. The mill business is not too good in Lowell. Spring is here and his wanderlust is working. He has some money, an ambition to see the country and relatives up Vancouver way. Why not walk across the continent and see them?

Jolie is frank about his intent not to walk one mile more than necessity obliges. "I am going to ride as often and as long as I can," he is quoted as saying. He had done mighty well between Lowell and Danielson, walking only about five miles of the 90 between the two places. He differs from most of these continental hikers in that he does not claim to be getting in 20 to 30 miles a day on foot. He is not collecting the signatures of mayors or other officials, has no stunts and nothing to sell. "If I get broke I am strong and can get a job doing something," he says.

He hopes, with good luck on the riding, to be in Vancouver, in 60 days.

SEIZED TRUCK CLAIMED BY BOSTON MOTOR COMPANY

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 11—The truck seized in Brooklyn a few days ago, while engaged in transporting a load of alcohol, has been claimed by the representatives of a Boston Motor Car company that sold it to Michael Newman, of Boston, about a month ago. The truck was sold to Newman on a condition bill of sale. The truck being a new one, he had not completed his payments. Newman violated the terms of the conditional bill of sale in at least two ways—in taking it out of the state of Massachusetts and in registering it as owned at 1097 Main street, Hartford, which address does not exist. Incidentally, the sale arrangement included the arrangement that it should not be used in the transportation of intoxicants in violation of the law. Representations in behalf of the motor car company were made to the state police department through Attorney Harry E. Rack, who was retained for the purpose. Under the circumstances, the state police gave up the truck, which was practically brand new and is said to have a value of about $2,000.

Lieut-Governor Brainerd and Supt. Robert P. Hurley of the state police department came to Danielson Tuesday and inspected the detail of state officers stationed here under Sergeant Albert S. Field and all the equipment and barracks furnishings. These inspections are made periodically, are much after the manner of military inspections and are now being carried out at all barracks throughout Connecticut. The visiting officials inspect in detail condition of uniforms and equipment, which includes arms and motor vehicles. The barracks also comes in for a looking over. The Danielson barracks is at all times kept in meticulous order, and so is the grounds about them.

Mothers' day was observed at the Goodyear church Sunday morning. Romans 13:7 was the text chosen for the sermon and the pastor, Rev. Charles A. Downs, spoke on "Honor to whom honor is due." The world has been slow in according woman her rightful place. Generally speaking woman has received scant recognition for her contributions to the world's welfare, he said. Through the leavening influence of Christianity the world is beginning to awaken to the real worth of motherhood. As a moral and religious influence in the home and community a mother's value is beyond price. Everyday should be mother's day. At the Sunday school session following the church service Miss May Longbottom was organist.

The schedule of Ascension day masses Thursday at St. James' church is as follows: (Standard time) 4:30; 6, 7 and 8 o'clock; (daylight time) 5:30, 7, 8 and 9 o'clock.

As to traffic passing over it, the Main street crossing in Danielson is rated one of the most used in eastern Connecticut. It is on two main trunk line highways of the state as well as carrying heavy local traffic.

Cowslips, late as are all other growths this spring season, are finding their way into the local market and meeting with a ready sale to those who like greens.

A registered 4-year old Holstein cow at the Shepard hill farm of William S. Brown, near Wauregan, has in 117 days of carefully kept records produced 10,297 pounds of milk, a considerable margin over five tons.

—Only one week remains for paying your taxes to the town of Killingly. You are reminded that your automobile is taxable. See Collector James R. Walsh to make payment.—Adv.

The first and second degrees will be worked next Monday evening at the meeting of Killingly grange and a literary program also will be presented. Walter G. Bruce, teacher of agriculture at the high school, has prepared a fine program and it is expected to be of special interest to all the members.

The moon that was new Tuesday was known of old as the Planters' moon, and many still follow the custom of planting during its periods that the crops may be of better growth and quality than otherwise would be the case. Scientists maintain there is nothing in this belief, but it has a host of followers.

Various streets in the borough received a coating of highway oil during Tuesday. This work is done by the town, through agreement with property owners along the streets treated. The cost with the town is shared by the abutting property owners.

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, May 11. — The World Wide Guild girls and Mrs. G. H. Prior's Sunday school class gave Miss Lillian Barber a shower last night, at the home of Mrs. Prior. Miss Barber supposed that she had come to attend a Guild meeting and was non-plussed when Mrs. Prior informed her that the event was in her honor. When Miss Barber and Samuel Cathcart, Jr., whom she is to marry Saturday, started for home, they found the whole crowd of girls lined up on the walk, singing 'the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" and they were showered with confetti. The first shad bushes are in bloom on the hillsides all about the borough. Some of the old record books tell of the runs of shad in the Quinebaug, at the time this conspicuous bush is in bloom, which occurs some days before there is the least show of color in surrounding shrubbery. Along later in the season an occasional shad bush will bear a crop of attractive red berries.

Two local young men were off on a hike one day early last fall. In a patch of woods near the river that runs through the town, they came upon a shad bush in full fruit, of which both ate their fill. Later, arriving home it occurred to both that neither could name the identity of the berry of which they had eaten. Then there came some fear of bad results, even to the extent that a branch was procured. Local amateur botanists failed to classify the fruit, and specimens were sent to New London where a state botanist returned the answer, "Shad berry, harmless, give locality."

There is some talk in and about the borough that a petition may be circulated, praying the Connecticut company to maintain and provide a suitable waiting station, which shall be an accommodation to prospective patrons of the line of busses being operated through the borough, over the state highway.

What Makes Home Happy?

FOUR walls can make a house, but it takes a woman to make a home.

The woman who prepares nourishing and attractive meals, does her housework without grumbling, raises a family of healthy boys and girls and still finds time to be a pal to her husband and a friend to her neighbors, is accomplishing the biggest job in the world. Homes like hers—little havens of peace and love—are the bulwark of the nation.

To be a successful homemaker a woman must guard her health. When the mother is not well the home is upset. Women everywhere are learning through their own personal experiences, as Mrs. Riessinger did, the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Riessinger was in poor health after the birth of her first baby. She weighed only 98 pounds. One day a neighbor told her of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she decided to try it. "After taking four bottles," she writes, "I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework without one bit of trouble." Her address is Mrs. M. Riessinger, 10004 Nelson Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

POSTAL RATE REVISION

When it became necessary to provide revenue in order to take care of the pay increase in the postal service there was a resort to a boosting of rates. The change was made on short notice and as was predicted at that time the increase failed to meet with a popular reception. It caused many people to realize that they could get along with a lot less postal service than they have been demanding. The increase had the effect that was claimed it would for higher rates produced a reduction in revenue. Instead of the feeling that the matter of a cent or two would make no difference, it was soon found that it did. There was much the same resentment as in the case of boosts in trolley fares.

Those who were sending postcards without thinking about the number quickly stopped it when the price was doubled. Those who were in the habit of sending newspapers did likewise when the cost was several times increased. The rates were the result of hasty action and the public was quick to decide that it was being imposed upon and stopped short.

Thus there can be no surprise when the joint congressional postal committee comes to an agreement for a change in the rates again, this time downward instead of upward. The public it finds after a long investigation is entitled to relief, a finding which indicates that the increased rates ought never to have been put into operation. It would restore the postcard rate to one cent and it would lower the newspaper rate, though not to the 1920 rate until there has been further investigation. There are also other changes which are urged in the committee report and which congress is asked to support.

We have had an exhibition of the effects of hurried legislation in connection with the existing postal rates and it will be surprising if congress does not undo its hasty and poorly conceived efforts by accepting the report and enacting legislation as recommended. Through increased business rather than through higher rates can the increased revenue be best obtained.

FARM LEGISLATION

If one may judge from the indications there will be some sort of farm legislation enacted at this session of congress, but it will not be a subsidy and it will not be the Haugen bill this is one of the matters over which there has been a long and persistent fight. The politicians and the lobbyists have been making the most of it and endeavoring to create a combination of agricultural interests, including the cotton raisers and butter makers, as well as the corn and wheat growers, to put the proposition through. But it hasn't been possible to cover up the fact that there has been that sought through this measure for the farmers which the farmers are not asking for and which has been extended to no other industry. It hasn't made a good impression upon those whose aid has been solicited in securing its passage and it doesn't make a good impression upon the country. Subsidy has always aroused positive opposition in congress and the appeal for $375,000,000 cannot escape being branded as such.

Whether it will accomplish all that is sought, or all that is believed possible, there will undoubtedly be some form of farm relief legislation. Administration sentiment leans toward the Tincher bill which would create a federal farm advisory board equipped with a $10,000,000 revolving fund to be loaned to bona fide farmers' cooperative groups, such loans to be repaid within a term of years. By the aid of this fund the farmers would be assisted in organizing and operating cooperative societies, and through such organizations it is believed that the problem of marketing the grain under the best conditions would be lessened. The idea is to help the farmer to get a larger return for his efforts, or a larger proportion of the selling price of his product.

It is probably as far as congress will be disposed to go. It must keep in mind the fact that it cannot permit such a measure to force up the federal taxes and it must bear in mind that it mustn't establish a precedent which will bob up to bother it frequently in the future.

CORRECTING BAD CONDITIONS

As the investigation concerning the murder of a prison guard in Illinois and the escape of seven prisoners, most of whom were lifers, proceeds the wonder grows that there wasn't a greater prisoner delivery and more bloodshed. There appears to have been conditions in the prison which reeked of that same leniency and toleration which have done so much to encourage the criminal elsewhere and particularly in Chicago. Only by a curious turn of events did the famous Leopold miss being one of those to get his freedom.

It was only a few days ago that efforts were being made by the Chicago chamber of commerce to spread the glad tiding through the traveling men making Chicago their headquarters that the stories regarding crime conditions in Chicago were greatly exaggerated. The purpose was, of course, to overcome the bad name that the city was acquiring because of the activities of gunmen, robbers and other criminals who had been having things about their own way.

Chicago is to be commended in correcting any wrong statements. It is justified in removing bad impressions, but since as well as before it has been demonstrated that one of the most valuable ways in which that can be done is to arouse public sentiment to the point where there will be a greater respect for the law and where better law enforcement will be demanded.

Perhaps the inquiry concerning the prisoners' escape will throw some light upon one phase of the problem. This with the investigation that is proceeding concerning the murder of a prosecuting attorney should serve to awaken the civic organizations of that city to the conditions that prevail and to cause them to realize that the need is not to endeavor to cover up or belittle what is happening but to devote their efforts to preventing the criminal tendency from giving the city a worse black eye and at the same time institute such reforms that it will have a chance to recover from the blackening that has already been sustained. Results will be gained not by denying conditions but by correcting them.

PERIODICAL ENFORCEMENT

Notice has been given by the superintendent of police in Boston that new steps are going to be taken to enforce an old rule against the parking of cars in the street of that city after 1 a. m. That is of course an admission that the rule isn't being enforced and hasn't been for some time, and yet it is probable that there were many who were fined for doing what many are allowed to do now. Why these periodic spells of law enforcement?

What is true of Boston is true of other cities including Norwich. For a time a new ordinance is enforced, then it is forgotten, violations are tolerated and soon no one is respecting it. Then comes a discovery of such an ordinance and enforcement is begun for a while only to peter out, so that for a brief time each year certain ordinances may be enforced but for the remainder of the time they are not.

Under such conditions it is a bit rough on those who are hailed into court and fined for doing what others are permitted to do and who are permitted to get the impression that while it may have been against the law once it is no longer so. At least no one is paying any attention to the law until someone, following the practice of others, happens to get caught and soaked.

The Boston superintendent is active now in the checking of crime, but it is unfortunate that that there has been encouragement given to the disregard of ordinances for so long that it is now regarded as a contribution to criminal conditions. Proper enforcement at all times would have eliminated such a situation and created a much more favorable attitude toward such regulations. When enforcement is winked at advantage can be expected to be taken of it.

ALTON B. PARKER

Though a man of much prominence in his own state of New York, Alton B. Parker came in for sudden national attention back in 1904 when he was made the candidate of the democrats for president of the United States. Judge Parker had gone to the top of the ladder in his profession in the Empire state. He had attained high honors at the bar and successively went from judgship to judgship until he became chief justice of that state, the position which he resigned in order to accept the democratic nomination.

He did not waver over the fact that he was to make a fight against Theodore Roosevelt, and the latter was frank in referring to him as a strong man of much uncertainty in the political field. Neither did Judge Parker hesitate in declaring himself for the gold standard at the very beginning of the campaign, even though it was at the time when the free silver advocacy of William J. Bryan had many supporters within the democratic party and the espousal of any other could be expected to invite opposition. But adherence to the gold standard was taking away republican thunder, as it seemed at the time, though the subsequent results failed to indicate that the electorate was stampeded thereby.

Politics was not the strong forte of Judge Parker and after his presidential candidacy, as well as before, he devoted his attention to the law in which he was always deeply interested and one of the leaders at the bar and on the bench. That he was brought into greater prominence through his one political venture in 1904 than through anything else will go unquestioned.

MRS. CALMENT JUDGE

When the plate slipped from her fingers and crashed Annie Harbor clapped her hands to her ears as though to shut out the sound. She stood a little bent over in that attitude, glaring at the glittering fragments of rock crystal on the floor as though to face them down and prove they were not there. She knew only too well what would happen to her when Mrs. Calment discovered that one of her new set was broken. Ten dollars apiece—the price had been repeated to her as a warning in handling them.

Annies lip trembled as she pushed the pieces together with the toe of one scuffed shoe. She had thought she was clutching it tightly, as she reached up to the shelf with this, the twelfth plate of the costly dessert set. Mrs Calment would turn red and say furious things and discharge her without her full weeks pay. Without a recommendation, too. And there would be the dreary work of finding another job—to say nothing of the $5 a week she had been sending home since her father hurt himself.

There was no use trying to explain the situation to Mrs. Calment.

The pieces of glass did not show at all back there in the dark in the corner and at that the idea was born.

Why let Mrs. Calment know at all? It might be weeks before that set of plates was used again and months before Mrs. Calment really counted them on the shelves and missed one. Hastily and with hands that shook Annie Harbor swept up the fragments onto the dustpan, poured them into a newspaper, and folded it over tightly, putting the bundle back in a linen drawer. When she went out after dinner that night she would carry it away to some safe and distant ashcan. She went about her work with color a trifle heightened and lips grim.

It certainly was a jest of fate that Mrs. Calment, coming in later with a friend, should talk about Italian luncheon sets and that the friend should beg to be shown her latest acquisition. Annies crime was discovered.

Leaning up against the kitchen table, Annie had ried hopelessly as she lent her head to the storm.

"On the spot! I should say I did!" Mrs. Calment explained that evening, to her husband as they finished their dinner at a near-by cafe. "I couldn't stand it to have a girl like that around another minute. It wasn't so much the plate she broke as the disgraceful way she tried to hide it and hoodwink me. Plain dishonesty, and that's what I told her. Not a bit of moral responsibility. If she had come right to me with the broken plate and told me what she had done I would have felt absolutely different, I am sure, but I was simply outraged at her trying to sneak out of doing what was right. There's no telling where that sort of thing leads to, either. It shows weak fiber. Why, of course, I didn't give her a week's pay in advance. The idea! And all she got for the last week was what I left after I took out for the plate. Plain dishonest."

"She made good pie," said Calment a trifle sadly.

At the foot of the hall stairs the next morning Mrs. Calment, on her way to the markets and in a hurry, saw the flutter of a bill. Picking it up, she realised that it was $20 she held in her hand. She stared at the money. There were six apartments in the building and somebody must have dropped it recently on the way out. On the other hand, it might have been dropped by an utter stranger.

The more she considered the matter the more certain she became that this must have been the case. Most of the women in the building paid their bills by check, she knew. Anyhow, why should she use her valuable time going around ringing doorbells, because some silly woman was absurdly careless? She was not responsible.

No doubt whoever lost it would charge it up to profit and loss and next time be more careful.

Opening her bead bag, Mrs. Calment dropped in the $20 bill, closed the bag with a brisk snap and stepped outdoors. It was a lovely day and her only sorrow was the fact that she must telephone for a new maid.

"That girl!" she mugmured disapprovingly as she thought of her scene with Anne. "Not a particle of moral responsibility."—Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

Theodore L. DeVinne, a Great Printer

Anyone who wishes to know exactly how to punctuate the most puzzling sentence; how to divide the most refractory word and how to use type most effectively, has only to read some of the many books written by Theodore L. DeVinne on Correct Composition, Modern Book Composition, Plain Printing Types and Historic Printing Types. Theodore L. DeVinne made himself a master of the history and of the art of printing, and exercised an influence on printing in the United States that no one else has equalled. He rose to this proud eminence from the humble position of being a ridiculed "printer's devil" in a country shop.

Theodore L. DeVinne's minister father must have rejoiced indeed when his son was born on Christmas day, and he must have regarded the event as auspicious for the future. The father had little money, but he had a strong character, and he trained his son to be a real man, to have good ambitions, to work, and to work hard. He sent him to the little schools in the villages where he preached, and then, when the lad was in his 14th year, sent him to work for a printer in Newburgh, N. Y. As in so many other cases, the work of the printing shop proved the stepping stone to high success. There is something about printer's ink that tends to make men manly; perhaps it is because printers are obliged to read much and to talk little. After six years of work as a "printer's devil," during which time the boy asked some millions of questions about printing and type composition, Theodore went to New York city intimately and became foreman in a printer's shop. He was 20 when he went to New York; 10 years later he was a partner in a great firm. When he was 55 he gave his name to the firm, whose work he had developed until the business was one of the most prosperous of its kind in the United States. He was 43 when he published his first important book, The Invention of Printing. From time to time he wrote new books on printing, and dignified it into a real art. The story of such a life is an illustration of what one can do if he labors whole-heartedly at the work that he finds ready for him. It is not the kind of work that counts, but the quality.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

James Henry Thomas, M. P., president of the National Union of Railway Men of England and Labor's chief spokesman in the great industrial crisis, has been a prominent figure in organized labor circles in Great Britain for nearly 20 years. He is a native of Wales and began his working career as an errand boy. Successively he became engine cleaner, fireman and locomotive engineer on the Great Western Railway. Now he is a Privy Councilor, one of the foremost political Labor Party leaders, and head of the most powerful and aggressive group of labor organizations in Britain. His rise in the political sphere has been rapid and notable. He did not enter Parliament until 1910, but the House of Commons quickly recognized that a new force was to be reckoned with. In important labor disputes Mr. Thomas's influence heretofore has always been on the side of conciliation so long as there appeared a chance of a peaceful settlement.

Stories That Recall Others

An Auto Piano

Four year old Isabel was playing the piano. Suddenly she looked down at the pedals and said, "Mother, what are those brakes for?"

First Wet, Then Dry

The advent of new problems of government and the slow growth of the law often give rise to peculiar situations where in an old law, designed for a certain purpose, becomes shaped into use for an entirely different purpose from the one for which it was intended. An illustration of such a situation is furnished by the efforts of the state and federal prohibition agents of one state concerning whiskey that was seized in 1921. A suit was brought to destroy the liquor by the government in a federal court in the form of a libel suit, under the admiralty law. The admiralty law originally dealt with confiscating contraband at sea, and other maritime measures. "It was a wet law originally," said the critic, "but now they're using it as a dry law."

Little Talks on Thrift

HABITS AND THRIFT

"Habit is second nature," said Montaigne, while a great Englishman, Lord Wellington, went even further and said, "Habit is ten times nature." There is an old proverb to the effect that it is "a thousand times easier to contract a new habit than to get rid of an old one."

The philosophers of the ages have given us observations as to the power and influence of habits and no one, we believe, will doubt the expediency of cultivating good habits and shunning those that are bad. We all can't follow the good advice of St. Augustine that "habits if not resisted soon become necessity."

What has all this to do with thrift? It has very much to do with it because those who set out to practice thrift have already won half the battle against bad habits.

There is no surer way of developing a system of life that is unbuilding and progressive than by practicing thrift. If you are thrifty you are not wasting your time in idleness nor your money in dissipation. You are not doing things that are tearing down your health. On the contrary you are spending your money, your time and your energies along lines that will be to your best interests.

But these are practices that should not be just of the hour or of the day. They must be systematic, habitual and therefore permanent.

The saving of one dollar in itself does not amount to so much. What really counts is the saving of one dollar regularly every month, every week or every day. It is the regularity of the practice not the amount involved that is helpful.

Learn to cultivate thrift, not for the mere saving of money, but as a habit that shall stabilize your entire system of living.—American Society for Thrift.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Farmer Brown's Boy is Upset

It takes a friend you've trusted to Upset you as naught else can do.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Just out of curiosity Farmer Brown's Boy went over to the young apple tree from which he had seen Johnny Chuck jump down. He knew that Johnny Chuck could climb, but seldom had he seen a Woodchuck in a tree. He wondered why Johnny had been up there. So he went over to the young tree to find out if he could.

Of course, when Farmer Brown's Boy got there he saw at once the mischief which Johnny Chuck had done. He gave a long, low whistle of surprise, in which a little anger was mingled. He examined that tree carefully. Johnny had bitten out the bark all the way around it, and he knew that that tree could not live. He knew that there would never be any apples on that tree.

"Now, what under the sun did the Woodchuck do this for?" muttered Farmer Brown's Boy. "He didn't need this bark for food. In fact, he hasn't eaten much of it. He has all the food he wants right close to his own home. Why, under the sun, should he ruin one of my trees? I wonder if he had some new teeth that he was trying out? That is the way it looks. Perhaps he was in a bad temper over something and took it out on the tree. Whatever his reason, he has succeeded in getting into mischief this time. I've been one of Johnny Chuck's best friends for a long time, but if he is going to kill my young apple trees I can't have him around. No sir, I can't have him around. He'll have to go some place where he'll do no harm."

Farmer Brown's Boy went hastily around among his other young apple trees and examined each one carefully. No harm had come to them as yet. Why Johnny Chuck had climbed that one tree and had knawed off the bark was more than he could understand. "It," said he, still talking to himself, "Peter Rabbit had come up to this young orchard and sampled the tender bark of the trees it wouldn't have surprised me at all. But it does surprise me to find Johnny Chuck doing anything like this. I'll keep an eye on that young fellow. If I see him up in one of these young trees again I'll get a trap for him and move him. He can't hurt the old apple trees, but he can kill these young trees without half trying. I can protect them from Mice and Rabbits by putting wire around the trunks, but if Johnny is going to be true to his Squirrel blood and turn climber, wire protectors will be of no use. Now, I've got to get a new tree to put in place of this one, and it will take a new tree two years to be as big and good as this one was before Johnny Chuck killed it. The little rascal!"

Farmer Brown's Boy went over to the house. He wasn't out of sight before Johnny Chuck was sitting on his doorsten. He watched Farmer Brown's Boy go, and it didn't once enter Johnny's head that he had almost made an enemy of Farmer Brown's Boy. No, sir, it didn't enter his head once. But he almost had done that very thing. You see, Farmer Brown's Boy had planted those young apple trees himself and he was looking to them to bring him in some money in a few years.

As for Chatterer the Red Squirrel, who was the cause of all this trouble, he had scampered over the Old Stone Wall, along the Old Stone Wall to the edge of the Green Forest, and now was his usual saucy, impudent self as he opened a nice cone to get the seeds. Already he had forgotten all about the scare that Johnny Chuck had given him by climbing that young apple tree after him. He was ready for new mischief now.

Will Help Air Lines

As was generally anticipated the Swedish government proposes again to subsidize the Junkerplane service of aerotransport between Malmo and Amsterdam and Between Malmo and Berlin.

The minister of communications is not inclined to support the proposed Gothenburg Malmo-Berlin and Gothenburg-Copenhagen services. The ambitious scheme for a direct line between Gothenburg and London, stopping at Bahjeus and Nordurnay, has also failed to gain official support. The official subsidies for civil air traffic this year will be the same as last—500,000 crowns (about $135,000)—but the loan fund will be raised from 500,000 crowns to 800,000 (about $150,000).

The above cut is of Commander Robert E. Byrd, who made a successful flight to the North pole and return Sunday.

"After 4 hours of baking see how cool my kitchen is"

With 400 degrees inside the oven the outside is only 10 degrees warmer than the rest of the kitchen because the heat is held in where it belongs.

A HOT oven usually means a hot kitchen. But now comes the Glenwood Insulated Oven to make your kitchen cooler in summer than it has ever been before. You can keep this oven at roasting heat indefinitely and three feet away you would hardly know the gas was turned on. Thick walls of mineral wool hold the heat inside where it belongs and prevent the waste radiation.

You won't find any scorching hot spots or half-heated corners in this oven. Put the food in anywhere at the top, sides or bottom and it will be cooked through as evenly as in an old-fashioned Dutch oven.

An Insulated Glenwood will give you a new idea of the year-round comfort and economy of doing all your cooking with gas.

As soon as the oven is hot enough, this Control turns down the gas and maintains exactly the right temperature until your cooking is done.

RABBI WISE MAKES STRONG ADDRESS ON WORLD PROBLEMS OF THE JEW

Coming here under the auspices of the Norwich Hebrew Institute and speaking at the Palace theatre Tuesday evening, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York held the close attention of an audience of between 500 and 600 as he spoke upon "The Problems of the Jew in the World Today."

Seated on the platform were Mayor Milo R. Waters, Samuel Taylor, chairman of the arrangements committee, Rabbi Max Stamm and Rabbi J. N. Rosenberg who introduced the speaker.

Introducing his subject, Rabbi Wise said that he felt the world was interested in the well being and the history of the Jews and their hope for the future. Without doing so in a boastful spirit it could be said that the Jews had had an incredible place in the development of the spiritual and moral life of mankind. They had been the first to lift the banner of ethical and spiritual monotheism. In a world of polytheism, of idol worship, in a world that dwelt in darkness, the Jew had raised this banner and his worship of God was bound up with his faith in the sovereignty of righteousness in the world. To that belief he had been utterly faithful and it had been no easy task. Through the ages the Jew had borne the burden of being misunderstood, but he had wrought all and suffered all for this impalpable idea of an invisible god. It was no wonder that he was misunderstood. The world was irritated by the inflexible patience of the Jew. The man who is faithful unto death rebuke those who do not know what it is to suffer and endure for an ideal. Some day, when history is re-written, without bias and prejudice, when people are just enough to face the truth and the whole truth, they will recognize that we have been the great spiritual benefactors of the race.

Rabbi Wise said that there were three places of which he wished to speak of the problem of the Jew today—in eastern and central Europe, in the western world and in America, and in the land of the Jew.

Before the war, he said, more than half of the Jewes in the world, were in eastern Europe, comprising Russia, Poland, Ukrania, Galicia and Roumania. From 55 to 65 per cent of the Jews were in the territory between the seas of the north and the seas of the south and 40 per cent of the Jews in the world were in Russia. My brother Jews there, he declared are not free men, politically, economically or religiously. Their status is an intolerable one. No religion is tolerated in any open manifestation in Russia for three million Jews. The information has come to me that children are even taught to spy on their own families so as to report upon their observance of religious customs.

In Poland taxes, burdens and discriminations are piled upon three million Jews, and one million are living in awful grinding poverty. Half the Jews of the world are in need of bread. But relief will not solve the problem. The problem in Poland will not be solved until Poland becomes Christianized in truth. What the Jews need is the Christianization of Christendom. Every discrimination against the Jew is a denial of Christianity. Where Christianity is professed in spirit, there anti-Semitism flourishes.

In Roumania the position of the Jew is intolerable politically. The minority rights guaranteed under the Versailles treaty are ignored. There is ceaseless and ruthless violation of Jewish rights in Roumans. One way to reach the problem is to try to arouse the conscience of the world in such a way as this, declared Rabbi Wise.

Coming to the place of the Jew in America, Rabbi Wise said that the Jew is not here on sufferance. He is here because of the genius of America which gives to him the right to become builders of American life and American institutions. A man becomes an American not when his feet touch the soil, but when the soul of America touches him. America is not a heritage, but an achievement. In America, thank God, the Jew asks no ranks, seeks no favor, no immunities, nor exemptions, but asks only to live as a group of American citizens ever ready to give themselves to the commonwealth with all their hearts and souls. We Jews, said Rabbi Wise, are unhappy in only one thing in America, when we are looked upon as foreigners. "The genius of America is to translate the stranger into the citizen. I have unlimited faith in the fair play of America and the man who will never succeed is the one who thinks of dividing America."

Speaking of the Jew in Palestine where for 500 years nothing had grown but Turkish oppression and Ottoman taxation, Rabbi Wise referred to the difference he had seen in that land at the time of his two visits there in 1918 and 1922. The speaker's reference to Dr. Theodor Herzl, who first had the vision of Palestine restored as a homeland for the Jews was enthusiastically applauded as was also his mention of Hadassah, the organization formed by women in America which had wrought a miracle of the healing in Palestine. There is now a Jewish population of 160,000 in Palestine, these people marching out of the hell of eastern Europe into the heaven of their own making in Palestine. For the first time in 1,900 years of exile they will create a free Jewish life. I believe, concluded Rabbi Wise, that we are on the eve of a great ethical, spiritual creation created by the Jews and out of Zion shall go forth the law, a new law, a higher law than the world has ever known.

Returned to New York

Long continued applause greeted the close of the address and at the suggestion of Rabbi Rosenberg the audience gave a rising vote of thanks to Rabbi Wise, who then hurried from the hall and was taken to New London by automobile so that he might catch the night boat for New York as he is to make an address in New York at the dedication of a statue of Roger Williams.

Upon the arrival of Rabbi Wise in New London Tuesday afternoon at 5:01 standard time he was met at the railroad station by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Taylor, Mrs. J. N. Rosenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Land and M. I. Silverman, representing the Norwich committee and a delegation of about 15 New London Zionists. Mrs. Wise did not accompany her husband because of an engagement in New York for Wednesday which prevented her coming.

Rabbi Wise was the guest at supper of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Taylor at their home on Broadway with Rabbi and Mrs. Rosenberg, Rabbi Stamm and Mr. Silverman.

To the members of the committee he expressed his wish that they should convey to the Norwich clergymen his appreciation of their courtesy in giving pulpit notices of his lecture.

DIVORCE FOR CRUELTY GRANTED LEBANON WOMAN

At the superior court session in this city Tuesday, Judge Earnest C. Simpson on the bench, Mrs. Mary (Swertsai) Barry, 61, of Lebanon, was granted a divorce from Fred Barry, alias Ferdinand Barry, 57. The divorce was granted on grounds of cruelty and intemperance which commenced shortly after their marriage October 13, 1923.

In her testimony Mrs. Barry said she married Barry after six or seven weeks of courtship. She knew he was a drinking man but thought she could reform him. He was married twice before and this was her first marriage. Barry, according to the witness, is now in jail.

When the case was called Attorney C. V. James, counsel for the defense, informed the court that Barry was unable to be present as he is in the county jail and asked a continuance of the case. When Judge Simpson said he would have Barry appear in court Mr. James stated that his client wasn't able to and didn't want to come, so trial of the case was ordered.

Mrs. Barry, called to the stand, related the various occasions when her husband struck her while he was intoxicated. On one occasion he discolored her eye and marred her face. Mrs. Barry said that her husband told her that the next time he hit her she'd knock her so flat she'd never get up.

On another occasion he grabbed her around the neck and started to choke her. She had him arrested three times and each time he received a jail sentence and a fine. Barry is now serving time for assaulting John Baker with an axe.

Mrs. Barry claimed she married him because the neighbors spoke highly of him. She said that if he had given up drink after their marriage she had promised to give him a share in her farm at Lebanon. On cross examination counsel tried to substantiate defendant's defense that the plaintiff had continued his acts and that they were living together peacefully. Mrs Barry denied this saying that she told him to get out, but he stayed. She was sick and could not put him out.

Justices of the Peace William T. Curry and John Hinnard read court records in regard to the times Barry had been presented before them and the records including the disposition of the several cases, each including fines and jail sentences.

Elmer Lord, grand juror, told of drawing up the complaints against Barry. Deputy Sheriff George H. Hoxie told of arresting Barry on these occasions and told of seeing marks inflicted by Barry on his wife. Mrs Charlotte Marsh also testified for the plaintiff.

After the arguments by counsel Judge Simpson granted the divorce and court adjourned until Wednesday.

WHITE LEGHORNS SET NEW WEEKLY RECORD

A new record in weekly pen production in the Storrs Egg Laying Contest was set up during the 27th week, when the ten White Leghorn pullets from Girard, Pa., laid a total of 68 of a possible 70 eggs for the week. This is the best weekly record ever made at Storrs, and it is one that is likely to stand for some time to come. This is one egg better than the record of the Barred Rock entry of Fairfield Farms from Short Falls, N. H.

The Tolvonen pullets laid ten eggs Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; nine eggs Thursday and Friday; and ten eggs to finish the week on Saturday. Their score of 68 for the week is a lay of 97 per cent. Of further interest in connection with the performance of these birds is the fact that they laid ten eggs the last day of the 26th week, and the same number the first day of the 28th week. In other words during the first nine days of May, these Tolvonen Leghorns laid 88 of a possible 90 eggs. This is a lay of 98 per cent. for that period.

Production went up during the 27th week, with the 1400 pullets laying 6,115 eggs, or slightly over 42 per cent. This is a gain of 408 eggs over the production for the previous week, and 178 eggs more than the lay for the corresponding week a year ago. A grand total of 114 991 eggs were laid during the first 27 weeks of competition, which is a lay of 83 eggs per bird.

After Tolvonen's Leghorns, the next best record for the week was made by the Barred Rock entry of Ontario Agricultural College from Guelph, Ont., with a lay of 63 eggs. Third place was taken by the Winlay White Wyandottes from Mystic, Conn., with a score of 61 eggs. Fourth place saw two pens tied with a score of 60 eggs each. They are the Barred Rocks entered by Merritt M. Clark from Brookfield Center, Conn., and the White Leghorns entered by R. W. Colman from Madison, N. Y.

John Z. LaBelle's Rhode Island Reds from Ballouville, Conn., led the contest with a total score of 1328 eggs. This is 106 eggs more than the record made by the Tolvonen Leghorns. A study of the rate of lay in these two pens shows that the Connecticut Reds are by no means secure in their position, however. During the week, the Tolvonen Leghorns gained 21 eggs on their Connecticut rivals, which means the Leghorns will make the race more interesting in the next few weeks. In 15 years, May has with one exception always been the big month in egg production, and present indications are that this year's contest flock will live up to past performances.

LIQUOR SOLD ON GROUNDS HARTFORD MUNICIPAL HOME

HARTFORD, May 11.—(AP)—Inmates of the municipal home have bought liquor on the grounds of that institution, Superintendent Herbert Grant Bailey told members of the charity board tonight. Trouble with bootleggers hovering in Keney park led them to sell substitutes for liquor to those of the Holcomb street institution has been of more than a year's duration, he charged.

Several cases lately have been brought to his attention with the resulting discharge of the men involved. This included two employes of the institution who were discharged recently for having liquor on the grounds. Superintendent Bailey blamed the beverages the men are drinking for a situation he termed "very dangerous."

"While the police department is supposed to stop the sale of liquor the men obtain it, are picked up by the police and go through court proceedings, some of them," he explained. "Others are arrested for drunkenness have been drinking poisonous stuff and police are afraid to hold them in cells because they might die. So they are turned back to us. Before prohibition it took about two weeks of drunkenness to put a man of this type in the condition that now a few drinks can effect. They drink various mixtures which contain a high percentage of alcohol. And every day we have doctors pumping out their stomachs, some time a half dozen a day."

TO STUDY ENCROACHMENT ON RIGHTS OF STATES

HARTFORD, May 11—(AP)—Governor Trumbull has appointed a committee to investigate the possibility of the federal government's encroachment on state rights through its system of inheritance taxation an dto study the matter of federal grants or joint levies.

Members of the committee, who will report their recommendations and findings to the governor before January 1, 1927, are Senator Frederic C. Walcott, of Norfolk, Harrison Hewitt, of New Haven; George T. Kimball, of New Britain and Elijah Rogers of Southington.

The problem of federal death or inheritance taxation which was recently brought to the attention of the public by the provisions of the federal revenue act of 1926 in relation to the inheritance tax, "appears to be an encroachment upon the rights of the states," Governor Trumbull stated in his letter of appointment.

DUWELL MARATHON RACE HAS BEEN THROWN OPEN TO ALL AMATEURS

The five mile marathon to be run on Memorial day afternoon by the Duwell A. A. has been thrown open to all amateur runners whether they come from Eastern Conn. or not. When it was announced about a month ago that this race was to be held on Memorial day the entries were limited to Eastern Conn. As the entries have been coming in rather slowly, several claiming that they could not enter as the time in which to train was too short and again several requests have been received from amateur runners from cities outside of the jurisdiction of eastern Connecticut asking if they would be permitted to run, it has been found advisable to hold entry open to all amateur runners. It is felt that quite a large field will be secured in this way as there are many boys in the larger cities who are always in training for events of this kind. While the race is now open to all amateur runners it will not effect the awarding of prizes to those representing eastern Connecticut as there are many prizes which have been donated by the various lodges and organizations in the city and in addition to awarding prizes for the winners, prizes will also be awarded to boys from Eastern Connecticut.

The way that the organizations and lodges are cooperating with the Duwell club by awarding prizes has been remarkable, about a dozen prizes being donated already with promise of several more to come and by the time the day of the race draws near the runners will have an assortment of prizes to compete for as ever has been offered for an event of this kind.

Following the race there will be a concert and baseball game at the Duwell field so that those coming to Norwich on that day will be provided with plenty of entertainment. Entries are requested to address Shorts, care Duwell A. A.

WALKER CUP TEAM ARRIVES IN ENGLAND

LONDON, May 11.—(AP)—The American Walker cup golf team, headed by Bob Gardner of Chicago, disembarked from the Aquitania today to find England deeply concerned over the general industrial dispute which may interfere with their international match against Great Britain.

No decision has been made to call off the contest, but the atmosphere of uncertainty indicates that British officials have sidetracked golf problems for the greater task of overcoming the obstacles of the strike.

Giving up hope of reaching London by train, the Americans boarded automobiles, pushing over roads which recalled war time conditions for the traffic of food trucks, lorries loaded with tinhatted soldiers and motorcycle dispatch riders.

The members of the team said they had expected an enjoyable voyage and were confident of retaining the cup.

Suppression of the "press" rather than the strike itself is blamed for calling off the first match in which the Americans were to play for charity. Officials considered it would be impossible to draw a worth while audience. The contest was to have pitted Ouimet and Jones against Mitchell and Duncan, the British professionals, for the benefit of the prince of Wales hospital fund.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE MEETING IS AGAIN POSTPONED

The meeting scheduled to be held at the Duwell rooms last night was postponed one week as only four teams were represented and it was decided advisable to have all those intending to enter the league present before proceeding with any of the league business. This makes the second time that a league meeting has had to be postponed and if Norwich is to have any twilight ball this year it is about time that the managers got together and decided what they intend to do.

The teams represented last night were the Thermos Co., Yantic, St. Joseph's and the East Ends. At the last meeting the Boston Colored Stars announced their intentions of entering but were not on hand last night, whether the Eastern Conn. power will enter a team this year is still undecided and it is hoped that by the next meeting some word will be heard from this team which proved so popular last year. Manager Holland who last year managed the pennant winning Centrals announced last night that it would be doubtful as to whether he would enter a team this year. Should the Centrals decide not to enter the league they no doubt will be missed as they proved a real snappy team throughout the season last year.

ADVOCATES WITHDRAWAL OF WOMEN FROM ATHLETICS

NEW YORK, May 11.—(AP)—A virtual ending of athletic competition for young women was urged today at the second day session of the convention of the women's division of the Amateur Athletic association.

Elimination of rules, written for men for various sports, and the removal of the championship idea from women's colleges were advocated.

The speakers agreed more attention should be paid to the kind of athletic and physical training suited to the individual than to the "ruthless physical destruction" which was attributed to the work on women's football and basketball teams.

While declaring that all girls have some form of athletics, the speakers felt this exercise should be for the purpose of physical benefit rather than take the form of effort to become stars win medals or vanquish other schools.

The harmful factors in women's athletics Miss Lillian Schoedler, executive secretary of the organization, said are development of girls for football teams who forcing them to play basketball with the rules used by men.

NEW LONDON SILK MILL MAY CLOSE, AS RESULT OF WEAVERS' STRIKE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 11—There is a likelihood that, as a result of the strike of weavers at the plant of the Edward Bloom Silk company, Garfield avenue, because of a refusal to grant an increase in wages, the mill will be abandoned and that all of the machinery, will be transferred to the mill at New Britain. It is known that the machinery, or at least a portion of it is being dismantled, but inquiry at the mill this afternoon as to whether the mill would be abandoned here brought the reply that President Bloom was out of town and that he had authorized no information to be given out. When Mr. Bloom would return to New London it was not known, but he was expected back here Wednesday.

TENTH LIEN IS FILED AGAINST THEATRE BUILDERS

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 11—Another mechanics lien was levied against the 225 State Street Corporation today when Deputy Sheriff Manuel J. Martin caused notice to be served on City Clerk Julian D. Moran to that effect, filing a copy of the process with that official. The lien is in favor of the Clark Construction Co., Waterbury, the contracting firm erecting the State street theatre. The lien is for $28,800.05 and with the nine other liens levied against the corporation makes the total amount of the liens about $50,000.

WILLIAM COMAN IN BAD, NO MATTER HOW TRIAL GOES

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 11—The continued case of William Coman, charged with jumping his bond, is slated for hearing in the police court tomorrow. In some respects the case is an unusual one. Coman in 1922 was arrested by former Central Vermont railroad Special Agent Evans Joyner, charged with robbing from a freight car, Joseph Rezepnewski. Main street merchant, became surety on Coman's bond of $1,000 and while awaiting trial Coman left the city. He returned to New London Sunday and was arrested. In the police court Monday the case was continued until Tuesday. Coman's bondsman will be in court Tuesday for the purpose of surrendering the bond and unless Coman procures another surety he will be remanded to jail to await trial of the freight car theft at the September term of the superior court. Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollanderaky has conferred with state's Attorney Arthur M. Brown on the matter.

DROVE ACROSS TRACKS, DID NOT HEAR FREIGHT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 11—Peter J. Smith, about 45, residing at Shelter Island, N. Y., and employed by the Consolidated Fisheries company, New York, as watchman of its fleet of fishing craft moored at the Thames Marine railways, is a patient at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital. He is suffering from a fractured skull sustained late yesterday when the automobile he was operating was struck by a Central Vermont railroad freight train. Smith has been unconscious since admitted to the institution and he has been placed on the critical list.

Smith had concluded his labors when the accident occurred and was intending to drive to his lodging house. When the machine was about to be driven from the yard to the highway leading to Mohegan avenue, the freight train was approaching, but Smith did not hear it and instead of waiting for the train to pass the auto was operated to the tracks. In another instant the pilot of the locomotive struck the car. Smith was hurled from the automobile. He was picked up unconscious by the train crew and taken to the office of the Thames Towboat company where he was given emergency treatment and then was moved to the hospital. The automobile was completely wrecked, being left fit for the junk heap.

Thomas Daly, 62, of 180 Howard street, died at Home Memorial hospital late yesterday having been under treatment but a short time. He had been ailing for some time, but not until about a week ago was he admitted to the hospital. Mr. Daly was a stone polisher and for a number of years was employed at the Booth Brothers Hurricane quarry, Millstone, Waterford. He is survived by three sons, Bartholomew Daly, New Haven; Thomas Daly of Fort Worth, Tex., and John Daly of Dayton, Ohio and by two daughters, Mrs. P. V. Magner and Mrs. Walter Courtney of this city.

There were three drunks in the police court this morning. They were all arrested by Policeman Philopenas. Patrick Murphy and Branislaw Pizylawski were released on suspended judgments. Henry Irwin sprang the time-worn Fishers Island story on the court and was fined $3. Judge Prince concluded that New London would be well off when it got rid of Henry so he fined him and then gave him a chance to get out of town by suspending execution of the judgment. He made it plain to Irwin that if he was found in the city tonight he would be sent to jail.

Fred I. Fabricant was fined $5 for parking his automobile in restricted area on the north side of State street for more than thirty minutes. Fabricant admitted that he had previously been warned not to park his car where a city ordinance forbade parking.

Former Alderman Thomas W. Casey, now residing in Providence, was in town today for a brief visit. He is in the stone business in Providence, as he was when in New London.

Councilor James A. May started this morning for a vacation of two weeks, which will be spent in New York state and the west. He expected to be in Syracuse tonight and then to go to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, thence to Detroit. The councilor is a nephew of Rt. Msgr. Michael H. May of Norwich.

The Connecticut Power company is placing new poles at various points about the city to accommodate its business.

The Messer building on Bank street, in process of remodelling, will probably be ready for occupancy in a fortnight. The strike of carpenters has not interfered to great extent with the work, as it is understood that the owner of the property paid something extra to the workers to continue at their labors. Plasterers are rushing along their part of the work and will finish in a day or two.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles H. B. Stoeckel today ordered the operator's license of Nathan Sanzer, 114 North Bank street, recently suspended, to the owner.

Robert W. Holmes has sold to Barney Belgrade a house and lot on Willetta avenue.

Michael H. Donahue, of Sprague, executor of the will of Ann J. Donahue, has sold a cottage on the boardwalk, Ocean Beach, to Sidney Syman.

Samuel Freeman has sold a building lot on Gorton street to Harry Libby.

The funeral of Kreszenia, widow of Jacob Ackerman, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her residence, 16 Perry street, and was attended by many mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. Philip M. Kerridge, rector of St. James' Episcopal church. The bearers were John Crouch, Sturgis Bezaneon, James Smith and Arthur Calvert. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

The funeral of Hattie E., wife of James Halloran, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, a mass of requiem being celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. The bearers were George Fuller, Charles Randall, Walter and Arthur Richards. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Emilia Shirley, 74, wife of Judson Shirley of 61 West street, died late yesterday at Home Memorial hospital, having been under treatment at the institution but about a half hour, death resulting from an internal trouble, followed by pneumonia. She is survived, besides her husband, by two sons, Albert J. Shirley, Pawtucket, R. I., and Everett C. Shirley, this city, and by two daughters, Mrs. B. F. Helm, this city and Mrs. A. D. Fay, Bridgeport. Mrs. Shirley had been confined to her home several days but yesterday afternoon her condition necessitated her removal to the hospital. Mrs. Shirley was born in Canterbury, but had resided in New London about 25 years.

Mrs. Donald Corcoran and infant daughter, of 19 Darrow street; Mrs. William Smith and infant daughter, 26 Franklin street; Mrs. George Strickland and infant daughter, 15 Colver street; Mrs. Charles Morrill, Main street, and Mrs. Rachel Fontaine, of Norwich, patients at Lawrence hospital, were dismissed today.

Simon C. Nelksen, 262 Quinnipiac avenue, New Haven, is scheduled to be in the police court tomorrow morning charged with violation of the city's parking laws. He is charged with parking overtime on State street and as he was tagged about two weeks ago for the same offense and then released with a warning, he will be prosecuted tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Phillips have returned to New Haven, having spent several days as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sol Ochoneff.

Fred Furst has returned to New York, after having spent several days as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown, Clark lane, Waterford.

A fleet of submarines of the S type are bound from Havana to the submarine base here. The craft, which cleared Havana yesterday will make a stop at Annapolis and then continue to this port. Included among the submarines are the S-10, 11, 12, 19, 21, 22, and 23. The submarines are accompanied by the tenders Bushnell and Camden, the latter flagship of the control forces. When the numerous boats arrive in New London the bluejackets already stationed here will be increased about 600.

Yacht Halcyon, pilothi craft of Dupree Wilcox Flint, of Providence, was launched from the ways of the Thames Marine railways this afternoon after having been overhauled prior to going into commission. The Halcyon was damaged well forward several months ago, when she was rammed by one of the steamers of the Central Vermont line, in the lower harbor.

The condition of Fire Chief Charles Rose, who suffered a fractured leg a week ago when his automobile was struck by one of the trucks of the Eastern Dairies Co., while Chief Rose was responding to a fire, is reported this evening at Lawrence hospital as being more comfortable than at any time since the patient was admitted to the institution for treatment. Any chance for infection developing, it is believed, has now passed.

Commuters between New London and Groton have been inconvenienced throughout today and tonight because of the service accorded the patrons of the Groton-New London ferry boat. The regular boat, the Mohican is out of service for the purpose of inspection and repairs and the steamer Maidstone, which has been used two days for transporting foot passengers only, became disabled this forenoon, with the result that commuters were forced to resort to automobiles or trolley cars in order to reach either side of the river. The trouble with the Maidstone is a faulty gasket in the cylinder. It is expected that repairs will have been completed so that the craft can resume scheduled trips early Wednesday.

Otto Lesch, of Cross street, has sold a farm on North road, Poquonoc Bridge, Groton, to A. Sadowsky, formerly of Ledyard.

Little or no information has come for several days from the area of the sinking of the submarine S1 off Block Island, so it is not known here what progress has been made in the work preparatory to raising that unfortunate craft. It was expected that news of the progress of the work would be made known daily, but that has not been the case.

Some idea of the number of automobiled in use in this city was obtained by pedestrians who moved along Bank and State street last evening. The walks on both sides of the streets were bordered with automobiles, hundreds of them and the line extended into the side streets. The vehicles represented an outlay of several hundred thousand dollars.

Blossoms on apple and peach trees are struggling against the cool weather and not making much progress at that. The magnolias and the swamp apple shrubs have bloomed and some of the blossoms have gone by.

It was an agreeable surprise to owners of real estate to have the city council decide that the expenses of the city could be met at a 27 1-2 mills tax for the fiscal year, for it had been announced that an advance of two mills was to be made in the tax rate. Last year the rate was 26 1-2 mills and word came from the city manager that the advance this year was to be two mills. One dollar a thousand is not a great cut, but it is a "cut" and even a small saving is desirable to an advance in the cost of government.

A member of the council is authority for the statement that the plan for the widening of Bank street has been abandoned for a considerable time, if indeed it is revised within the life of the present council. He said that the expense would be very much larger than anyone contemplated at present and that it would be even larger than was imaginable. He was in doubt as to the benefit to be derived from the so-called improvement that could not be attained by other means.

Your own physician can approve (should there be any doubt in his mind) that the safety of this formula we will gladly mail him a free box of SAN-GRI-NA for analysis upon his request. Do not expect a reduction over night, but a definite, logical loss of generally from three to four pounds a week should be obtained, leaving you stronger and healthier week after week.

Broadway Theater

When the son of a millionaire takes a job as bellhop in a hotel and meets a girl, who has just won a prize of a thousand dollars and is masquerading as a Countess, things are bound to happen.

And they do happen, fast and furious, in Her Big Adventure which will open at the Broadway theater tomorrow. The picture is packed with action and unique situations that will keep the audience guessing and gasping in turn, according to advance reports.

It is a comedy crook melodrama containing all of the elements of good clean entertainment and is ideally suited to Herbert Rawlinson, who plays the leading role. He is supported by the winsome and popular Grace Darmond.

There will also be five new Keith-Albee vaudeville acts starting Thursday, featuring the best entertainment of the variety stage.

Breed Theater

Milton Sills in a new role, that of a woman hater, comes to the screen at the Breed theater today and Thursday, in The Unguarded Hour. First National's latest vehicle for this star and a splendid picture in all respects.

Sills is his usual self in this picture. He plays the role of the Italian duke to perfection, and despite dress suits and the trappings and surroundings of a nobleman he breaks forth with some of the "he-man" stuff which Sills' fans so admire and swims fearlessly out into the sea and rescues Miss Kenyon with the ease and grace of an expert life saver. Then, armed only with his bare fists, he takes a sword from Charles Beyer, who has the thankless role of the villain, and drives him backward over a balcony rail to his death because Beyer betrayed Sills' screen sister, Lorna Duveen.

The Unguarded Hour is the story of a wealthy American girl who goes to Italy and by her unconventional American ways tames this woman hating duke and brings him to his feet. There is a thrilling airplane crash, in which Doris lands unceremoniously in the duke's back yard. There are a couple of thrilling water scenes, some powerful, tense drama that will hold any patron of the screen art to say nothing of a lot of very excellent comedy. Incidentally, we never knew Dorothy Kenyon was such a comedienne. She furnishes a lot of it in this picture and does it to the queen's taste.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Two features make up the program at the Palace for the last showings today. His Jazz Bride features Marie Prevost and Matt Moore. The Golden Cocoon features Huntley Gordon and Helene Chadwick. Thursday, Friday and Saturday the Palace management promises an unusually big vaudeville bill of five acts and a great picture attraction.

Straining thoroughbreds in the stretch! Jockeys in flaming colors, crouched over their mounts! Laboring lungs and taut muscles! Flaring nostrils. Great hearted horses, expending their last ounce of courage, their last gasping breath, in a neck and neck finish as they flash past the judges stand! That is the opening of "King of the Turf" the F. B. O. production which will come to the Palace theatre on Thursday for a three day run. And the climax, even more exciting than the "race on the flat" which begins this stirring classic of horsedom, is a steeplechase—the most sensational of races! Louis Joseph Vance and John Brownell have turned over great material in this story to J. Grubb Alexander, for transportation to the screen. James Hogan has taken Mr. Alexander's scenario and put to vivid relief the characters and situations.

Hupp 8 Pleases British Expert

Edgar N. Duffield, British automobile authority, is enthusiastic over the Hupmobile Eight, which he recently put through its paces over British roads. Writing in The Auto, leading English motor magazine, he says in part:

"I am nothing if not candid. I have never sat behind a more wonderful motor than this of the Hupp. Until its air-intake was really fierce I could not hear the engine, and even when the car was running at a pace which I have not the hardihood to mention in cold printer's ink, there was only the faintest sibilance of the carburetor to be heard.

"Of course the engine will run very slowly. It should. One expects good slow-running from such an engine. But the surprise, to me, was the remarkable stream of power available. That there should be plenty of power from an engine of such volume was intelligible; but the joke was that even when the yield was at its most sensational, this engine was still a pattern of refinement.

"There are very few faster cars on the road than a Hupp straight eight. I wondered if the speedometer-reading was dependable, because when this car is progressing at quite an immoral pace she rides so sweetly as to feel not at all fast. I therefore checked the meter by Portsmouth road milestones, to find it as near right as makes no odds. I do not doubt it now; but that makes only safer my statement that there are very few cars on our roads potentially faster than a Hupp straight eight. Her acceleration from 25 to 5 miles per hour is electrical, and as free from fuss or noise as can be wished.

The Candid Congressman

Congress might as well adjourn, as we have no money to spend," Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut.

"I'm here for my constituents," said Congressman Moffit,
"To guard the People's interests and serve the People's will.
To kill bad legislation and to pass constructive laws
And keep the public purse from the raw grafters' greedy jaws.
I've sacrificed my own affairs at great financial loss.
To come and put the Prompts of Romany across.
I'm not upon the floor today. The House is sitting but
The session's not of interest—the Budget has been cut!"

"I hold it is my duty," shouted Congressman De Bunk,
"To serve the Nation as a whole, with intellect and spunk;
To watch lest campaigners, corrupt and thieves break in and steal—
To work for no one district, but the mighty Commonweal.
My aim is to be present every day and every hour
To fight the Common People and to curb the Money Power.
I think an Extra Session should be called—but now I learn
There's no Appropriation, so we might as well adjourn."

The attitude is common—but it greatly
To his credit
That while these patriots thought it, the ingenuous Yankee said it!

—By Ted Robinson, "Philosopher of Folly," in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Grizzly

Coward—of heroic size,
In whose lazy muscles lies
Strength we fear and yet despise;
Savage—whose relentless tusks
Are content with acorn husks;
Hobbes—whose exploits ne'er soared
O'er the bee's or squirrel's board;
Whiskered chin, and feeble nose,
Claws of steel on baby toes—
Here, in solitude and shade,
Shambling shuffling plantigrade,
Be thy courses undismayed!

Here, where nature makes thy bed,
Let thy rude, half-human tread
Point to hidden Indian springs,
Lost in farms and fragrant grasses,
Hovered o'er by timid wings,
Where the woodchuck lightly passes
Where the wild bee holds her sweets,
Spoilsman retreats,
Fit for thee, and better than
Fearful spoils of dangerous man,
In thy fat-pawled devilry
Friar Tuck shall live in thee;
Thou mayst levy tithe and dole;
Thou shalt spread the woodland cheer,
From the pilgrim taking toll;
Match thy cunning with his fear;
Eat, and drink, and have thy fill;
Yet remain an outlaw still!

—Francis Bret Harte.

STOCK MARKET DULL

NEW YORK, May 11.—(AP)—Backing and filling movements characterized today's dull stock market, with both the rail and industrial averages closing slightly higher on the day. Most professional operators appeared to be in a waiting mood, with opinion rather general that the market would not break out of its present trading area until some decisive development took place in the British strike situation.

Motors were again subjected to selling pressure and Chandler, Cleveland, Dodge Brothers A, and Jordan were depressed to new low levels for the year. General Motors, Hudson and Studebaker showed mixed fractional changes. Rumors were current that the General Motors directors, at their meeting Thursday would make an offer for the minority holdings of Fisher Body by offering one share of General Motors for 1 1-2 shares of Fisher Body and would declare an extra dividend of $3 or $4 a share on General Motors stock. Studebaker reported record-breaking April sales.

Further weakness also developed in the rubber group, new low levels for the year being reached by U. S. Rubber common, and Ajax.

Rails displayed a firm undertone with special attention being drawn to operating economies achieved by the principal system in the last few years. While net changes, as a rule, were small, net gains of a point or more were recorded by such issues as Atchison, Atlantic Coast Line, Canadian Pacific, Chicago Great Western preferred, St. Louis Southwestern, Seaboard Air Line preferred, Union Pacific and Texas & Pacific. The statement of President Harrison of the Southern Railway that 1926 earnings should be as good as those of 1925 resulted in a temporary flurry of buying which sent the common stock up to 110 1-2, but it slipped back later to 108 3-4, up 1-2 net.

Activity in the oils was confined largely to Colorado Fuel and Panhandle Producers and Refiners, both of which were bid up to new high levels for the year. Private reports of another increase in crude oil productions last week were disregarded.

A strong under current of buying was apparent in a number of specialties. Among them American International corporation, the Commercial Solvents issues, Continental Can, International Paper, International Telephone, Pullman, Third Avenue, Railway and U. S. Distributing. Radio Corporation, one of the most active stocks on the list, was run up to a new high on the current movement at 46 and then dropped back to 43, off 1 net. Dupont closed 4 points lower at 207 1-4 and Mathieson Alkali fell back 2 1-2 points.

The wheat market was quick to respond to reports that peace negotiations were going on under the surface for a settlement of the British strike. Wheat futures rallied 1 to nearly 2 1-2 cents a bushel. The May option closing at $1.63 7-8 as against $1.61 1-2 yesterday. Option declined 2 to 16 points in featureless trading. Raw sugar was unchanged but futures eased slightly. Coffee was slightly firmer.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent and then eased to 3 1-2, closing at the bottom figure. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Demand sterling ruled nearly 3-4 cent higher around $4.85 9-16 and most of the continental exchanges held firm in quiet trading. French francs were quoted around 4-14 cents and Belgian francs ruled about 7 points higher around 3.12 cents.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, May 11.—(AP)—Moderate improvement in bond prices today reflected satisfaction with the trend of money conditions and a belief that a peaceful settlement of the British strike was near. The market, however, failed to break out of the narrow trading area in which it has drifted for the past week.

Definite signs of easier credit conditions were seen in the lowering of call rates as well as the willingness of leaders to arrange longer term accommodations at the prevailing quotations for time money. This was interpreted as an indication that funds would remain plentiful for the rest of the year, unless a sudden expansion of trade should develop in the fall.

Renewed accumulation of foreign bonds expressed the changed outlook for the investment community regarding conditions abroad. Both United Kingdom 5 1-2 per cent issues sold about a point above their recent low levels, while French and Italian obligations were snapped up at fractionally higher prices. Belgian 6s and 6 1-2s, however, were unsettled by the formation of a new cabinet with a supplemental committee to study the nation's financial problems. Most of the advances in domestic liens were attributed to selective buying which had been deferred until market conditions gave signs of returning to normal. Public utilities were in good demand, with Northern States Power 5s mounting more than a point to a 1926 top price at 101, and International Telephone 5 1-2 following an upturn in the stock. Local traction issues also attracted buyers on reports that bus franchises would soon be allotted.

Illinois Steel 4 1-2s, Cuba Company 6s and Skelly Oil 6 1-2s also proved popular, scoring gains of more than a point each. International Mercantile Marine 6s were temporarily depressed by the announcement that negotiations for the sale of the White Star Line were held in abeyance pending a settlement of the British strike, but they rallied briskly toward the close.

Public offering will be made tomorrow of $10,000,000 Indianapolis Power & Light corporation six per cent bonds at 98 and $7,500,000 Pickering Lumber company 20-year 6s at par.

Other offerings tomorrow will include $15,000,000, 15-year, 6 per cent first mortgage bonds for the Indiana Limestone company, priced at 99 and $1,500,000 six per cent serial bonds for the Berkey & Gay Furniture company, priced to yield six per cent for most of the maturities. A $1,100,000 issue of preferred stock also will be sold for the Berkey & Gay company, the proceeds from both offerings being applied to the acquisition of the Wallace Furniture company and the Grand Rapids Upholstering company.

TAFTVILLE

The funeral of Roger Scott was held Tuesday morning at 8:30 from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Scott of Norwich avenue, followed by a high mass of requiem sung at Sacred Heart church by Rev. John Malley. There were many beautiful floral forms, and the children's choir sang under the direction of Miss Alice Frechette, the organist. The pupils of the Sacred Heart school attended the service in a body, and four of the little boy's classmates acted as honorary bearers. The bearers were Donat Ducharme, Conrad Ducharme, Alexander Davignon and Odell Dubruell. Burial was in the Sacred Heart cemetery on the Old Canterbury turnpike where Rev. U. O. Bellerose read the committal service. The arrangements were in charge of Undertaker George G. Grant.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Mather, and their daughter, Miss Mabel Mather of North A street, and William Shea of Occum road left Tuesday morning in Mr. Shea's car for Cleveland. The party will take the Genessee trail to Buffalo, and then go by boat to Cleveland, where they will visit relatives of Mrs. Mather for the next two weeks.

Regis Paradis of Hunters avenue has resigned his position with the fine spinning department of Ponemah mills, and has entered the employ of Smith Brothers Co.

Troop 4, Boy Scouts held an interesting meeting Monday evening in the recreation rooms of the Taftville Congregational church, with Scoutmaster Victor H. Davis in charge. Next week, a lecture on bird study has been arranged and Scoutmaster Davis has invited all the men and boys of the church school to be present. The talk will be along the lines of identifying our native birds, and will include descriptions of their habits calls, nesting, etc.

Alfred Moreau of South A street is spending a few days in Quebec, Canada.

The beautiful carnations at the morning service of the Taftville Congregational church Sunday, were the gift of the Young Peoples Society of Christian Endeavor, in observance of Mother's day.

GAVE ENTERTAINING LECTURE FOR THE ART ASSOCIATION

The May meeting of the Norwich Art association was held Monday evening in Slater hall annex.

Following the business session a delightful talk on Glimpses of India, was given by Miss Hannah Crowell who has recently returned from that country.

Landing at Bombay, the speaker vividly described the crowded streets, the Parsis in their colorful costumes, the impressing railway station known as the Victoria terminus, the municipal offices, department stores, etc. In no country she maintained, is it so easy to plunge from the world of today, into the remote past and back again as it is in India.

The ride from Bombay to Miraj is one of the most charming in the country; here is the hospital admirably conducted by the Presbeterian board of missions. A visit was made at Benaree, the most sacred of all cities to the Hindus where so many old people go to die; believing it will insure their future happiness. Rosa, Delhi and all points of special interest were visited and graphically described.

The talk was generously illustrated and the pictures of temples, mosques, residences and gardens were of unusual beauty.

At Kohispur an informal chat with his highness the Maharajah was enjoyed by the tourists.

Interesting and amusing personal experiences enlivened the lecture which was one of the most entertaining of the season.

COAL MOTOR TRUCK COLLIDED WITH TROLLEY

A large auto truck owned by the Shetucket Coal and Lumber company collided with a trolley car Tuesday morning on North Main street near the junction of Boswell avenue. The truck was driven by Dominic Falcone and had turned off Boswell avenue towards the city on North Main street. The trolley car was approaching in the opposite direction. Both the truck and car were somewhat damaged by the impact. No one was hurt.

Birthday Surprise Shower

Monday evening the Rainbow club met, with the president, Miss Janie Lambert, of White's court. Being Miss Lillian Hoffman's birthday, she was presented a May basket shower by the president, the basket containing the Rainbow birthday gift, and a number of useful articles from each member of the club. Covers were laid for 12, and refreshments were served by the hostess. The table was prettily decorated. In the center was a large birthday cake, with 22 candles, in honor of Miss Hoffman's birthday. A social time followed, with music and dancing.

CONTESTS IN BOTH CAUCUSES FOR WATER BOARD NOMINATIONS

The republican party will meet in caucus Friday evening of this week to name their candidates for the city election to be held the first Monday in June. As has already been announced George G. Engler will be the party's candidate for mayor. According to political gossip former Alderman E. La-Rue Bliven will run for nomination for first alderman. There will be one other candidate nominated for aldermen, but just who this candidate will be could not be learned Tuesday. However it is understood that the remaining five candidates for the council will be Willis Hill, David Kenefick, Josiah Greenstein, Fred Shea of Hobart avenue and John W. Durman. The latter five include the candidates for second alderman and four councilmen. Stephen H. Reeves will be the party candidate for city treasurer.

For city sheriffs Charles H. Raynes and V. Reath Allen are mentioned. Charles A. Hagberg who has held the office of water commissioner for four years will run for re-nomination and it is understood that he will be opposed for this office by Charles W. Burton. As far as can be learned this will be the only contest at the caucus.

The democratic party's caucus has been slated for Monday night. Mayor Milo R. Waters has signified his intention of running for re-election. From reliable sources comes the information that the democratic party will put up for re-nomination the same ticket nominated two years ago, as follows:

For aldermen, Henry Gebrath and Patrick P. Sweeney; for councilmen, William H. Aldrich, Frank H. Quinley, Nicholas J. Spellman, and Frank L. Rinella. For city treasurer, Charles S. Avery. For city sheriffs, John M. Hoelck and William J. Carroll.

As in the republican caucus there will be a contest over the nomination for water commissioner at the democratic caucus, as it is understood that John J. Corkery, present commissioner, will be opposed by Jeremiah A. Fitzgerald of No. 35 Hobart avenue.

HYDRO ELECTRIC STATIONS MADE BIG FUEL SAVING

By the utilization of their hydro-electric or water power plants to a greater extent than ever before, electrical companies in Connecticut were able to save 153,570 tons of coal during the year of 1925. According to figures of the U. S. department of interior, electrical companies in this state produced over a billion kilowatt hours of current during the past year, 159,750,000 kilowatt hours having been produced by the harnessing of Connecticut streams and rivers with modern hydro plants, and the balance having been generated by steam.

The generation of current by steam plants in this state last year required the burning of 303,333 tons of coal. Were it not for the fact that the electrical companies are equipped to harness the water power of Connecticut's rivers and streams, over 150,000 more tons of coal would necessarily have been burned to meet the ever increasing demand of the state for electric power and light. Practically all of the larger companies have hydro electric plants which are used to supplement their steam plants in seasons when the water power is sufficiently large to enable them to save fuel. While there is a heavy overhead involved by the investment needed to erect a hydro plant, the actual operating expenses, because no fuel is needed, are much lower than those of steam plants.

Water power conditions in Connecticut were above the average last year and enabled the production of 3,924,000 K. W. H. more than in 1924. Conditions were especially good in March 1925 when the hydro plants in this state reached the highest total production in their history, the total for that month having been 27,633,000 K. W. H. In April the production fell only a little short of the total of the previous month with an aggregate of 23,925,000 K. W. H. which was higher than the total reached in any one month in 1924.

TWO MEMORIAL GIFTS FOR SHELTERING ARMS

Two memorial gifts, one the furnishing of a room and the other the gift of $5,000 have been made for the new Sheltering Arms building and have just been announced.

The gift of $5,000 is made by one peculiarly interested in the new building. It is also in memory of the husband of the donor and it makes possible the purchase of the room construction, the furnishing of the room and its endowment.

Besides these memorial gifts, several valuable articles of furniture have been presented by interested friends desiring to have a hand in the furnishings.

The equipment committee, Mrs. F. W. Cary, Mrs. Charles H. Preston and Mrs. Walter T. Camp, will be glad to give any information desired by those who contemplate helping in any way towards the furnishings of the new Sheltering Arms building which is being erected at the corner of Rockwell street and McKinley avenue.

BACKUS HOSPITAL TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE TODAY

Today (Wednesday) is "national hospital day," in the observance of which the W. W. Backus hospital in this city will hold its annual "at home" to all Norwich, inviting the community in general to visit the hospital between 2 and 5 in the afternoon for the purpose of becoming familiar with its inward workings. It will be an open house day to all comers, the one opportunity in the year when every nook and corner of this busy useful place is open to public inspection.

Visitors will be taken on trips from the laundry and kitchens through all the wards and operating rooms so that all visiting friends may have a chance to see the machinery, big and little, that accomplishes so much beneficial work for the community. Supt. F. Leon Hutchins, assisted by the nurses, will act as guides, and will be highly pleased to find a very large response to the invitation to visit the hospital.

"Hospital day" celebrates the birthday of Florence Nightingale, who was born in Italy in 1820, and became the pioneer in nursing when she recruited a contingent of nurses for service in the Crimean war.

SPEAKS ON MOHAMMEDANISM AT LUTHER CONFERENCE

Two addresses, one in English and one in German, featured the Tuesday evening service at the First Evangelical Lutheran church, Franklin street, held in connection with the Connecticut District Lutheran conference which opened at the church Monday. The address in English was given by Rev. H. Mackensen, secretary of the Orient mission, and the sermon in German was given by Rev. J. A. W. Kirsch of Jersey City, N. J. The church was crowded for the service which opened about 8 o'clock and was presided over by Rev. H. Stippich of Seymour. After the devotional period Rev. Mr. Stippich introduced Rev. Mr. Mackensen who spoke in English on the topic Mohammedanism.

During the course of his sermon Rev. Mr. Stippich said that the church was to blame for the existence of Mohammedanism. He stated that Mohamet sought for the truths of Christianity, an explanation of the faith, which the church did not give him. He then set up a religion of his own. The preacher said the church ought to do all it can to remedy the deplorable situation.

Rev. Mr. Mackensen also stated that the Lutheran church was indebted to the Mohammedanism. He explained this by saying that during the middle ages ignorance was terrible in Europe. There was one place in which education was kept alive and that was in Constantinople. In 1543 the Turks took Constantinople and Europe trembled. The learned men in Constantinople fled to all parts of Europe.

In an effort to earn their living they opened up schools of instruction and in a few years it became stylish for young men to get an education. When Luther published his message the people were able to read and understand it. God had used Mohammedanism to prepare the people to receive the message of Luther, said Rev. Mr. Mackensen.

At the close of the sermon Frank Steinke was heard in a sacred solo after which Rev. J. A. W. Kirsch of Jersey City delivered a stirring sermon in the German language. He spoke on the topic, The Spirit of the Times.

Tuesday's session of the conference opened at 9 o'clock with a welcome to the delegates from His Honor, Mayor Milo R. Waters. Guests present at the session included Rev. J. A. W. Kirsch of Jersey City, Rev. G. Doering of Jersey City, Dr. Knoll, superintendent of missions, New York city, Rev. Ed Sasse of Berlin, Germany, and Dr. Richard Mekler of New Bedford, Mass. Rev. Paul A. Kirsch of Meriden, president of the conference, presided at the session. He read his semi-annual report which was unanimously accepted. Election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Rev. Paul A. Kirsch of Meriden; secretary, Rev. Otto Heydenreich of Hartford and treasurer, Edward Denzler of Rockville.

The matter of women's missionary societies was discussed during the session and Rev. H. Mackensen, Southington, presented a report on new plans for future conferences.

During the afternoon session there was a discussion on Week Day Religious Education with Rev. Henry Moehling of Philadelphia, leading. The idea was well received by the delegates who unanimously favored such a plan.

Dr. Knoll made a report on mission field activities in Madison, New Bedford, Collinsville, Springfield, Lowell and Worcester and his report was accepted. During the supper meeting at 6.30 o'clock, Prof. Stoughton of Wagner college, Staten Island, reported on the half million dollar campaign started for the college. The amount raised was $530,000 and the college will thereby be privileged to give degrees under the New York law. Rev. Mr. Sasse also spoke at the supper meeting.

The conference will come to a close about noon today (Wednesday). The main feature of this morning's session will be a report by Rev. H. Brueckner, D. D., president of the Lutheran Seamen's mission, at Hoboken, N. J. The delegates, about 40 in number, are being entertained at the homes of the members of the church, and the dinner and supper Tuesday were provided by the Ladies' Aid society of the church.

STONINGTON WOMAN IS BENEFICIARY UNDER WILL

The will of Mary Floyd Hendrickson, who died at the Westerly hospital on April 23, last, and was the widow of Dr. Samuel Hendrickson of Jamaica, L. I., on file for probate in New York, cuts off two nephews, Morris C. Romer of 161 Rutland road, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Floyd Romer of 321 West Fifty-fifth street, and directs her estate, estimated at about $6,000 in personalty, after all debts are paid, to be divided as follows:

The residue equally among Harold Hobart of 71 Elm street, Stonington and Helen Hobart Clark of Spencer, Mass., they being the children of William H. and Marion Hobart of Stonington.

The town of Stonington, $200, in trust, for the care of the burial plot at Slack Burying ground at Wequetequock, near Stonington.

Mass For Thomas F. Shea

By request of the Holy Name society, a high mass of requiem for the repose of the soul of Thomas Francis Shea was sung in St. Patrick's church Tuesday at 8 o'clock by Rev. Myles P. Galvin. Henry J. LaFontaine directed the music and the hymns were sung by Roderick F. Sullivan.

MAY BASKET PARTY HELD BY THE C. L. CLASS

The C. L. class of Trinity Methodist church held an enjoyable May basket party Monday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Steinert, on West Main street. There were 25 in attendance, partners for lunch being found by means of numbers tangled in a cobweb arranged from the ceiling. In the games which followed, the prizes went to Mrs. Edwin Floyd, Mrs. B. A. Saunders, Miss Isabel Shearer and Miss Mary E. Gray. The color scheme was pink and white, the flowers being peach blossoms. The hostesses with Mrs. Steinert were Mrs. George Greenlaw and Mrs. George Wallen.

It is planned to hold the next meeting with Miss Eleanor Fenton, of Clairemont avenue. The president of the class is Mrs. Lloyd R. Cochrane.

APPOINTMENT MADE OF SEVEN NEW TEACHERS

Seven new teachers, all Norwich young women, and all normal school graduates, were given appointments for the Norwich public schools by the meeting of the town school board which was held Tuesday night in the superintendent's office in the court house. The new appointees are the following: Miss Irene Werth, Miss Catherine Driscoll and Miss Agnes Dennis, graduates of last year's normal class; Miss Shirley Jackson, Miss Teresa Bielecki, Miss Elizabeth Hagstrom, and Miss Catherine Burns, all graduates this year.

As the board's policy is to appoint only normal school graduates and select Norwich young women, as far as possible, it was quite a task to decide upon the appointments as there are seventeen Norwich young women who graduate this year from normal school.

Mrs. Janet Lathrop, who has been teaching the fifth and sixth grades at the Town street school, presented her resignation which was accepted.

There was some discussion of the proposed new school building at Norwich Town, which it was figured would cost approximately $225,000.

The entire membership of the board was present including President Walter F. Lester, Robert McNeely, James C. Macpherson, Dr. E. J. Brophy, Edward G. McKay, and Thomas J. Kelly, clerk, with Superintendent E. J. Graham.

Mr. Cliff suffered a fracture of his hip about a week ago, and the shock of the injury, together with infirmities attending his advanced years, hastened death. Mr. Cliff was born in Mystic April 23, 1841, and had been a resident there for many years.

He leaves two daughters: Mrs. Schenck with whom he was staying and Mrs. Harry C. Cornwall of Short Hill, N. J. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. B. L. Holmes of Mystic.

JUNIOR WEEK ACTIVITIES AT COLLEGE AT STORRS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, May 11—Junior activities for members of the class of 1927 at Connecticut Agricultural college will be held this week with the annual Junior Prom on Friday night being the feature event of the week. Because of faculty restrictions, junior activities will this year fall on the last two days of the week, and the junior senior banquet will not be held until commencement week. In the past, the banquet has been one of the high lights of the junior program, but faculty opposition on the grounds it interferes with college work makes the change to a later date necessary.

Sherman Wilcox of Middletown is chairman of the Junior Prom committee, and assisting him are John R. Horne of Lynn, Mass., and Carl Ajello, of Seymour. The committee in charge of decorations is Vincent M. Doolittle of New Britain, chairman; Edward Lundberg of Cos Cob; and John F. Flenneman of Farmington.

"The Taurus" literary magazine of the women students of the college will be issued on Friday.

Saturday morning copies of "The Nutmeg," the college annual published by the junior class, will be distributed. In the afternoon, the class will form for the annual junior parade, and march to the site of the tree planting. This will be followed by a tea dance in Hawley armory.

"The Hayfield Follies," a burlesque of college life, will be presented in Hawley armory Saturday evening as the annual junior show.

BERLIN SENDS OUT REPORT OF SEVERE FIGHTING IN THE STREETS OF WARSAW

Report Says Many Persons Were Killed or Wounded—Warsaw Dispatch Tells That Government Troops Are Guarding All Bridges and Telephone and Telegraph Lines—Machine Guns Have Been Placed Atop Government Buildings—Cabinet is Sitting Continuously in an Effort to Find a Solution of the Situation.

(By the Associated Press).

A revolutionary movement is in progress in Poland, with the central point the capital Warsaw, with Marshal Pilsudski, the former president, apparently bent on forcing the present government from power.

A tight censorship has been established and telegraph and telephone communications are badly interrupted. But from Berlin, on what is characterized as reliable information comes the report of fighting in the streets of Warsaw, with many casualties.

Dispatches from Prague and Cracow give more details of the inception of the revolt, which began Tuesday night. Soldiers in the Rembertow camp, on the outskirts of the capital, resented an attack on Pilsudski's home close by, and with the former president at their head began a march on Warsaw.

Latest information from the Czecho-Slovak-Polish frontier is to the effect that loyal troops failed in their attempts to prevent the insurrectionists from reaching Warsaw and adds that the object of the movement is the establishment of a dictatorship.

The Wolff bureau at Berlin, the semi-official news agency, has received dispatches that Pilsudski has seized various public buildings, including the office of the ministry of the interior, his forces are marching on the Belvedere palace, the home of President Wojciechowski, and that Premier Witos has resigned.

From various points come the statement that the Polish government has entered into negotiations with Marshal Pilsudski for the purpose of preventing civil war.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES FOR DEFENSE OF WARSAW

WARSAW, May 13—(AP)—Famous in history as the objective point of various armies, Warsaw has again become an armed camp.

The government began taking precautionary measures for the city's defense as soon as news was received of the military revolt designed to oust Premier Witos, who, except for Marshal Pilsudski, former president and leader of the uprising, is Poland's most picturesque politician.

Machine guns have been placed atop government buildings, telephone and telegraph lines and bridges are guarded by troops remaining loyal to the government. The cabinet is sitting continuously in an effort to find a solution to the situation, which appears to be gradually becoming more confused.

Witos undertook to form a cabinet May 5, when Premier Skrzynski announced his coalition government was resigning. Members of the new government were scheduled to appear before the diet within a few days, when, Witos announced, he would state his program. Owing to the approach of this date, it appears, Marshal Pilsudski deemed the time ripe to strike.

Adding to the friction between Witos and the militarists headed by Pilsudski, the authorities yesterday confiscated one radical paper and two Jewish papers in which accounts appeared of interviews with Pilsudski, severely criticising the present cabinet and especially Witos, who is leader of the peasant's party.

Pilsudski, who from boyhood dreamed to live and see the day when Poland would gain her independence, and who fought with all his might and main in young manhood, long has been the idol of the militarists.

After serving as the country's first chief of state, Pilsudski took up a quiet farm life, more to his liking than living at the government palace. For years he remained on his small country estate near Warsaw, writing reminiscences, and little was heard of him.

A few days ago the way was prepared for Pilsudski's return to the army in the capacity of inspector general. This was done in a bill adopted by the diet, for reorganizing the supreme army command. Under its provisions, Pilsudski would be generalissimo in case of war.

Witos who first became premier in 1920, is known as Europe's only cravatless government leader. He is a natural born peasant and boasts he never would be anything else. He always has a care to his 'den of wearing a soft shirt with bone collar button showing instead of a tie.

MUTINY AMONG TROOPS STATIONED AT REMBERTOW

NEW YORK, May 13 (AP)—The mutiny among Polish troops is confined to detachments stationed at Rembertow, according to an official dispatch today from Warsaw to the Polish consulate general here. The government has taken "all necessary measures to protect the constitution and to maintain law and order," the message said.

The dispatch, filed in Warsaw late today, follows:

"Propaganda hostile to police which has been active for some time has resulted in bringing about some regrettable manifestations of breach of discipline among a detachment of troops stationed at Rembertow, near Warsaw.

"To obtain such a result, forged orders had been deliberately issued by some principal conspirators. The Polish government has undertaken all necessary measures to protect the constitution and to maintain law and order throughout the country.

"The president of the republic as the supreme chief of the army has appealed to those guilty of insubordination, as well as to all citizens urging them to maintain the law."

FISH COMBINE PLEADED GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY

NEW YORK, May 13.—(AP)—A combination controlling the purchase and sale of $20,000,000 worth of fresh wa-ter fish annual was broken up today when 29 defendant corporations and individuals pleaded guilty to conspiracy.

Indictments against the defendants were returned July of last year after fish producers from Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Canada had been called before a special grand jury.

The indictments charged that for several years the indicted persons and companies had conspired to control the sale in New York of carp, Buffalo, yellow pike, grass pike, blue pike, red fins, mullets and ciscoes.

Fines totaling $31,000 were levied, and a perpetual injunction handed down against the defendants ordering them to cease the practice and dissolve the "fish purchasing corporation," through which the activities had been handled.

FIGHTING REPORTED IN STREETS OF WARSAW

BERLIN, May 13—(AP)—Reliable advices from Warsaw say that severe fighting occurred in the streets of the Polish capital this afternoon, many persons being killed or wounded.

Anti-government forces are reported to have occupied the castle, the premier's residence and the foreign office and to be marching on the president's palace at Belvedere.

It is additionally reported that the government has resigned and that the president's resignation is expected.

Telegraph and telephone communication from Warsaw is badly interrupted, but the Polish agency at Danzig have occupied all the public buildings.

SACCO AND VANZETTI LOSE LEGAL FIGHT FOR LIFE

BOSTON, May 13—(AP)—After a six year legal battle the shadow of the electric chair hung tonight over Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, principals in a celebrated murder trial. An opinion handed down by the full bench of the Massachusetts supreme court, sustained the verdict of a jury which convicted them in 1921 of double murder.

In Dedham jail and Charlestown state prison respectively, Sacco and Vanzetti were informed that the legal battle on which radical organizations the world over had expended more than $350,000 had ended in defeat for their cause. William G. Thompson, chief of defense counsel, said tonight he was not ready to announce his further plans. A writ of error to the supreme court of the United States was the only remaining legal recourse. Mr. Thompson said he would make known his decision after he had studied the lengthy opinion of the highest state tribunal.

DROUTH MAY CAUSE A SUSPENSION OF FISHING

HARTFORD, May 13—(AP)—Unless there is a drenching rain tomorrow, fishing in the state leased and stocked streams will be stopped by the state board of fisheries and game, Superintendent John W. Titcomb announced today. The order will be issued due to the lack of a heavy rain that would greatly diminish the fire hazard in the timberland of the state and the absence of prospects of it in the near future and will be effective until the hazard is eliminated.

Little hope for avoiding issuance of the order is held by Superintendent Titcomb because of the small probability of rain within the next few days. State Forester Austin F. Hawes today received a telegram from Leonard Tarr, meteorologist in charge of the U. S. weather bureau at New Haven, which stated that atmospheric conditions were "very dangerous for forest fires." "Caution should be taken until the weather changes," the message added.

COLD WEATHER DELAYS PLOWING AND PLANTING

WAKEFIELD, Mass., May 13—(AP)—Plowing planting and grazing have been retarded by the cold weather this spring the New England crop reporting service of the United States Department of Agriculture reported today. Preparation for the land for crops has advanced less than usual on May 1 and much less than a year ago.

"Pastures will not be ready to receive cattle until later this year," the report set forth.

"Hay stocks appear ample for the period before new supplies become available.

"United States winter wheat prospect for May 1 indicated a crop of 549,908,000 bushels compared with the short crop last year of 398,456,000 bushels and the ten year acreage of 557,662,000 Rye prospects, however, are materially less than last year as well as below average."

ROME, May 13—(AP)—Great enthusiasm prevails in Italy over the Amundsen-Ellsworth dirigible Norge's achievement in flying across the north pole. All the newspapers devote much space to news of the event, the Impero spreading it over five full pages. The editorial trend is one of exultation in "the Italo-Norwegian triumph."

LEADERS IN BALLOTING FOR BISHOP COADJUTOR

HARTFORD, May 12.—(AP)—Suffragan Bishop E. Campion Acheson, of Middletown, Head Master Samuel S. Drury, of St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., and the Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, rector of Trinity church, Boston, are expected to be the leading candidates, at least on early ballots, when the Connecticut diocesan convention votes here next Tuesday on the election of a bishop coadjutor to Bishop Brewster.

It was stated here today, that the high church group would not have a candidate, as the Rev. F. H. Sill, head master of the Kent school, who received many votes a year ago, would not again be a candidate. It was expected, however, that the Rev. Lewis B. Rowell, of Norwalk, would receive some support from the Priests' Fellowship, the high church group. It also became known today that there will be support in the convention for the Rev. William S. Gardner, rector of St. Paul's church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and for the Right Rev. Hugh Latimer Burleson, of Sioux Falls, missionary bishop of South Dakota.

MISS MARY HINES O'MEARA SENTENCED IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, May 13.—(AP)—Miss Mary Hines O'Meara, 28 years old, of Stamford, was given a suspended jail sentence of one year by Judge John H. Booth in criminal superior court today after she had acknowledged embezzlements in the sum of $4,234.90 from the Fidelity Title and Trust company of Stamford, by whom she had been employed for five years.

Miss Hines has repaid to the trust company all of the money she took and was of considerable assistance to it in clearing up its record confused by attempts to cover the shortage, it was stated.

The money was taken by the young woman, her counsel said, to assist her younger brother who is attending college and to add to money her parents had given her, but which had not been quite enough, to pay for the building of a new home.

Miss Hines was close to swooning after sentence was passed and she left the court room, and she had to be supported to the sheriff's office in the arms of relatives.

There was no eulogy. The services opened with a reading from the Protestant Episcopal prayer book by Rev. J. Gilmore Buskill, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal church here. A reading from the liturgy followed, by Rev. M. Seymour Purdy, pastor of the American Reformed church of Newburgh, which Mr. Odell had attended for 30 years.

SHORTAGE IN BOOKS OF COOK TOURING AGENCY

BOSTON, May 13—(AP)—The "man from Cook's" appeared in a new role today when George R. Keough, former book-keeper for the local touring agency of Thomas Cook and Sons, was arrested on charges of stealing $16,720 through juggling his books. He and John J. Brennan assistant cashier, not yet arrested are also under charges of larceny and conspiracy to steal $2,917 and a quantity of books and stationery.

An audit of the books was begun last month and Keough and Brennan were questioned about discrepancies. Next morning Keough reported that the safe had been broken open and $2,917 and books and other records stolen. After the two men had left the firm the monthly statement revealed the larger shortage of $16,720.

When arrested today Keough was at liberty under $18,000 bail on the larceny and conspiracy charge.

Crowned German Cabinet Resigns

Downfall of Luther Ministry Due to His Attitude on the Government's Flag Decree.

BERLIN, May 12.(AP) — Dr. Hans Luther, the German chancelor, suffered a personal defeat in the reichstag today, when a motion of censure moved by the democrats was adopted by a vote of 176 to 146. One hundred and three deputies abstained from voting.

The chancellor's downfall was accomplished through the adoption of a democratic resolution of condemnation because of his attitude on the government's flag decree — that the merchant's flag, composed of the old monarchist colors, should be flown side by side with the republican flag on German embassies and consulates abroad.

Dr. Luther's defeat carried with it the fall of the entire cabinet, which shortly after the reichstag vote announced it had decided to retire in a body, in keeping with its previous declarations to share the blame of the flag action with the chancellor.

President Von Hindenburg accepted the resignation of the ministry and requested Dr. Luther to carry on until a new government can be formed.

The chancellor's overthrow was really accomplished through a combination of the democratic, socialist and communist votes — an alliance, which reichstag leaders assert, eliminates the democrats from immediate participation in the new government.

Dr. Luther, who is the first of almost a score of post-war chancellors to receive such a personal censure by parliament, feels his position keenly and has requested President Von Hindenburg to relieve him of further duties as chancellor at the earliest possible date.

While the flag issue furnished the occasion for Dr. Luther's overthrow, the reichstag for a long time has been increasingly hostile to him, chiefly because of his cool aloofness from parliament. While his foreign policy has been signally successful and he is recognized to have represented Germany ably at London, Locarno and Geneva, yet apparently he failed to win the confidence of the legislative branch of the government. His speech yesterday, which he failed to adopt a conciliatory attitude respecting the flag stirred up so much pent-up personal enmity that his overthrow was only a question of hours.

President Von Hindenburg starts in on his second year in office faced with the task of disentangling the parliamentary difficulties, which are further complicated by the flag issue and the settlement of the ex-rulers' property. Both problems are up for early adjustment, and steady cause wise diplomacy between the middle parties and the socialists.

PRESIDENT TO SPEND HIS VACATION IN ADIRONDACKS

WASHINGTON, May 13.—(AP)—President Coolidge will spend his summer vacation in the Adirondacks at the estate of Irwin B. Kirkwood, publisher of the Kansas City Star unless there is an unexpected change in his plans. Announcement of his intention was made today at the white house where it was said he had "virtually decided" upon the place for a summer home.

The estate is on Lake Osgood, three miles from Paul Smith's, New York and covers 65 acres with a mansion and several small houses which could accommodate the white house personnel. Executive offices probably would be established in a hotel at Paul Smiths.

While it had been announced several weeks ago that the president would spend his vacation in the mountains instead of at the seashore as he did last year, it was said, officially only yesterday that he had reached no final decision on his summer plans.

For some time, however, it had been apparent that he would probably go to the Adirondacks, or possibly to the shores of Lake Champlain to the east. A favorable report on the Kirkwood estate was made to him by Frank W. Stearns, of Boston, and others who inspected it.

The time of the president's departure from Washington has not been determined.

LIQUOR SEIZURE MADE OFF THE NEW HAMPSHIRE COAST

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 12—(AP)—The first big liquor seizure made off the New Hampshire coast in years took place today when a former navy launch was captured with between 300 to 400 cases of liquors and canned alcohol aboard. The boat bore the number C-5800. The papers of the craft and the crew were gone.

Members of the Wood Island Coast Guard station in Portsmouth harbor co-operated with the Portsmouth police in making the capture. The coast guardsmen were notified by the police that the boat was in Sagamore creek. Three officers and a deputy sheriff proceeded to the crek and after the coast guardsmen had chased the vessel into a cove the police boarded it. The crew, however, had disappeared.

The boat was towed here and turned over to the collector of customs. It is believed that the crew was waiting for the arrival of a truck when the boat was discovered.

CONITION OF JOHN T. KING BECOMES SERIOUS

BRIDGEPORT, May 13—(AP)—John T. King, the dominating factor in Bridgeport politics for years, is dangerously ill. Shortly before midnight his condition was reported as "slightly worse" than during the day and yesterday, when it became known that he had been ill of pneumonia since last Sunday.

Two more physicians were called in for consultation on the case today by Dr. J. Murray Johnson, member of the board of education and close friend of Mr. King, who is the attending physician. Dr. Joseph Lawlor, of Waterbury, a relative of Mrs. King, was at the bedside of the republican leader during the day and Dr. Wilder Tileston, of New Haven was summoned tonight.

Nothing From Norge Since Crossing Pole

The Next News From Amundsen is Expected to Come From Alaska.

NEW YORK, May 13—(AP)—The New York Times and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat announced at 10 o'clock tonight (daylight saving time) that no dispatches ha dbeen received from Roald Amundsen's airship Norge since the message sent at 3:30 this morning Norwegian time, 9:30 p. m. yesterday eastern standard time after the ship had crossed the north pole.

It was estimated that the Norge will reach Alaska in about 35 hours if she maintains the speed made on the flight from Kings Bay to the pole. The next news of the explorers is expected to come from Alaska.

SAILED OVER NORTH POLE EARLY YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, May 12—(AP)—The Amundsen-Ellsworth dirigible Norge, which left King's Bay, Spitzbergen at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and sailed over the north pole early this morning, was still somewhere in the great Arctic waste late today enroute to Point Barrow, Alaska.

The last word received from the dirigible, on which there are 17 men sweeping across the top of the world was at 3 o'clock this morning when the Boden wireless station at Stockholm established direct communication.

The reports then were that weather conditions were excellent.

The Norge was reported as traveling at an average speed of 50 miles an hour which would bring her to Point Barrow at 10 o'clock eastern standard time tonight. She is scheduled then to proceed to Nome.

Messages received in the course of the day at Nome, which had been transmitted early this morning said that the Italian flag had now floated over the north pole and extended greetings from Commander Nobile to his wife and daughter.

A message from Oslo also said the Norge reported dropping the American, Norwegian and Italian flags over the north pole.

NAVAL VESSELS TO STAND BY TO AID CAPT. AMUNDSEN

BREMERTON, Wash., May 12.—(AP)—A telegram received today by Rear Admiral J. V. Chase, commandant of the Puget Sound navy yard, from the bureau of operation, Washington, D. C., stated that the Norwegian ministry had requested all naval vessels in northern waters to stand by to aid Captain Roald Amundsen, flying to Alaska, from the north pole in the dirigible Norge.

A message from President Coolidge transmitted through the navy radio station here wished Lieutenn Eduvardsen, second in command, of the Amundsen expedition "good luck."

OPPOSITION IN FRANCE TO DEBT SETTLEMENT

PARIS, May 12.—(AP)—The Washington debt settlement seems likley to serve as a pre-text for an assault on the government when parliament reconvenes May 27.

The radicals and socialists, in meeting of their general councils in the various provincial departments, have taken a hostile attitude toward the debt accord. The radical-socialist federation of the department of the Seine has adopted resolutions explicitly demanding that parliament reject the settlement.

The irreconcilable radicals, who want a ministry headed by former Premier Herriot again declare they are prepared to wage a test fight on the debt agreement and failure of the Oujda peace negotiations in Morocco. The socialists are fully inclined to support a move against the cabinet in these questions.

Friends of the government minimize these threats calling them the usual dreams in which dissatisfied members of parliament indulge during every recess. When it comes to an issue and Premier Briand tells parliament what kind of a situation would be brought about by failure to ratify the debt settlement. There will be a majority for it in both houses, they predict.

MARSHALL RECOVERING FROM NARRAGANSETT PIER ACCIDENT

PITTSBURGH, May 12.—(AP)—Rody P. Marshall, Jr., who suffered a broken neck in a dive off the seawall at Narragansett Pier, R. I., last summer, today was able to leave his home for the first time in 10 months. Marshall, 16 year old son of a prominent Pittsburgh attorney, fractured a vertebrae in his neck while his parents were returning home from Europe. They were met by a fast tug outside New York and raced to his bedside.

Two months later he was taken from the hospital in Wakefield, R. I., under elaborate arrangements, and removed to his home in Pittsburgh. Although physicians at first held no hope for his recovery he improved slowly under the care given him. He regained the use of his fingers several months ago. Today he was taken to a motion picture theatre in a wheel chair, in the care of a nurse.

Bacon, of Middletown, vice president, and Judge Geo. H. Maude, of Windsor, secretary and treasurer. Former Deputy State Tax Commissioner Carlos S. Holcomb spoke discussing the 1925 law requiring probate courts to definitely decide the domicile of decedents.

MINERS NOT INCLUDED IN SETTLEMENT OF GENERAL STRIKE IN GREAT BRITAIN

A. J. Cook, Secretary of the Miners' Federation, Asserts That the Miners Were Not a Party to the Strike in Any Shape or Form—General Council of Trades Has Withdrawn Its Order For Sympathetic Strike in Support of the Coal Miners—Work is Being Slowly Resumed Throughout the Country—Many Differences Remain to Be Adjusted Before Industry Can Be in Full Swing Again.

LONDON, May 12—(AP)—Great Britain's gigantic industrial strike, a test of endurance which lasted nine days, is ended.

The general council of the Trades Union conference, heeding the efforts of Sir Herbert Samuel, chairman of the Royal Coal commission, as private mediator, today withdrew its order for a sympathetic strike of the trades unions in support of the coal miners.

The coal miners remain out, but with the assurance of Premier Baldwin that no stone will be left unturned to bring the uninterrupted negotiations between the miners and mine owners to a conclusion satisfactory to all.

Now, the nation, that has borne with good humor and spartan fortitude the inconveniences and annoyances inevitable to any general stoppage of industry is preparing to pick up the pieces and count the cost.

Work is being slowly resumed throughout the country tonight. There are still many differences to be adjusted before industry can be in full swing again.

First, there is the question of the re-engagement of the men who have been notified that their places were filled. Then, too, groups in various sections have announced their unwillingness to resume work until the government emergency control is entirely removed.

Whole Nation Joyful

But, on the whole, the nation has joyfully accepted the end of what the Trades Union congress with reason, has characterized as one of the most orderly stoppages in the history of industrial disputes.

For the preceding 24 hours there had been much talk of peace; rumors were current that strong influences were at work to bring the government and labor leaders together, and last night there were important conferences between the representatives of the miners and the men highest in authority in the Trades Union congress.

Premier Baldwin and his ministers awaited a call from the union leaders until after midnight, but it was not until noon today that the delegation proceeded to No. 10 Downing street, the premier's official residence.

Here the proceedings were brief. In few words the premier was told the labor men were there to inform him of the end of the general strike. At the same time they relied upon him putting into effect his previous promises of a square deal for all.

Settlement Was Broadcast

The termination of the strike was broadcast over the radio, announced in parliament and spread rapidly to every corner of the country. It was received throughout England with mixed feelings, characteristic of the British, but mostly with cheers. Even then, however, the public did not give way to the delirium of the moment, but accepted with smiles the fact things would soon begin to return to normal.

Upon just what basis the negotiations for resumption of work will be taken up has not been revealed to the general public, even if already decided upon by the leaders and government. The miners tonight are steadfast in their position they will not accept any proposals involving a reduction of wages. The mine owners have not been heard from.

It is the widespread opinion and hope of the country that the terms of Sir Herbert Samuel's memorandum submitted to the Trades Union congress in the early hours of the morning and the coal commission's report would form the foundation for a final and lasting settlement.

The cabinet at its meeting tomorrow, at w hich the general lines of the government's policy will be laid down, will first of all take up Sir Herbert Samuel's memorandum, which thus, far being only a private document, has not been officially called to the government's attention.

Message to Nation

The prime minister, in a message to the nation broadcast tonight, appealed to the country to forget past quarrels and refrain from recriminations. He begged the employers to be generous and urged the workers and the whole nation to co-operate in restoring the country's industrial welfare.

He noted that the strike had ended, as he made plain a few days ago, without conditions being entered into by the government, and continued:

"Our business now is not to triumph, but to rally together into the work of restoration. I shall shortly resume the coal negotiations.

"It would not be right to let tonight pass without expressing the thanks of the government to all who have supported them in the struggle called for assistance, and the people responded, as they have always responded throughout our long history whenever it has been necessary.

"I hope that my message of thanks will come to the whole army of which now is over. The government unteers, men, women and children, who showed that without special knowledge they were able to keep the vital services of the country going."

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY OF MINERS' FEDERATION

LONDON, May 12.—(AP)—The decision to call off the general strike was made without consulting the miners' federation, A. J. Cook, secretary of that organization, declared tonight; the miners were not party to it in any shape or form.

"The trades union congress decision has nothing to do with us," said Mr. Cook. "Our men will have to decide what to do in the light of circumstances. Our stoppage may continue for an indefinite period."

When the proposals of Sir Herbert L. Samuel were submitted to the miners early this morning, the miners rejected them. Nevertheless the trades union congress used them as a basis for its later action in calling off the strike.

KING GEORGE'S MESSAGE TO PEOPLE OF GREAT BRITAIN

LONDON, May 12. — (AP) — King George today issued a message to the people of Great Britain calling upon them to forget the bitterness engendered by the general strike and to cooperate for a lasting future industrial peace.

His message follows:

"To my people: The nation has just passed through a period of extreme anxiety. It was today announced that the general strike has been brought to an end. At such a moment it is supremely important to bring together all my people to confront the difficult situation which still remains.

"This task requires the co-operation of all able and well disposed men in the country. Even with such help it will be difficult, but it will not be impossible.

"Let us forget whatever elements of bitterness the events of the past few days have created and only remember how steady and how orderly the country remained though severly tested. Let us forthwith address ourselves to the task of bringing into being a peace which will be lasting because, forgetting the past, it looks only to the future with the hopefulness of a united people."

UNVEILING AT NEW YORK UNIVERSITY'S HALL OF FAME

NEW YORK, May 12—(AP)—Busts of nine famous Americans and a tablet commemorating the valor of another were unveiled today in an impressive ceremony at New York university's hall of fame.

The men whose memory was honored were: Roger Williams, founder of religious freedom and governor of Rhode Island; James Fenimore Cooper, author of the state of New York; Daniel Webster, statesman; Daniel Boone, explorer and frontiersman; Jonathan Edwards, theologian; George Peabody, financier and educator; Eli Whitney, inventor of the cotton gin; Edwin Booth, actor; August Saint-Gaudens, sculptor, and John Paul Jones, hero of the sea. The tablet was for Jones.

Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a descendant of Roger Williams, unveiled the founder's bust, which was the only one for which the sculptor had no likeness to guide him. A presumed likeness was attained by copying the features of Williams' descendants believed to resemble their noted forebear.

An address on Daniel Boone, written by Vice President Dawes, who was unable to be present was read by Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, director of the hall of fame. Professor Henry W. Farnam of Selem was another speaker.

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS EXPECTED IN LIQUOR CASE

BOSTON, May 12—(AP)—Developments of a sensational turn were predicted today after a supposed defendant in a liquor case informed the court that he was posing as the real defendant at the instigation of an attorney. As a result, Judge Timothy J. Ahern of the Roxbury court today granted a complaint, upon application of the district attorney, which charges James G. O'Connell with disguising himself to obstruct justice.

O'Connell appeared under the name of Francis Carroll and pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping and exposing liquor on being questioned by District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien he said that an attorney had influenced him to appear in court. He was to have received $25, he said, which he had not collected. The police believe that the Carroll mentioned in the complaint is a fictitious name. The name of the attorney does not appear on any of the lawyer's appearance slips. O'Connell was held in $2,000 bail and the papers in the case were impounded.

He told the jury he was "only the bo'sun", and that he was unaware the Donnetta had a cargo of liquor until after her seizure by the coast guard.

CLOTHING STORE THIEVES FUSSY AS TO FIT AND STYLE

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 13—About $300 worth of men's clothing was stolen from the store of Benjamin Eisenberg, 11 Church street, some time between midnight and 1:30 o'clock Wednesday morning. The break is the second in a little over a year. April 2, 1925, the store was broken into and considerable loot secured. The goods were recovered, however, in Providence but the driver of the bandit car escaped. The break was discovered about six o'clock Wednesday morning by Patrick Murphy, of Murphy Brothers who conduct a garage in the rear of the Clark building in which the Eisenberg store is located. Mr. Murphy first found a radiator cap as he was sweeping the yard. Then he came upon a flat iron bar similar to the ones protecting the windows in the rear of the store. He noted that the bar had been removed from its place, so he notified Mr. Eisenberg, who came to his place of business. The back door was found closed, but unlocked. Entrance had been gained by unfastening the bar held to the sill with screws. The catch in the window had been broken, although there were no signs to show that a jimmy had been used. Four safe drivers through the window sill to hold it secure had been pulled out.

Acting Chief Thomas F. Grady was called and with the proprietor a checkup was made of the goods in the store. The center tables were covered with suits of clothes and the counters were littered with boxes of hosiery, ties and other haberdashery. There was evidence that the burglar or burglars had taken time to try on some of the outfits, apparently with the idea of getting things that should fit. Among the articles missing were ten dozen pairs of silk hose, 76 silk shirts, mostly size 14½, 15 dozen silk four-in-hand ties, crepeen caps and hats, size 6 7-8, three suits and three top coats.

Mr. Murphy stated that about midnight he heard some one prying at a window in the vicinity of the garage where he sleeps. He believed it to be someone who kept a car in his garage removing a window in order to open the garage doors. He got up and looked out into the yard, but seeing no one returned to bed. Within a few minutes he again heard the noise and an automobile drove up the driveway. He then concluded that it was one of the occupants of the next block. Later the car left. The only clue which the police have is an old suede glove bearing the name of the maker, "Louks" on the inside found later in the forenoon by Mr. Eisenberg. The glove was a small one and made to fit the right hand.

The police departments in Connecticut and those at Providence, R. I., Lawrence and Lowell, Mass., were notified of the theft and given a description of the stolen merchandise. A police check-up was made of strange cars seen on the street Tuesday night and the registry number of one of these is being investigated. One or two persons in the city whom the police consider might possibly know something of the break were questioned, but they established sufficient alibis.

He was told, however, that this would not be agreed to on the part of the defendant.

Court adjourned until Tuesday morning next at 9 o'clock (standard time) when the Schultz-Haddad case will be settled or reassigned. In this case the plaintiffs, dress manufacturers of Worcester, Mass., sold to Haddad, a retail merchant in this city, a number of dresses. The defendant alleges that the goods which were purchased in 1924 were to be sold on a conditional plan during a certain period and the balance unsold was to be sent back. Damages of $300 is claimed in the Sawyer-Willis case. The plaintiff alleges that on November 2, 1921 the defendant came on his wood lot at Eastford, and cut down for his own use 25 oak, ash and hickory trees without paying the plaintiff for them.

DANIELSON

ROD AND GUN CLUB MEMBERS APPROVE FISH DISTRIBUTION

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 13.—The state fish and game commission has just released $60,000—count 'em—yellow perch fry in the Quinebaug and Assawaga rivers, in Alexander's lake and other bodies of water in this territory! There's an army of fish! Secretary Harold B. Atwood of the Danielson Rod and Gun club, in discussing the matter, pointed out that this is part of the state's general program for restocking streams and lakes in this territory with good table fish.

Yellow perch to the number of 900,000, seems a big batch to the average person, but it is held to be none too many to suit the purposes of the state. The fry are small. All of them will not survive. A pickerel will come along, open his mouth, and get away with a dozen at one swallow. And there are many pickerel, all with good appetites.

However, a sufficient number of the perch should grow to maturity to make them plentiful hereabouts within two or three years. Incidental to the taking of perch, it may be mentioned that there is now a law pertaining to them to be observed. No yellow perch under seven inches in length may be legally taken. If a smaller one is caught, he must be put back in the waters from which taken.

Fishermen recall that it was long a practice to throw away little perch as worthless and more or less of a nuisance. Many of the little fellows were cut up to be used as bait for pickerel. These practices are now apt to bring the heavy hand of the law down upon an angler. He may cut bait from a perch that is seven inches in length or over, but he must not do it with the little fellows. The yellow perch makes a very good pan fish, and the state in stocking to provide food for the inhabitants as well as to supply sport for the anglers.

Beach pond—an inter-state body of water east of Voluntown—received a consignment of the perch. Up to the time the perch were released in those streams, it is not recalled that any stocking of the Quinebaug or Assawaga rivers had been attempted in many years. Pollution of the streams in various ways caused them to be neglected as fish producing streams.

CORONOR TO RESUME HEARING IN ROSATI CASE

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 13.—At his office here Tuesday, Coroner Arthur G. Bill will resume the inquest relative to the death of Nicholas Rosati, the ten-year old boy who died of injuries after he had been struck, in Chaplin, Monday evening by a car driven by Herbert J. Lane of Brookline, Mass. Coroner Bill began the inquest in Willimantic Tuesday. Among the witnesses who will testify today is George Pearl, who was operating the Danielson-Providence line motor coach from which the Rosati boy had alighted just before being struck by the Lane car. The coach had gotten underway again before the accident occurred.

Reports that the state highway department has temporarily abandoned its plan to develop the Green Hollow road as a trunk line highway stirred up no great reaction in Danielson. There are those in the residential section of Broad street, through which the proposed route would run, who are glad the project has been abandoned, while there are other property owners along Green Hollow road proper who are disappointed over the decision, because they believe improvement of the road would enhance the value of their properties. It is felt that this road may be built some day, but important changes now planned in the present Danielson-Wauregan route make the change seem far distant.

An ever increasing number of motorists, much as they regret the decision, are refusing to give rides to those who solicit them, along the trunk line highways in this territory. Fear of accidents that may result in damage suits being brought by guest passengers and the chances of being held up and robbed by these strangers of the highways are two big factors in reducing the number of free rides. The average driver now figures that he has to take too long a chance in doing a favor for some person he does not know, if though he be inclined to help these wayfarers.

If the New Haven road could see its way clear to furnish crossing protection at the Main street crossing late at night and during the early hours of the morning, Danielson would appreciate it. This would give a 24-hour gate service and remove the grave danger of accidents that now exist. Dayville's crossing, where there is far less traffic than in Danielson, is protected 24 hours of each day.

Only 12 persons used the Goodyear-Danielson coach service on its inauguration, Monday night, this being only 75 per cent of the patronage that will be required to warrant its maintenence. At least 18 round trip fares are required to warrant the continuance of this service.

It is indicated that a four-team twilight baseball league may be formed in Danielson, the league to be made up of teams representing the Quinebaug company, the Paco Manufacturing company, the American legion and the Danielson and Plainfield Gas and Electric company.

May continued its untoward record for cold weather Wednesday morning by producing another frost—the sixth of the month it is claimed by those who have kept the count. At 4:30 a. m. the temperature was down to 37 degrees.

Now comes a story that boys got out their rods and lines and caught scores of six and seven inch brown trout from the upper reaches of the Assawaga river, above Ballouville, last summer after the state fish and game commission had made releases of these fish for stocking purposes in those waters. The fishing done was contrary to law, but it appears that nothing was generally known of what had been done until a few days ago.

PUTNAM

PROPERTY REVALUATION EXPENSIVE BUT URGENT

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 13—Tuesday next, May 18, the citizens of Putnam will decide one of the most momentous questions in the history of the town. The tax rate for both town and city amounts to thirty-three mills and it acts as a deterrent to manufacturers seeking a site for locating here.

For several months a committee of nineteen citizens, including the selectmen of the town, the appraisers, the members of the board of relief, the mayor and representatives of the city council, and a committee of three each from the chamber of commerce and the Rotary club has been considering the question of revaluation and equalization of taxable property.

The inception of the movement, the history of what the committee has done, etc., are admirably set forth in the report drawn by M. H. Geisler, secretary of the committee.

The selectmen have issued a call for a special town meeting to be Tuesday, May 18, to pass on the question.

In accordance with such invitation, the following persons were selected to serve on the informal committee:

Selectmen of the town of Putnam: C. E. Pierce, W. P. Warren and Edward Girard.

Assessors: E. B. Kent, Arthur Tourtelotte, and U. D. Beausoliel.

Board of relief: J. W. Seward, F. H. Smith and Oscar Dugas.

From common council of town of Putnam: Mayor V. Chapdelaine, Aldermen Richard and Rogers.

From Rotary club, Samuel Reynolds, W. J. Barnett and M. H. Geisler.

From chamber of commerce: F. F. Russell, C. H. Elliott.

George W. Perry, city engineer, has informed the committee that it will take not less than three months, with the help of three or four assistants, to complete the town maps that he made several years ago and bring them up to date, and that the cost will be not less than $1,500.

The committee estimates that the entire cost of revaluation including the work on the maps new amount to $13,500. In the call for the special town meeting, one of the articles reads:

"To see whether the town will appropriate the sum of $14,000 for the use of the assessors in making such revaluation."

The committee's report adds,

By way of conclusion this committee recommends:

First, that an equalization of the valuation of taxable property in the town of Putnam is essentially necessary, to be done as soon as possible for the good of the town;

Second, that it is a practical impossibility for the citizens of Putnam to make such revaluation or equalization and do justice to all the problems that will be encountered;

Third, that assistance from outside the limits of the town of Putnam should be secured for this purpose;

Fourth, that any and all such assistance should be obtained thruout and to be assistance to the assessors;

Fifth, that a system with records similar to that of the Municipal service company, so that the same may be kept up, should be adopted;

Sixth, that a special town meeting should be called to see whether the town will vote to authorize the assessance as they may require to make a ance as they may reqquire to make a revaluation of the taxable property in the town of Putnam; and to see whether the town will appropriate the sum of $13,500 therefor;

Seventh, that in making such revaluation, one million dollars worth of untaxed property is discovered, and that has been the experience of the Municipal Service company in other towns, the increased revenue in the first year, even at a much reduced tax rate, will reimburse the town for the cost of such revaluation.

The Citizens' committee on Revaluation, Putnam, Conn., May 10, 1926.

At the fifth annual convention of the Windham county Y. M. C. A. held at the Second Congregational church, the meeting was called to order by Chairman Richardson of Moosup. The devotion was by Rev. James F. English of the Second Congregational church. Dinner was served by the women's society of the church under the direction of Mrs. Walter J. Bartlett assisted by a group of young ladies. Following the dinner William Wheaton sang two solos.

The report of the town chairmen on the collections was as follows:

Woodstock $147.50, Thompson $335.00, Eastford $184.00, Killingly $878.00, Plainfield $1842.00, Pomfret $475.00, Putnam $1100.00, total $4,461.50.

Most of those reporting hoped to secure a little more during the next week.

The county secretary gave his report and called on the following boys to tell of the various activities which had been promoted by their groups: Milton Payne for the Friendly Indians of Putnam; Frederick Franklin for the Pioneers of Putnam and Harold Field for the comrades of Dayville. Henry Yeomans, president of the Indian Rock Pioneers of Attawaugan and Ballouville, who won the state efficiency contest, responded when called on.

Edwin Hill, general secretary, of Norwich, spoke on "Estimating Values" and compared the value of a character to other things in life. The church orchestra under the leadership of C. D. Sharp gave the musical program for the evening.

Rev. C. S. Nightingale of Moosup, dismissed the meeting with the benediction.

Arthur Duvert, James J. Charron and Frank Sherlock were delegates from the Cargill council, K. of C., from this city to the convention of the Knights of Columbus, held at South Norwalk Monday and Tuesday.

Joseph Michel of this city has received a cable announcing the death of his brother, Alfred Michel, 43, at Mayence, Germany. Mr. Michel was a trainer of thoroughbred horses and was considered one of the best in his profession. The cause of Mr. Michel's death has not yet been learned.

Samuel Rich spoke in the open assembly at Israel Putnam school this week. His talk on the manufacture of silk was most only very educational but exceedingly entertaining. He took his audience back many years B. C. to the beginning of the silk industry in China and showed the vast progress that had been made in the industry especially in recent years, in the United States. Mr. Rich exhibited some skeins of silk of different qualities, also a Chinese ring of hammered gold which he found at one time when opening a bale of silk. The ring was doubly interesting because of a Chinese monogram so small that it could hardly be seen.

Next week Miss Snyder, the school nurse, will give a health talk in assembly.

Edward Girard, grand trustee, Joseph Larrow, chief ranger, and Edward Donovan, junior woodard of the Court City of Putnam, left Tuesday for New Haven to attend the annual state convention of Foresters of America.

There is to be a meeting of the guarantors of the Putnam Chautauqua association today. (Thursday) in the community room of the Putnam Savings bank. Burt P. McKinnie, circuit director of the Swarthmore Chautauqua association will be present.

Albert Babbitt to East Putnam, who has been in Vermont hunting the gypsy moth, visited the homestead of President Coolidge, also the graves of the Coolidge family.

Fishermen in this vicinity seem to be having rather indifferent luck this year in spite of the fact that the local streams were well stocked for the year's sport.

Mrs. Claude Munyan of Worcester, has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Frank B. Ramsdell, of West Thompson Road.

Miss Thelma Hoadley of Putnam has been the guest of Miss Dorothy Whitehouse, at Abington, the past week.

MEASURING POST TO ADMIT CHILDREN INTO LONGCHAMP

PARIS, May 12 (AP)—Officials at the Longchamp Race Track hereafter will admit children according to size, not age.

At the entrance to the paddock is a post upon which two marks are painted, one being thirty-nine inches from the ground, the other 58 inches. Arriving with their parents, each child is gauged by these marks. Those under thirty-nine inches enter free; those standing between the two marks will be entitled to half the admission fee, and big boys and girls otherwise will pay the full price.

EMILIE GOURD PILOTS SWISS WOMEN TO VOTE

GENEVA, May 12 (AP)—If women voted in Switzerland and were asked to cast their ballot for the most eminent in their confederation there doubtless would be a flood of votes for Miss Emilie Gourd, who personifies dynamic activity in all movements for the public welfare.

Miss Gourd, of Geneva, is editor of The Feminist Movement, the official organ of the national alliance of Swiss feminist societies. Women of Switzerland are permitted to vote only in certain municipalities on questions touching religion and education. Hence, they are waging a persistent campaign to obtain the general franchise right.

The leader in this movement does not expect the new Swiss parliament to play an important role in suffragist history, but the struggle will go on.

"Our tactics are to win over to the cause of woman's suffrage first one canton, and then another canton, and then another." Miss Gourd said. "Which canton will come to us first I know not. The big test will come when the voters as a whole as a federal body will be asked to decide whether women are to vote in Switzerland."

Miss Gourd was born in Geneva in 1878, the daughter of J. J. Gourd, well-known philosopher and professor at the University of Geneva. At an early age she herself became a professor in the private high schools and later was made secretary and then vice-president of the Union of Women of Geneva. In 1914 she founded and personally directed a sewing circle for women whom the great war rendered homeless and workless—a circle which continues its usefulness to this day by providing employment for needy women.

Miss Gourd has directed several investigations into social problems affecting the welfare of women, presided over the Geneva exposition which was devoted to showing what Geneva women are achieving in practical production, and was foremost in insisting that two women should be appointed as assistant police officials at Geneva.

In 1908 she became secretary of the National Alliance of Swiss women societies and later, as president of the Geneva association for women suffrage, launched a popular movement in favor of extending the franchise to women. Then followed election as secretary of the International Alliance for Women Suffrage and for it organized at Geneva the eighth internal woman suffrage congress. She is now the representative of this organization to the league of nations and in the international labor office on all subjects of interest to women.

Despite this activity, Miss Gourd has written several worth-while volumes, in addition to her daily journalistic output.

THAT spicy, rich mildness and that satisfying fullness which distinguish Chesterfield are secured by the most exacting balancing of one tobacco against another, to tone down heaviness or over-richness, and to bring out in fullest measure those subtle "overtones" which set it apart so definitely from all other cigarettes.

The natural methods by which this "balance" is achieved are unique. And when we say that the Chesterfield blend cannot be copied, we mean it literally—not because it is patented or legally protected, nor even because it is a secret closely held, but because without detailed knowledge of every step, the rare delicacy of the tobaccos themselves is inevitably lost.

No—there is only one cigarette that combines so fully the aroma of Turkish and the "body" of Domestic tobaccos; there is only one blend of which men say, "They're mild—and yet they satisfy!" For men who want natural tobacco taste at its smooth and mellow best, there is only one cigarette—and that cigarette is Chesterfield.

THE BRITISH STRIKE

For a week England has been feeling the effects of a general strike, meaning a loss to participants, to individuals and to the country of a tremendous sum that was entirely unnecessary and which accomplished nothing beyond showing what such a strike means and whose resistance can be anticipated.

Blunder has followed blunder in connection with the difficulty arising over the situation in the coal industry but it has been maintained from the beginning that there could and would be no resumption of negotiations concerning the coal situation until the Trades Union congress called off the general strike. It is this step which promises to get England headed back to normal conditions, but it is fully apparent that calling a general strike and getting over the effects of it are decidedly different things.

Even though the calling off of the general strike does not adjust the basic trouble, it paves the way for new deliberations aimed at the ultimate reorganization of the coal industry. There are conditions across the water connected with the coal business which must be corrected. There has been no question about this but it was the failure of the respective sides to get down to brass tacks and face the facts that resulted in the strike leaders flying off the handle and rushing into a strike.

The British might have continued the general strike indefinitely but no one was being hurt as much as they were. They have listened to sensible advice in reconsideration. They have now undone what never should have been done and in the enlightenment gained from their experience it is to be hoped that they will make rapid progress in tackling the real problem. In view of the result it seems highly improbable that there will be an eagerness to rush into another general strike. The experience has served to eliminate the fear of the effects of the wielding of such a big stick.

RETENTION OF LANDMARKS

Because they treasure it and do not want to lose it, Cape Coders through one of their number have written to Henry Ford against the removal of the old windmill at Yarmouth. The letter reads:

"This windmill is the oldest on Cape Cod and is one of its most treasured landmarks. We do not want to let it go. To us of the cape, moving the old mill to Sudbury is as unthinkable as moving the Wayside inn to Yarmouth would be to you. If you buy it, can you not preserve it here in its own setting where it belongs?"

Many will sympathize with this appeal which has been made to Mr. Ford. Perhaps he will, and then again he may not because his aim seems to be to assemble antiques at Sudbury.

But how many instances there are where the same thing happens as that which is now disturbing the residents of Cape Cod. Perhaps no one has seriously thought of the possibilities of the old windmill being removed from Yarmouth, although if it was on the market such a thing might well have been anticipated. Not many would have any interest in such a step, but it is apparent that the people of the cape are deeply concerned over it and yet they have refrained from doing anything about preserving it for themselves until its loss is threatened, and now it may be too late.

That is too often the way in regard to many landmarks or buildings and spots of historic interest. No interest is shown in their retention until they are about gone. It is frequently the case with those who have lived perhaps for a generation in leased quarters, who might have years before acquired the property and insured that as their home as long as they desired, but who failed to do anything about it and yet are broken hearted because someone else buys it and they must move.

Disturbing as such cases are, it is a bit strange that they do not make a sufficient impression at the right time to stimulate action that will prevent such distressing possibilities as that on Cape Cod. The barn door should be fastened before they start leading the horse away.

THE NEW RAILROAD BILL

When it came to a show down there was only small opposition to the Watson-Parker railroad bill in the senate and all that is now needed is the president's signature to make it a law.

This is legislation that was prompted and put through because of the fact that the railroad labor board had been denied the authority and found that it could not enforce its decisions. The board was created for the purpose of adjusting railroad disputes. It was regarded as a body to deal impartially with such questions as might arise between the railroads and their employes. But while the bill was originally drafted with full authority and a complete set of teeth many of the latter were extracted before the adoption of the measure. The result has been that the board has been handicapped and there have been times when its rulings have been disregarded by both the railroads and by the employes.

This board was created for the purpose of giving due consideration to the public in railway matters and with the idea of preventing strikes. Possibly with the necessary teeth it might have met the situation but it never had the chance. Through its handicap it failed and there arose a demand for something that would meet the requirements more satisfactorily. The Watson-Parker bill is the result of the chief opposition raised to it is that the public is not a party to the arbitration requirements, though provisions are made for carrying the matter through various stages of arbitration in an effort to avoid a strike.

It will be necessary to put the bill to a test before it can be determined whether it will prove as successful as believed. It ends the railroad labor board and sets up a substitute method of adjustment the effectiveness of which can best be told after it has been tried. If we are to judge by the sentiment of the senators there should be no doubt about it, but it is in the eating and not in the looks that the proof of the pudding is known to lie.

AMUNDSEN SCORES

Visits to the north pole are getting so commonplace that they excite less attention than in the days of Admiral Peary's exploit. Nevertheless the passage of the Norge over the much sort point, the first time a dirigible ever accomplished the feat, carries a distinction all its own.

Navigation of the air has made possible the accomplishments of Byrd and Amundsen. Because of the character of the craft it is not belittling the accomplishment of Commander Byrd in the least to say that more confidence was placed in the successful accomplishment of the flying over the pole by the Norge than by the airplane. One reason for this was the failure of Amundsen last year in his airplane effort, and his refusal to have anything more to do with an undertaking of that character in an airplane.

But while Commander Byrd has proved his contention that the pole could be reached by flying machine, new honors are awaiting Amundsen at the conclusion of his flight, if successful, for he is passing over territory which has never been visited by explorers and should be in a position to tell much about what lies within that part of the polar region between the pole and Point Barrow, Alaska. Whatever it is, whether land or just one great field of ice, it will be no longer possible to refer to it as unknown.

Apparently in this month of May demonstrations are being made in regard to means of far north transportation which are going to help materially in further efforts for clearing up the many mysteries remaining at the top of the world. Amundsen holds the unusual honor now of having seen both the north and the south pole.

PENNSYLVANIA'S CONTEST

Next week a primary contest that is arousing keen interest will culminate in Pennsylvania. The groundwork for it was laid a long time ago but it has been growing warmer and warmer as the three cornered fight has developed in the republican party accompanied by the flopping of leaders from one side to another.

Senator Pepper has made an excellent record in the upper house of congress since the death of Senator Penrose. Governor Pinchot has coveted the office and he began making preparations for it before the days of the coal strike. That aided him in keeping up the effort. But being a pronounced dry that gave Congressman Vare the idea that he had a chance for the nomination as a pronounced wet by making it a triangular contest. He is therefore hoping that through the division of the dry vote between Senator Pepper and Governor Pinchot he will be able to get the nomination.

Indications point strongly to the fact that Senator Pepper has the lead, but it is evident in his case even that the Pinchot candidacy is doing more for Vare than anything else. It brought the dry question to the front in this campaign in Pennsylvania. The republicans of Pennsylvania have the best of reasons for desiring the retention of Pepper, an administration supporter but it remains to be seen whether the selfish ambitions of Pinchot are going to upset that situation and bring about what Pinchot—the driest of the drys—is most outspokenly opposed to, the selection of a sopping wet senator in Congressman Vare.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Thursday, and the 13th.

The man on the corner says: Oil does much for a lawnmower as well as other troubles.

Six per cent. of the fires are attributed to careless smokers. It is a good crowd to keep out of.

Perhaps the strikers of England can see where they have profited as the result of the week of idleness.

The English government is getting lots of advice but it continues to be in full command of the situation.

"Waistline returning," says a Paris statement. Seems as though that is going or coming most of the time.

If everyone of the explorers headed for the pole this year should hack off a chunk, how much would there be left?

One thing is noticeable, Commander Byrd doesn't base his claim to reaching the pole on the report made by Dr. Cook.

Speaking of candidates, it is a fair guess that the caucuses are not far away, and that means it is time to get interested.

Now that the north pole has been reached by airplane who will lead the big rush to conquer the south pole in the same manner?

The motor truck is being put to a strenuous test in Great Britain these days but it is apparent that the railroads are no longer the sole reliance for transportation.

SOME WEDDINGS

"Here, here!" objected the impatient man who had been biting a cigar in two for quite a long time. "Aren't you two women ever going to quit talking and play cards with us? Backbite and I have been ready and waiting for several years and you go right on jabbering excitedly over nothing at all——"

"Nothing at all!" cried his wife with great indignation. "Why, Corinne got asked to the Pitchpenny wedding, actually was there, and she's telling me all about everything——"

"Oh, suffering cookies!" groaned the impatient man, beginning to walk the floor. "The president of the United States might issue a war ultimatum and you wouldn't turn a hair, but any woman would run a mile to hear how the orange blossoms were arranged on the hair of the fair young bride. All brides are beautiful, just as certainly as Tuesday is the next day after Monday, and if the wreath doesn't run around from the back of their heads to the front it is sure to run from the front around to the back.

"If a bride doesn't wear white satin she wears write lace," continued the impatient man, "and nevertheless a loud chorus will shriek 'what did she wear?' whenever a guest who was there comes in sight! You would think there was a chance of their hearing something exciting such as the information that she wore a red flannel kimono and rubber boots tied up with white satin ribbon! Nothing like that ever happens, never! Each bride starts out with the commendable idea that she is going to make her wedding different from all others, and invariably she simmers down to cream white satin made straight up and down, either short or long, and if she doesn't wear her grandmother's lace veil she wears one of tulle and either her hair is all covered up with it or it isn't! There simply is not a chance of her appearing in a Mexican sombrero or wearing a necklace of shells about her throat and giving you something to talk about!

"It is a waste of breath to inquire feverishly who caught the bouquet! Always the homeliest and most uninteresting girl present picks it out of the air while the disappointed ones growl behind their back teeth at the unjustness of fate. The unattractive girl never in the world gets a bid anywhere and all she can do with the $50 orchids and lilies is to stick them in a vase and set them on the mantel for nobody to see, whereas most any one of the other girls could have put some of them to good use as a corsage at a dance or tea fight or the theater, to say nothing of making some man wildly jealous wondering who had sent his girl such flowers. Catching a bridal bouquet gives a girl a lot of pep and courage too, and she starts out mentally refreshed and firmly believing that she merely has to twinkle her eyes and curve her lips and Tom or John or Bill will capitulate and ask her to be his.

"If the bride double-crosses folks and tosses her bouquet straight at her best friend some tall, lank girl will rise up in the foreground and capture it, some girl nobody cares a hoot about and who never in the world will be a bride herself in spite of superstition.

"It's no good to ask how the bride appeared and if the bridegroom was nervous, because all brides are calm and radiant and all bridegrooms look as though they were hanging on by a thread and at the first loud noise or unkind word would bolt and run for their lives. I fancy it's the expression a man on his way to the electric chair wears.

"I can't imagine why you are all so crazy to know what they had to eat at the wedding, either. You have attended several score weddings and so have I and I'll go jump in the lake if they ever had any food except chicken salad or chicken croquettes, molded fruit salad, one-bite rolls, coffee, nuts, ice cream and cake. They couldn't.

"I haven't the heart to mention the presents—a child of 6 could make out the list and it would be right. As for the wedding trip, if they are rich they go to Europe and if they are poor the bride's mother says Pansy is so simple and old-fashioned in her tastes and what do you think she has insisted on just a little motor trip somewhere for their honeymoon! Why I could tell you exactly all the news Corinne has been retailing to you about this Pitchpenny wedding——"

"Much you know about it!" declared his wife coldly. "The croquettes were lobster and the groom actually smiled and——"

"Well, I'll be darned!" cried the impatient man in amazement. "I never heard of such a thing! Tell me the rest!"—Exchange.

From Small Beginnings

William Watson

On the Pacific ocean for many years there have plied the various boats of the Matson line, carrying cargoes and passengers to many ports, but especially between San Francisco and the Hawaiian Islands. The tourists who sit on the decks of great steamers like the "Wilhelmina" and travel in safety and comfort toward the tropics, knowing, the boat represents wealth and power. Most of the tourists do not know that the success of the line is due to a Swedish boy's love of the sea, ambition and determination.

At the age of ten, when most boys are playing about in dooryards under their mothers' eyes, William Matson went to sea for a year. In intervals of life on the water he attended school, but he was still a boy when he crossed the Atlantic to New York, and made the long voyage around the Horn. On the Pacific ocean, far from his birthplace in Sweden, he served as a sailor on various types of vessels. Finally, having developed mastery and executive ability as well as seamanship, he became captain of a schooner and did a most profitable carrying business.

Many men are content with small successes and never rise above them. Others constantly see new opportunities. William Matson looked beyond the success that he had and saw the future that lay in the development of what were then called "The Sandwich Islands." At the age of 35 he built a vessel designed to carry freight between San Francisco and the Sandwich, or Hawaiian Islands. At once he found his new venture extremely successful, and added other vessels until he commanded a fleet. From the building of sailing vessels he proceeded to the building of steam vessels, and finally to the launching of great iron passenger steamships.

Later still, he aided in the development of oil fields in the United States, and in the making of long pipe lines. Without ambition he might have remained a common sailor before the mast.

He has never attended school and was 14 years of age before he learned to read and write. This is not the first time that Major Berry has aspired to high public office. In 1914 he was a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of Tennessee, and was defeated by Thomas C. Rye by 32 votes. Two years ago he announced for the democratic vice presidential nomination but did not push his candidacy.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Another Ruined Tree

Who lets his feet to mischief stray
Has started on a slippery way.
—Old Mother Nature.

Just why Johnny Chuck had climbed into one of the young apple trees of Farmer Brown's Boy and ruined it by tearing off pieces of bark completely around it he probably couldn't have told. I guess you all know how it is. We sometimes do things on what we call impulse. We do things without any real reason for doing them. So it was that Johnny Chuck got into mischief in this way.

Now, it is one of the laws of life that it is always easier to do a thing the second time. Johnny Chuck didn't know that he was doing any harm. He just didn't think anything about it one way or the other. But, having once climbed one of those little trees it occurred to Johnny to climb another. At the time he didn't have anything particular to do. It occurred to him that he would like to be up high where he could look around. Actually he was only a few feet from the ground, but for one who lives all the time on the ground that is high. So up he went, and he sat for a while, just looking around. Then, for the sake of something to do, he began to gnaw the bark. He did it rather absent-mindedly, as the saying is. He didn't do a great deal at that particular time—not enough to do any serious harm.

"Come on up, Polly," he cried to Polly Chuck

But Johnny rather enjoyed sitting up in that tree. It was an easy tree to climb. It wasn't far from his home. He could look out over the Green Meadows. He could look over to the Green forest. You see, that young tree was near the edge of the orchard.

"Come on up, Polly, come on up, Polly," he cried to Polly Chuck. "It beats sitting up on our doorstep for watching for enemies. I wonder that I haven't thought of it before."

But Polly Chuck was too much concerned with household affairs to waste any time. She had her family to look after. And any mother with a family to look after knows what that means. So Johnny climbed the tree daily, and each time he pulled off a little more bark. Each time he was a little deeper in mischief.

Now, all this time Farmer Brown's Boy had been busy elsewhere and he had not thought to see if Johnny Chuck was doing any harm to the young trees. When he did think to so over and look he discovered that he was too late. He found another ruined tree. He knew that it was Johnny Chuck who had done it because he saw Johnny jump down out of the tree. For a few minutes Farmer Brown's Boy almost lost his temper. Yes, sir, he did so. For a few minutes he felt almost inclined to go into the house and get his terrible gun and put an end to Johnny Chuck. But in the end he grinned ruefully.

"Johnny Chuck doesn't know any better," said he. "He doesn't know that he hasn't just as much right to the bark from this tree as from any wild tree. The scamp is into mischief, but doesn't know that he is into mischief. There is only one thing to do in a case like this, and that is to put Johnny where he can't get into mischief. I can't have my apple trees ruined, even if I am fond of Johnny Chuck. So Johnny will have to go. I don't know just what I'll do with him but he can't stay here."

Stories That Recall Others

Specific

The sweet young thing and her future life partner were making arrangements with the minister for the marriage ceremony.

"What is your name?" the clergyman asked.

"Mary Jones, sir?" (Perhaps it was Smith.)

"And what is your age?" he continued.

"Nineteen, sir," answered Mary.

"Where were you born?"

"What did you say?" inquired the bride hesitatingly.

"I say, where were you born?"

Taking two steps nearer the minister, she lowered her voice—

"At home, sir."

Grandma Younger

The friend who had just passed successfully a life insurance examination was boasting about the condition of his health. He said the doctor told him it was remarkable that a man at the age of 40 should have a blood pressure of only 120.

Little Irma, after listening to the guest's boasting about his blood pressure of only 120 said:

"That is nothing. Grandma must be younger than you are for her blood pressure is only about 160."

LUTHERAN CONFERENCE HOLDS CLOSING SESSION HERE

The Connecticut district Lutheran convention, which began here Monday night at the First Evangelical Lutheran church came to a close Wednesday after the dinner that followed the morning session.

As no invitation for next year had been received, it was voted to leave the place of meeting for the next conference to be decided by the officers.

A proposal to change the program plan for next year was not favored, but one change was made by providing that there shall be a mass meeting on the Sunday morning preceding the confessional service with which the conference opens on Monday evening.

Interesting reports from the missions at Madison, this state, and at Webster and Lowell, Mass., were made by the superintendent of missions, Dr. J. Knoll of New York, Rev. Gustav Degring, president of the orphans home in Jersey City, reported on the work done there, and appeal for help for his work in Kurdistan was made by Rev. Von Mariohannes, who was a visitor at the conference.

After the dinner Wednesday, which was served by the women of the church and during which selections were provided by Frank P. Decker's orchestra, the women announced that they had a surprise entertainment for the delegates, which proved to be a cleverly presented play, which was greatly enjoyed.

Tuesday afternoon the delegates were invited by the pastor, Rev. H. Hunzinger, to visit the Slater art gallery and museum, where Mrs. Ozias Dodge contributed greatly to their enjoyment of the visit by her courteous attention in explaining the art treasures there to be seen.

SUIT OVER WHITE STAR STOCK IS SETTLED

The suit of Mrs. Lena Rabinovitch against her brother-in-law, Max Rabinovitch, both of this city, which was assigned for trial in the superior court here Wednesday before Judge Ernest C. Simpson, did not come to trial but was settled out of court after several conferences between the judge and the attorneys in the case. Plaintiff and defendant were in the court room, with their witnesses prepared for the trial of the case.

Attorney Lee Roy Robbins of this city and Attorney Lonergan of Hartford represented the plaintiff. Lena Rabinovitch, while Attorneys E. W. Perkins and Arthur M. Brown represented the defendant.

Mrs. Rabinovitch sued for specific performance of contract, or in lieu thereof for $20,000 damages. It was her claim that the defendant had made a written agreement on Jan. 13, 1926 to sell 250 shares of the stock of the White Star Clothing Co. for $20,341.08, or had agreed to buy her stock at that price, this number of shares being a half interest in the company. On Jan. 19, the plaintiff claims she tendered them price agreed upon, but Max Rabinovitch refused to deliver the stock.

By the settlement made Wednesday, it is understood that Max and Elizabeth Rabinovitch, his wife, sold their stock to the plaintiff at a price agreed to by both parties.

PYTHIANS CELEBRATE THEIR ANNIVERSARY WITH BANQUET

Wauregan lodge, No. 6, Knights of Pythias, observed its 56th anniversary Wednesday evening by holding a banquet at the Wauregan hotel. At 7.30 o'clock the 50 couples present marched into the dining hall headed by Mayor and Mrs. Milo R. Waters, and took seats at prettily decorated tables. Grace was said by Louis M. Crandall, after which the assemblage sang America. Rudolph Henschel, chairman of the banquet committee, introduced as the toastmaster, Dr. Kopeland Markoff and Dr. Markoff announced that the song leader for the evening was Louis M. Crandall. The menu was as follows:

Grapefruit Maraschino
Hearts of Celery Queen Olives
Pickles
Vegetable Soup
Roast Swedesboro Chicken, Stuffed
Apple Sauce
Potatoes English Brown
Stewed Corn
French Bread
Neapolitan Ice Cream
Assorted Cakes

During the banquet D'Atri's orchestra provided a concert programme. Miss Charlotte Fowler was heard in a pleasing vocal selection, The Faith, accompanied by Miss Faith S. Ryan. As an encore Miss Fowler sang My Memory. J. Warren Kane entertained with a splendidly rendered vocal solo, Little Mother of Mine, accompanied by Miss Ryan. Mr. Kane gave as his encore, Just a Cottage Small by a Waterfall. Harry Schwartz was heard in a solo, She Was Just a Sailor's Sweetheart, accompanied by the orchestra and for which he received tremendous applause. Dr. Markoff created considerable merriment when he read a number of humorous "telegrams" purporting to have been sent to "Station K. of P., Wauregan hotel," by radio listeners. Dr. Markoff stating that, although it was unknown to everyone but himself, there were microphones attached to each table.

Miss Fowler, Mr. Kane and Harry Schwartz were again heard in vocal solos. The latter's selection was announced as a surprise number and proved to be, I'm Sitting On Top of the World.

Mayor Waters a Guest.

At the conclusion of the menu Toastmaster Markoff introduced as the first speaker Mayor Milo R. Waters. At the mention of the mayor's name all stood and gave him three lusty cheers. Mayor Waters expressed his appreciation of the hospitality Wauregan lodge has always extended him. He spoke of the spirit of friendliness in Wauregan lodge and said he had never asked any co-operation from the lodge but that it was quickly forthcoming. He said that as mayor he has attended practically every public social event held by the lodge. There were more cheers for the mayor as he concluded his address.

Dr. Markoff then introduced as the next speaker, Past Grand Chancellor Thomas Troland of New London. Mr. Troland, like the mayor, was greeted with cheers. I have enjoyed myself here this evening, said Mr. Troland. "I've spoke of his long connection, 30 years, with the Knights of Pythias, and said he has done what was in his power to do for the interests of the order. Wauregan lodge is one of the oldest lodges in the state. It was started when the Knights of Pythias was in its infancy. Some of the best citizens Norwich has had in the last 50 years were numbered on its roster, Mr. Troland said. Its teachings, friendship, charity and benevolence, are great assets to a city. It is a great privilege for any young man to belong to this order. I hope to be able to come to these banquets as long as I live, said Mr. Troland in concluding his address.

Spoke Upon Fraternalism.

The next speaker introduced by the toastmaster was Lawrence E. Millen, past exalted ruler of Norwich lodge, No. 430, B. P. O. E. Mr. Millen spoke upon "Fraternalism," in part as follows:

Fraternal brotherhoods were formed for the purpose of joining or associating men who would bind themselves by their oath in a tie which should be as strong as the blood bond of true brothers. And so is the bond of brotherhood considered the strongest tie among humans. Next to that bond is placed the fraternal bond of brotherhood and to many the tie of the fraternal brotherhood is considered equal to or in some cases stronger than the blood tie. The fraternal bond is the bond of true friendship and there can be no closer tie than that of a friend. "I," said a man, "would go to the gates of hell, for a friend;" and his companion said, "For a friend, I would go in."

Friendship can be judged by no measure of the human mind. Writers from the early days of the Ancients have expatiated in glowing words upon the wonders of friendship and still new epigrams are being coined every day. "What is the secret of your life?" Charles Kingsley was once asked. And he replied, "I had a friend." Relatives are friends given us by heaven; friends are relatives chosen by our eyes. Friendship cheers like a sunbeam; charms like a good story; inspires like a brave leader; binds like a golden chain; guides like a heavenly vision.

In the hours of distress and misery, the eyes of every mortal man turn to friendship; in the hours of gladness and conviviality, what is our want? It is friendship. When the heart overflows with gratitude, or with any other sweet and sacred sentiment, what is the word to which it would give utterance? A friend. The greatest happiness in life is the conviction that we are loved—loved for ourselves, or rather, loved in spite of ourselves. A true friend is an inspiration as well as a comfort, not so much by what he does for us as by what he incites us to do and to be, because of his example, his deeds, and his ideals. What others see in us to admire or to be grateful for is a result of what our friends are, and of what our friends, perhaps all unconsciously, have induced us to become.

The problem of friendship is the problem of life itself. A friend is the first person who comes in when the whole world has gone out. Whatever the number of a man's friends, there will be times in his life when he has too few. Friendship is the giving and sharing of our love with others. As Edwin Markham said, "There is a destiny which makes us brothers. None goes on his way alone. . . I that we send into the lives of others comes back into our own.

I wonder if there is anything in this world as beautiful as good, strong friendship between two men. They don't go round doing the mollycoddle act; they don't kiss each other every time they meet; in fact, they never do kiss each other, unless one is lying cold in death, but they are sure one knows the other is always going to stand by him, and they feel that no matter what happens, each can rely on the other.

When you have made a friend, keep him. Friendship is like an old piece of china. It is precious only so long as it is perfect. Once it is broken, no matter how cleverly you mend it, it is good for nothing but to put on a shelf in a corner where it won't be too closely looked at.

With the associating of men into brotherhoods came the practise of charity of aid to the brothers who, through misfortune or adversity might have found the way hard and the battle of life going against them. Then came the furthering of this practise to include the aiding of those outside the bonds of the organization to which the men belong. And charity of this kind has been recognized as the greatest of its kind in the world—the doing about unostentatiously doing good to mankind. Not the charity that blares forth its deeds from the mountain tops but the kind that lets not the one hand knew what the other hand doeth. Fraternal organizations are seeking out daily among their fellow humans the unfortunate who have fallen by the wayside and stretching forth the helping hand. Men and women are aided until they are enabled to get back upon their feet again; children are given the care and education which through misfortune of the death of their parents they would not have been able to obtain. Positions are found for cripples and handicapped ones. Cripples are given through many of these organizations the operations they could not afford and which gives them back a healthy, perfect body and allows them to stand alongside their fellows. So much of this work is being done daily by organizations such as yours that it would be impossible to relate the half of it and permit us to get home tonight.

You are, and should be proud you are members of a benevolent brotherhood. One may ask what is a benevolent brotherhood and the answer would be an organization of men whose avowed purpose is to be charitable, generous and kind.

So live up to that meaning and be charitable to all, be generous to those in misfortune and be kind to everybody, and if you do this old world will be a wonderful place to live in.

Live each day so that you can look at yourself in the mirror of your soul and not be ashamed.

The Golden Rule reads, "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you." If this be your creed, then practise it; for if it be honored more in the breach than in the observance, then it be not honor.

Live every day so that you may be the friend of man. Keep strife and animosity out of your daily life, never let it creep into your organization. Remember if you sow the wind, you will reap the whirlwind, and if you sow the seed of animosity and strife you must reap the harvest in tampered growth and discord.

Live in peace and harmony with all your brothers as well as with your fellow man. Keep a smiling face when things seem to be breaking badly for you. You have a world of friends in your fellow-members and remember it's the fellow who smiles who wins. Live so that you may never be ashamed of any little detail of your daily life. Remember you alone are responsible for the way you are judged.

Chancellor Commander Spoke

As the final speaker, Dr. Markoff introduced George Schiller, chancellor commander of Wauregan lodge. He was also greeted with three hearty cheers. The chancellor commander spoke briefly, touching on the value of friendship and in concluding expressed the wish that all present would enjoy the evening.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to dancing, D'Atri's orchestra furnishing the dance programme. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the banquet comprised Rudolph Henschel, chairman, Earle Tagart, treasurer, Dr. S. Goldberg, Aaron Siegal and Philip Hertz.

ACADEMY SMOTHERS STONINGTON UNDER AVALANCHE OF HARD HITTING

Turning what had been a good game for seven innings into an orgy of hitting in the eighth inning the Academy ball team simply and unmercifully swamped the Stonington team at Stonington Wednesday afternoon, 18 to 2. In the eighth when the Academy went on its wild rampage of hitting 12 runs were scored and three of Stonington pitchers were badly battle scarred. In this frame the local boys hit practically every ball thrown their way and then Stonington went up in the air like the proverbial balloon, and there was nothing to it. This was the second league victory for the Academy.

For seven innings the teams battled hard with Johnny Greene having the edge on his rival Bill Roever, the big Stonington left hander. Greene kept up his strike-out average in the game, sending back 11 of the Stonington men by this route, and allowing only five scattered hits. Roever also pitched well until the eighth inning then was unpleasantly surprised when the Academy boys started to open their attack. Roever held the fort until six runs had been scored off him and then retired to left field in favor of McCaffery. McCaffery pitched to three men and all got on base either through his wildness or the erratic fielding of his teammates. H Bryer then took up the pitching burden but he was little better than his predecessors and the running-getting carnival continued.

The Academy was first to score in the game, the counter coming in the fourth inning when Burke doubled and rode home on Yerrington's single to left. To this score they added another run in the fifth when Cimikoski singled, stole second and went to third on a balk. Cimikoski scored when Red Cella failed to hold a pitched ball. Stonington in their half of the fifth scored one tally without the aid of a hit. R. Cella walked and went to second on an infield out and to third on a passed ball. J. Cella, pinch hitting for Sklarew, walked. Stephani hit to Burke and Burke threw to third base and R. Cella scored on the play. This ended Stonington's scoring until the ninth inning when two errors and a hit by Stephani gave them another run.

With a base on balls and two infield outs the Academy scored a lone tally in the sixth inning. A base on balls and two successive hits in the seventh inning added another brace of tallies and then came the eighth inning. In the eighth frame an error and seven successive hits netted six runs and then a pair of errors by the Stonington catcher helped the Academy to two more counters. Then the Academy started around again and still there was no one out. Two bases on balls and another pair of errors boosted the Academy runs to 12 for the inning. Coach Brigham then started to shoot the second string men into the lineup and the Stonington team was able to retire the side. In the ninth inning a double by Tombari and a single by Billy Tirrell netted another run. Every man on the Academy varsity connected for at least one hit and scored at least one run.

Lloyd Jarvis led the hitting attack with a pair of singles and a double, two of his hits coming in one inning, the eighth. Hymie Sadinsky poled out the longest hit of the game, a triple to deep left. The score:

BOSTON, May 13.—(AP)—Opportune hitting by Haney, Rigney and Flagstead, all former Tigers aided greatly in Boston's 4 to 2 victory over Detroit here today. Hal Wilkie, in the box for the Red Sox, allowed only eight hits to win his and the team's second game during their home appearance. Fielding thrills were contributed by Sizney and Bratcher. PIRATES POUND PHILLIES' PITCHER FOR EASY VICTORY

PITTSBURGH, May 13.—(AP)—The Pirates bombarded four Philadelphia pitchers for a total of 17 hits today, and won an easy victory, 14 to 3. The Quakers gained an early lead but Meadows tightened up in the third inning and, aided by hard timely hitting by his teammates, had little difficulty winning his fourth straight game. The champions won the game in the third when they scored six runs on six hits, a base on balls, and a sacrifice. Harper hit a home run in the eighth. The score:

NEW YORK GIANTS FACE COMPLETE SHAKE-UP ACCORDING TO THE CRITICS

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—The New York Giants are facing a general shake-up, baseball men believe, the first steps in which have been taken by releasing Art Nehf, southpaw pitcher, and Hinie Groh, veteran third sacker. Groh's unconditional release today after waivers had been obtained on him, follows the sale of Nehf to the Cincinnati Reds.

The Giants have slumped badly since getting away at first to a brilliant start in the National league race, in which they were picked to supply the most formidable opposition to the World's Champion Pirates. Their present position, fourth, is the lowest they have occupied in any season since 1921. As a result, Manager John McGraw already has done some juggling with his lineup and announced in parting with Groh and Nehf that he is making way for new blood.

Coincident with these moves it was reported the re-organization would extend to the officers of the club as well, with Francis X McQuade retiring as treasurer. This, however, was denied by J. J. Tierney, club secretary.

In Groh and Nehf the Giants lose two of the leading figures in their four-year championship stretch from 1921 to 1924. Together these two stars cost the club more than $150,000 in cash and players. Groh and his "bottle bat" coming from Cincinnati in 1921 in a $100,000 deal while Nehf was purchased from Boston in 1919 for a reported sum of $55,000.

Out through injuries, Groh first was supplanted by the youthful Freddy Lindstrom in the 1924 world's series. He lost out to the same rival this spring in the battle for the hot corner post.

Because he has been in the majors more than ten years—15 altogether—Groh was entitled to his unconditional release. Waivers on him, it is understood, were obtained because of reluctance of other clubs to take over his contract, calling for a reported yearly salary of $10,000. As a free agent now, however, he is expected to sign with some other major league outfit at new terms.

WALKER CUP PROGRAM WILL BE CARRIED OUT

LONDON, May 12.—(AP)—The United States Walker cup golf team returned from its first practice round at Walton Heath today to find that Britain's big strike was over and that their program of international play in this country would be carried out as originally planned.

With George Von Elm An Absentee, the American contingent visited Walton Heath as guests of Lord Riddell playing two rounds in four ball matches under weather conditions which gave them an indication of the obstacles they will encounter here. Favored by sunshine in the morning, the golfers later in the day ran into a squall followed by a hailstorm and blowing winds.

Von Elm chose the famous Sunningdale course, a more difficult layout for his practice session.

Bobby Jones, the American champion, turned in the best golf of the day with a 74 in the morning and a 76 in the afternoon. His morning card included a six and a seven, while in the afternoon he closed with a five and a six on two par three holes.

The other players brought in cards ranging from 76 to 80, Ouimet posting 79 to 80. The youngsters gave a good account of themselves, Roland Mackenzie displaying tremendous driving powers. British cracks who watched this boy predicted great things for him.

Mackenzie partnered Jones in the afternoon against the great old British champion, James Braid, and Fred McLeod of Washington, D. C., who came back with the Walker team after many years in the states. The teams finished at square.

Tomorrow the players will rest before going to Sandwich Friday morning to put in a couple of practice rounds for the St. George Vase play on Saturday, in which the entire American team is entered.

The Americans then will play near London until next Wednesday, when they will leave for Muirfield to tune up for the British championships on May 24.

"We are all delighted the strike is off and we already have settled down to practice and carry out the program as originally planned," Captain Gardner told the Associated Press.

The arrival of the American team was less heralded than any similar visit of former years, due to lack of space in the small editions of the papers.

Robert Harris, amateur champion and captain of the British team, met the Americans at Southampton and played with them at Walton Heath.

The feature of the match was the game between Captain Watties of Yale and Captain Cooper, of Wesleyan, when the latter was defeated, 3 and 2.

YALE AND HARVARD TO ENTER POLO CHAMPIONSHIPS

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—Yale, Harvard and Princeton have filed the first entries for the intercollegiate polo championship at the Westchester Biltmore Country club, June 19 to 26, it was announced today.

Each of the "big three" has held the title. Yale won the first tournament in 1923 Princeton was victorious the next year while Harvard is the present champion.

STANDARD OIL TEAM AT ASHLAND PARK SUNDAY

Sunday, at Ashland park, the Standard Oil team of New London will clash with the undefeated Ashland A. A. As they have promised, the management of the Ashland club is securing none but the very best teams in the semi-pro line. The New London contingent is composed of the greatest aggregation of stars that the Standard Oil company could sign and in their lineup are names well known to eastern Connecticut fans. Perhaps the most prominent of their players is Artie Guillard, first sacker, who has played a lot of local ball for the State hospital and Jewett City and also a year of professional ball. Artie is well remembered for his terrific hitting and snappy fielding. Eddie Burns, another ex-Hospital star, will cover the keystone sack. With a team composed of men of that calibre Jewett City is slated to be the scene of one corking good ball game.

Manager Bill Liberty realizes that his charges are up against no mean organization and is drilling his boys long and hard every night this week. Most of the time is being devoted to infield play, smoothing out a few rough spots that cropped up in last week's game. All the boys are hitting hard and they are looking forward to Sundays game with a determination that bodes no good for the rival pitcher.

The complete line-ups for both teams will be in Saturday's Bulletin.

COUTURE BLANKS SAINTS WITH ONE LONE HIT

Couture, on the mound for the Warriors, came in an ace of hurling a no-hit no-run game at the Academy Campus Wednesday evening when he let the St. Joseph's club baseball team down with one hit and the Warriors won 8 to 0. The lone hit was made by Tibbetts in the fourth inning. Couture fanned 11 men.

Eddie Edwards, pitching for the losers was touched up for 11 hits by the powerful Warrior attack. Leo Martin led in the hitting for the winners, connecting for a triple and two singles out of three trips to the plate.

The fielding feature was again furnished by Norm Courbois, who speared Edwards' long drive in right center, robbing him of an extra base hit.

The Warriors expect to collash with the Taftville Bearcats at Taftville on Sunday in what should be an interesting contest. Couture will without doubt perform on the mound for the Warriors.

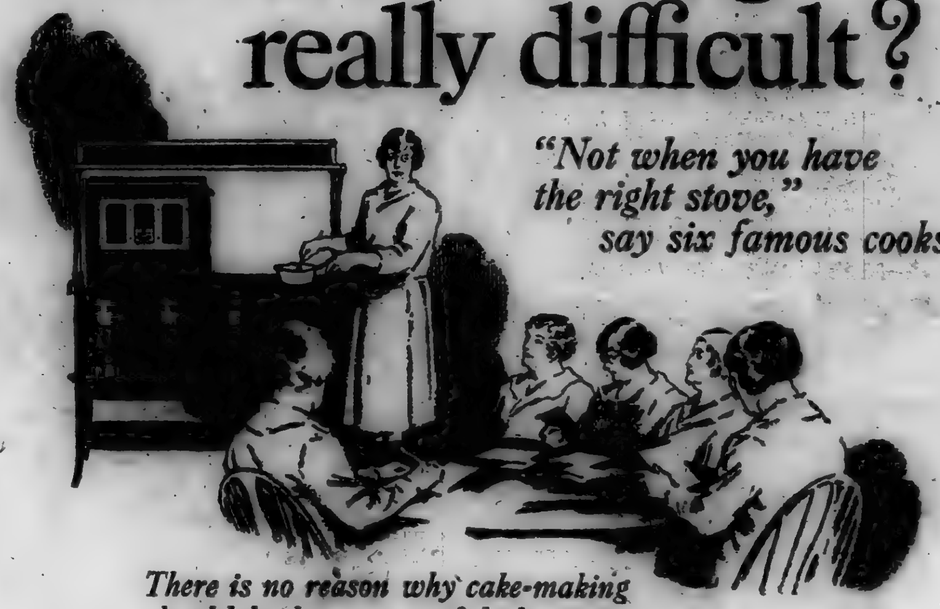
Is cake baking really difficult?



"Not when you have the right stove," say six famous cooks.

There is no reason why cake-making should be less successful than any other cooking operation—when the cook can depend upon her stove.

THAT is the statement of six famous cooks who have just completed a practical cooking test of the Perfection Stove. All six agreed in praising the Perfection highly for its baking ability, as well as for its general performance.

"Speaking of cakes, half the making is in the baking," said Miss Ross Michaelis, New Orleans, domestic science specialist.

Delicate Angel Food

"An even temperature must be maintained while an angel food and other cakes are baking," added Miss Margaret A. Hall, nutrition expert of the Battle Creek College of Home Economics. "When I baked cakes in the Perfection oven I used a standard, portable oven thermometer as a check. The flame did not creep or crawl. You can depend on the Perfection flame to remain as you set it."

"My orange cakes and devil's foods were delicious," commented Mrs. Kate B. Vaughn, Los Angeles, household economics director. "The air circulation in the Perfection oven seems perfect. All excess moisture was carried away."

"It's the 'live heat' of the Perfection Oven which brings such good results," said Mrs. Rorer, famous Philadelphia cook.

"The Perfection oven is so roomy that there is room for several cakes at a time," said Mrs. Belle DeGraf, San Francisco. "And, through the glass door of the oven you can see just how they are baking. No need to open the door and lose any heat."

Miss Lucy G. Allen, of the Boston School of Cookery, commented on the visible oil supply. "You can see," she remarked, "whether you have enough for your cooking. If not, it's easy to refill the Perfection reservoir without soiling your hands."

High Praise

These are just a few of Perfection's good baking points which the six expert cooks praised highly. You will find many others when you bake on a Perfection. It's the stove which proves cake-baking is not difficult.

"This is the flame for preheating the oven," says Mrs. Rorer. "It has yellow tips, 1⅛ inches high above the blue flame."

"You can see when the glass reservoir tank needs refilling, and refill it without getting a drop of oil on your fingers," says Miss Allen.

When court came in Foreman Allan C. Whitford of the jury which had heard the case was directed by the court clerk to break the seal and hand him the verdict which the jury had found Tuesday, about 5 o'clock after court had adjourned.

AS ALL MASTER CARPENTERS YIELD, STRIKE AT NEW LONDON IS ENDED

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 13.—The strike of the journeymen carpenters was ended today when the strikers returned to work after the masters had agreed to grant the wage increase of demand of 15 cents per hour. The journeymen will now be paid an hourly wage of $1.15. The strikers have been out of work about two weeks. At the start of the strike the masters refused absolutely to grant the wage demand, but with four of the masters agreeing to pay the increased wage because they were on contract work that had to be finished within a specified time, the other masters gradually weakened and this forenoon all of the masters agreed to pay the increased wage.

They were convicted at the May term of the superior court. Quinn has been a most persistent violator of the liquor law. Quinn is a fine specimen of manhood in appearance. He is of powerful frame and stands more than six feet in height but his legs are paralyzed and he can walk only by using two canes and dragging his feet. He was convicted of selling liquor, on the testimony of two spotters, who were paid for trapping him. Later one of these men was jailed at Norwich for intoxication.

PHYSICIAN'S CAR TAKEN, BUT WITH GOOD INTENTION

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 12.—Dr. Carlisle F. Ferrin, of Huntington street, was given a scare this afternoon, for he believed that his Nash coupe had been stolen. While he was at Lawrence-Memorial hospital attending to patients, he discovered the machine missing. While the police were scouring the city and its outskirts, the car was returned to the institution by one of the nurses. It developed that the nurse had requested permission of Dr. Charles Kaufman to use the physician's car to go to the southern part of the city to procure some flowers. Dr. Kaufman who also drives a Nash coupe, granted the request and instead of taking the car of Dr. Kaufman the nurse mistook Dr. Ferrin's machine for the Kaufman car and drove away. The doors of the structure had been opened and it is believed the crook was about to drive out one of the automobiles when Watchman Bell made the discovery of the light being out.

William Coman, or Alexander Sucthoff, the latter his real name, will have time to consider his mistake in leaving the superior court at Norwich in September, 1922, without permitting the court to pass upon his guilt or innocence, when he was accused of stealing from a railroad car. Breed

People who are interested in the technical advance of motion pictures will marvel at the true-color photography in Monte Carlo, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy coming to the Breed theater on Sunday. An entire fashion show is shown in actual tints and to those who remember the first color pictures of several years ago, the effect will be astounding. For motion picture color photography is now so nearly perfect a process that its achievements bear little resemblance to the jumpy and flashy results of the earlier color-film process. So faithfully and beautifully are colors now reproduced on the screen that color photography is being more and more frequently used in scenes of spectacular appeal.

Exceptionally fascinating costumes are worn in the fashion show in Monte Carlo, and their loveliness on the screen is considerably enhanced by the use of the color process.

Lew Cody, Gertrude Olmsted, Karl Dane, and Roy D'Arcy are featured in Monte Carlo, which has been directed by Christy Cabanne from the original story by Carey Wilson.

Delco-Light

DAYTON, Ohio, May 12—That the buying power of the American farmer is increasing is evidenced by the fact that sales of Delco-Light farm light and power plants show a forty per cent increase for the first four months of 1926 over the same months of the preceding year.

Easement of outstanding obligations, more confidence in the future of agriculture, excellent crop prospects together with lower prices and an improved model that is automatic in operation are primarily responsible for the increase, according to E. G. Biechler, president and general manager of the Delco-Light company.

That this increase in buying power is not confined to any one section is indicated by reports received from nearly one hundred district conventions held during the past two weeks. Reports from these conventions, held in all parts of the United States make it evident that this improved condition is general in its scope, according to Mr. Biechler.

Foreign sales of the company are also growing rapidly. On April 15 they had equalled the entire foreign sales of the company for 1925. One-seventh of the entire output of light and power plants is now shipped abroad. A Delco-Light plant supplies light and power for the hotel built at King Tutank-ha-men's tomb. Another plant has been installed in the Mosque of Omar at Jerusalem.
